Petoskey Democrat: Manistee acknowledges that the loss of the water dam, factory will make a big hole in the monthly pay roll of the place, but says she isn't going to cry over spilled milk and that it won't affect the timber market anyway.

Bellaire has a clever young man. He saved his dimes and bought a gold watch and chain and hung it on the Christmas tree in a dove ve dressed to himself. He let all believe the young lady in question keeping company with presented it to him, but the lady could not carry out the lie as well as he.

Mineralwaters Herald: David Wilt, of Detroit, was in town Monday. Mr. Wilt will move his crew of six men to Virginia in April, to build about 3 miles of railroad there and return here in the fall to resume operations on his road here. We are waiting patiently and hope in the next ten years to hear the whistle of the locomotive coming in on his road.

Mancelona Herald: Mr. P. Mulvihill, of Manistee, formerly of this city, was here again this week and in conversation with a Herald reporter told about taking a trip through Northern Wisconsin and finding the farmers there in a terrible condition compared to what they are in Michigan. Mr. Mulvihill is very observant and inquisitive and ascertained that the farmers there are getting 75 per cent less for their produce than the farmers are getting here.

Petoskey Record: A couple of weeks ago Mr. D. R. Trip who has been badly crippled with sciatica, and whose right leg was stiffened and made useless by the contraction of the sciatic nerve, submitted to an operation by Dr. Oren, and had the nerve drawn out from its place along the thigh bone and thoroughly stretched. He is around again this week, and although the nerve is still sore, the six inch slash on his thigh has healed, and Don stops his friends on the street to show them how he can wiggle his toes now.

Local society in Traverse City is on the verge of a volcano. Charlie Stuart, a bright lay of 19, has secretly contracted a matrimonial alliance with a mere child, a girl under 14 years old. Charlie belongs to a leading family. The marriage occurred several months ago, and was solemnized by a country justice of the peace in the presence of two of Elsiphorus. Only the five persons mentioned were in the secret, but it leak ed out. The boys father was the firs to be informed. He was wildly angry, but accepted the situation without discussing the son. Since that time every effort has been made to dissolve the matrimonial alliance without a scandal. The bride has been offered money and everything else she could want if she would only consent to a quiet divorce. The girls identity is not revealed, but she is said to be the child of most but respectable parents.

She Consented.

—Will you be mine?"

—Can you afford to dress me well if I marry you?"

—It depends upon what you consider being dressed well. If you mean Worth dresses from Paris I can't afford them; for do you need them."

—I don't?"

—No. Your beauty needs no adornment, and it will always eclipse any dress you wear no matter how fine or how expensive it may be. No one ever looks at you save your dress. The beauty of line and perfection of figure only are noted. All fancy sticks out ungracefully beside them. What satin is there like your skin? What silk like your hair? What velvet to compare with your lips, cheeks and eyes?"

A Great Tobacco Year.

The Grand Rapids Gazette says that last year in Grand Rapids was the greatest tobacco year on record. The gross revenue from this source amounted to 29,717,000, or $2,000,000 in excess of the previous year. Thus the commissioner attributes to the improved wages of the working class, for it is also worth noting that the revenue has gained not just by the reduction of the duty. The consumption of rum, on the other hand, has continued to increase in spite of the extra six pence a gallon imposed last year—a fact which marks it out as a fit subject for another sixpence next year. But the alcoholic tendency of these times has not been confined to spirits; it has asserted itself in wine also—where the commissioners, who gauge manufactured by the wine and spirit test, infer that the upper strata also have enjoyed better pay. Tea, coffee and cocoa suggest similar reflections. Indeed, a large part of the report is a writing of contemporary history by the bibulous method.

The oldest cure for snake a poisonous bite is that advocated by Sebastian Kneipp, a Bavarian priest. It is to walk barefoot and bareheaded in wet grass, on wet stones, in fresh fallen snow or in cold water. Kneipp has been in practice, he says, thirty years with this curative method. He is said to have cured thousands of patients by it. His little village is overrunn ed with sufferers coming for help in their various afflictions. People of all classes seem to have fal n in the man, and even Baron Noll-and Rothschild (taking with him a cook, a secretary and two servants), has gone through the necessary ordeal, sleeping in his own private sidewalk for a night meanwhile, at a railway station four miles off. Kneipp claims that water will cure every curable disease.

ODDS AGAINST ALLIGATOR.
Gets Worse Than Being Dead He Went up Alive It.
When I lived in Texas it was in Atascosa county, about forty or fifty miles southwest of San Antonio de Bexar, on a ranch where I was engaged in cattle raising. One morning some seven or eight of the nearest neighbors, representing as many families, whose ranches were located along the same little stream, the Atascosa, the English of which is "Muddy," met at the ranch of Mr. James French, who lived at the upper end of the settlement near a small lake, or rather large water-hole in the bed of said stream, says a writer in the Philadelphia Times. This was not a running stream all the year round, but was formed of small lakes a few miles or less apart, and the water only ran from lake to lake during about three or four months of the late fall and winter seasons.
At the time that I write there was no water in the creek except in these lakes, which was the home of the beautiful and artistic alligator.
We had all brought our rifles with us, hoping again to meet here for the purpose of going some twenty miles out west to drive away or kill some mustang horses that had made their appearance near the settlements among the tame herds, to being very dangerous to have the wild mustangs among them, as they frequently injured the tame geldings, killing some of them, and often entering the whole herd with them into their caves.
While we were lounging on the front veranda chatting, one the events of the past two days, the prospects of crops, and a million woman who had been down to the lake near the house engaged in the family washing came rushing toward the house, screaming "Alligator! alligator!" at the top of her voice. The alarm and frightened appearance of the negress attracted the attention of the boys and Jim Durand, one of the party, snatched up his rifle and started for the lake, the rest of the party following always on Gus was an unerring shot, and we knew he could shoot head on the jackass opposite, in advance of it. We kept up as fast as enough to flush the game, and give Gus a chance to take every advantage of position, but we had got sufficiently close to see the head and shoulders of the reptile out on the bank, the other half of his body still hanging in the water. At the crack of the gun the alligator slid back into the lake and sank in about ten feet deep of water, of course we could not tell whether Gus's shot had hit him or not, whereupon some of our boys began to jump him and offered to bet that he hadn't even grazed the hide. Now Gus is of the utmost confidence in his acknowledged marksmanship and was ready at all times to back his judgment whenever, to the surprise of us all, he would, receive the challenge and proceed to bet as any man's $10 that he has killed one alligator. The wager was settled and Gus deliberately stripped his clothing and plunged into the water.
It appeared afterward that the alligator was not instantly killed, but by the merest accident Gus had struck it land right on the alligator's back, just as the reptile was in the last throes of the death agency and had caused it to the surface, and in a very few minutes landed him safely on shore, going through his last shiver in the death struggle in a few feet of the water. It is stated by those who claim experience in the habits of the alligator that they always come to land to die, and perhaps this accounts partly for Gus' good luck in getting out alive as we all agreed that it was the most foolhardy trick we ever knew Gus Durand to be guilty of.
Gus only replied to our remonstrances was: "I knowed dagged will I'd get his eye," as he coolly pocketed the golden eagle.

—Rehearsals of Pinafore will begin next week, and it promises to be the most attractive musical entertainment ever given in Charlevoix.

The Charlevoix Mastodon Minstrels, with an orchestra and fifteen performers, at Lewis Grand Opera House Friday evening of this week.

—The New Ferguson House, since it has been closed, has been repainted and refitted throughout, and will reopen Monday next, under the same popular management.

—The Charlevoix Mastodon Minstrels will visit Boyne City and East Jordan about the 10th and 12th of next month. They will also be in Norwood next Tuesday evening.

—C. L. Clough, of Buffalo, who has represented the Taylor & Crane leather company here for several years, was in town last week. He was recently married to a lady in Ohio.

—There are not less than a dozen fish houses on Round Lake, and their occupants are down from daylight to dark each striving to get the largest string of fish. The catch is mostly herring.

—Supt. S. E. Watson, of the Bell Telephone Co., was in town Friday. Mr. Watson has resigned his position with the Telephone Co., to take effect Feb. 1st, and goes to Chicago to accept a position.

—Engineer Dodgeon, of the C. & W. M. corps, who has been in camp at Twenty-Six Lake, thus far during the work, has removed his family here for the remainder of the winter. They are quartered with Dr. Bartlett.

—The Eastern Star leap year party at Lewis Grand Opera House last Friday evening, was an unparalleled success, in every regard. The attendance was large, and the enjoyment unrestrained. A delegation was down from East Jordan.

—Both papers were in error two weeks ago, in announcing the death of Prof. Enos' mother. She died Saturday morning last. Prof. Enos had returned home from her bedside, but left Sunday again in response to a telegram announcing her death.

—The Democrat says that Comstoc & Son have sold their property at the foot of Pine Lake to the railroad company. Probably the latter thought a big fish plant was not a desirable industry to be located alongside a $50,000 resort hotel. But Comstocks have not abandoned their Charlevoix projects. It will simply be a change of location.

—Notice the change in O. E. Wilbur & Co's ad for bargains.

Calkins & Warne have a change in their space this week. Read it.

—A son of Eugene Cross, aged 12, died last Monday morning, the funeral occurring Tuesday.

—Mr and Mrs. Wellman arrived at Wales, Mass., their future home, Friday evening.

—Capt. Lendoff Rubold, who sail ed the Lottie Cooper last season, has purchased the schooner R. P. Mason of Chicago.

—It is said that the East Jordan young people who attended the leap year party here Friday night, had quite an experience, with the storm and snow drifts. From the impressions made in them we should judge they had too.

COMMUNICATED.

MR. EDITOR: If the discussion of the water-works question is not closed, I would like to say a word on it even at this late hour. First, I would say that to me individually, it will make no difference however the question is settled, as I am one of those that were once said to be blessed, my water not appearing on the tax lists. However that may be, a man can have a desire for the welfare of his village unprompted by selfishness. Believing it to be for the best interest of Charlevoix to go slow in the matter of issuing bonds for improvements that are not really needed, I would suggest that the question be laid on the table to be called up at some future time if circumstances should demand it. It is a well-known fact that the individual or corporation carrying a heavy load of interest-bearing obligations are not among the most prosperous.

Why should we at this time go in debt for a costly water-works plant? Because, says Mr. A., our wells have become contaminated and the water we have to drink is becoming the sure source of disease. Now who has tested the water and found it thus poisonous? The same Cry was raised some eight years ago and was the occasion of a very able lecture before the Liberal Club on what we eat and drink. When he reached that part of his lecture that treated of the water we had to drink, he was going to prove by test that the water from the wells of Charlevoix was unfit for use. He applied his test and was astonished, not at the impurities of the water, but at the absence of it. I believe it would be so should a test be made now. The fact that some of our citizens have built their vaults in close proximity to their wells is no proof that the water in these wells are contaminated, but it is proof of the men's bad taste.

The fact that most of our wells are three wells, and driven through three or four stratus of marl, through which surface water cannot penetrate—except what little might find its way down by the side of the pipes—is proof that the process of examination must be very slow. Are proof that the surface water does not find its way down very deep is the fact of so many good cellars from which door ways drains and in which are near any unusual dampness. Another reason why I believe that the water in our wells are comparatively pure is the fact of the land on which our village is built being of very recent formation and consequently at the water depth is underlaid with a bed of shingle and coarse gravel through which water passes with but little obstruction, consequently the water in our wells is but the water of Lake Michigan and fine Lake.

This is demonstrated by the fact of the water rushing up the river when there has been a southwest blow making high water in the river and Round Lake and at the same time high water in our wells. When the south wind is over the waters is from the other direction. This current is not through the rivers alone but assert itself with nearly equal velocity through the shingle and loose gravel at the bottom of our wells. In that case sound there be a little impurity that had found its way down by the pipe of some of our wells will it remain in that particular place or will it be carried along by the rush of the water from the lake. The latter I think will be the case, and it will be lost in the pure current.

But, says B, though the water in our wells be ever so pure we need such a plant for protection against fire? If we had no such protection then it might be well to consider the matter favorably. From the evidence I think that our protection against fire is about as adequate as it would be if we had such a plant. I find the following in the Democrat of last week. "The most destructive fire Ashtabula has ever suffered started in the dry goods store of D. Rosenthal & Co., Friday evening, and was not gotten under control until nineteen buildings were burned. All the hydrants within two blocks of where the fire started were found to be frozen up; a delay of half an hour was experienced in getting the first water on and then the water works pump refused to work satisfactorily, and only two small streams could be thrown." Thus showing that even such plants fail at times to work, leaving the town exposed to the flames and water famine. Therefore I would suggest to those having the matter in charge to go slow, canvass the ground carefully, remembering that it would be neither just nor generous to burden either the present or future taxpayers with a burden that might have been safely avoided.

ROBERT MELLER.

ROYAL RANGER RALPH;

OR,

The Waif of the Western Prairies.

BY WELDON J. COBB.

Dazed and his senses disappeared through the apertur in the wall. The two guards recognizing the secret as an enemy, began firing at him.

The latter sprang behind the boulder that had fallen into the cleft from the cave, and which Ralph Ranger had freed and so entering the place. It afforded a strong, intrenched for him, and he had his enemies at a decided disadvantage.

A sharp fusillade became, during which one of the men, slightly wounded, retreated down the corridor with a savage howl of pain. His companion followed his example and hear a hasty retreat Ranger Ralph could hear them calling for help to their comrades in the main cave by-and-by.

They had succeeded the alarm and will soon be upon him.

He watched at his cleft for some time, and hoping to win a well concealed ambush in the corridor.

Ranger Ralph knew that the Indians would be on him in a few minutes, and he determined to make a desperate effort to escape.

He crept out of his cleft, and stole to the entrance of the cave.

Peering from the cave, Ranger Ralph saw that the Indians had formed a circle around the cave, and that the Indians were in pursuit of the fugitives.

He watched at his cleft for some time, and hoping to win a well concealed ambush in the corridor

COLORED EYE-GLASSES.

Why They Are Used and How They Injure the Sight.

The ordinary white glass is made of clarity and freedom of color which limits him to be dealed, says Chambers's Journal. But a greater degree of harmless might be imparted to it, artificially if intended for eye-glasses mounted in a frame. Smoke colorless glass, however, a colored raw amethyst tints, entirely intended for the protection of weak eyes. Formerly glass was much used for protective spectacles and Arctic travelers have been very fond of them. But green glass extinguishes violet, red and green blue rays, and causes objects to appear in dirty colors.

Spectacles of blue glass, colored with cobalt, are therefore to be preferred. Adams is reported to be the first to recommend the use of blue glass but they were at first more widespread in Germany, chiefly through the recommendation of the great oculist Graefe of Berlin and others. The blue color of glass is chiefly to be recommended because it absorbs those rays in their passage which belong to the yellow and orange portion of the spectrum, in which the greatest brightness and greatest heat are concentrated, and the eyes, especially weak ones, greatly protected by blue color, while rays which such eyes are able to use obtain access. The material for blue glasses, which has to be made spare in various shades to suit individual eyes, is somewhat less hard than that employed formerly for green spectacles and is also inferior in hardness to white glass, but has gained in durability compared with coarser descriptions of glass.

Still greater is the progress recorded in the uniformity and hardness of "smoked" glass, also used for protecting the eyesight. The kind of glass, which is colored gray or mauve-colored by the addition of manganese, formerly suffered from two great defaults by the addition of a large quantity of lead; but the best manufactures now made are nearly equal to white glass in point of hardness. The object of smoked glass is to reduce the glare of light without segregating colors.

Spectacles are also made of intensely yellow, but the use of this glass is almost exclusively confined to glasses employed for firing purposes. Yellow glass extinguishes completely all other colors and this is still suitable in cases where distinctiveness of objects aimed at is of prime importance.

The Rules of the Company and Conference of the Conductor.

"You see," said the freight conductor after we had been talking a bit, "there are plenty of occasions when I would like to be tender-hearted, but the rules of the road are very strict. We are ordered to look the train over at every stop, and to summarily bounce every one trying to steal a ride. It is expected and understood that we look for tramps, but there is never a train comes through without two or three poor devils on the bumpers. If there are not too many, and they don't show themselves too boldly, we don't see them as we pass along. It isn't anything out of the company's pocket, and in some cases a change of location may give a tramp a start to do better."

"That's true, but what I was going to ask you about was the boy who got killed by your train a few weeks ago."

"It hurts me to think of it. We'd stopped at a water tank, and there must have been a dozen tramps in waiting to get on. This boy was among 'em. He wasn't over 15 years old and pretty near ragged. When we drove the men off he came back with tears in his eyes and begged me to let him ride into Chicago. He'd been tramping—a runaway boy—but was going home. There were too many of them, and I ordered them off. This boy was one of three or four who made a break to catch on as the train started, and he missed his hold and went under the wheels. His screams was something awful to hear as we lifted him up and carried him to the caboose. Both legs had been crushed under a wheel and he lasted ten minutes to live when we pulled him up."

"Was he conscious?"

"Perfectly so. The pain was too great to be felt, but he knew that he was dying. We did all we could, and I was little enough. He never said a word after we picked him up. It didn't need words of reproach, however, to cut me to the heart. He looked at me in a way which plainly said I had refused to give him a show, and that my nearness had brought about the awful accident. I was so broken up I couldn't stay in the car to see him die."

"And what did you do with the body?"

"Carried it into Chicago, and who do you think was the first man to see it? The boy's own father, who was a switchman in the yards! He didn't say a word in reply when I told him how it came about, but I know his thoughts. If he could live a thousand years he'd never forgive me. He'd always look upon me as the murderer of his poor boy."

"But of course you are not."

"Technically, no; morally—"

And he flung away his cigar, buttoned up his overcoat, and went away without another word.—Detroit Free Press.

Recruits for the German Army.

During the year 1896, 162,396 men were recruited for the German army. Out of these 5,916 were not permitted to enter, as they were in excess of the number provided for by the army budget. The volunteers numbered 12,666, making the total 190,562, of whom 6,121 are destined for the fleet.

A Reasonable Request.

"I have one request to make," said the pretty type-writer, when she had accepted her employer's proposal of marriage. "Name it, my love." "Let me select my successor at the desk."—New York Sun.

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.
WILLARD A. SMITH, Publisher,
CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN

GAVE ROGUS INSURANCE

A SLICK CHICAGO SWINDLER IN MISSOURI.

A Double Murder in the Nation—The Ferryman Confessed—This Crime Was Discharged Too Soon—A Sophisticated Man—Nine Orphans.

Lexington (Mo.) Jeffersonian.

A WARRANT was issued in St. Joseph, Mo., for the arrest of L. G. Wyman, a life insurance agent, on the charge of swindling Andrew County farmers out of insurance money. Mr. Wilson was indicted by the Grand Jury at the last term of the Andrew County court, at which time several of his victims made affidavit that he had represented himself as being an agent of the Home Insurance Company of Chicago, and had written scores of policies for them and collected the money for the same, and telling the farmers that their policies would be sent to them anon. In the absence of a quorum of the farmer personal agents, he had no chance to deliver the policies, and did a bonafide business until one of the farmers, becoming suspicious at the non-arrival of his policy, wrote to the office at Chicago and received a reply to the effect that there was no such man in the company of the Home Company.

Brutal Murder in the Nation.

The brutal assassination of two men near Willington, Cheyenne Nation, was declared by the grand of George L. Crosby and Jack McKinney, aged 70. Three men traveling in a wagon were seen going into camp near Willington. The next day two shots were heard in the bottom of the Washita River, and the men, with their camp, were found horribly mutilated. Two men were seen to follow the men and lounge with a rifle to load the wagon and team on the streets of South Bend, Alister counties.

Shot on a Discharged Prisoner.

AT Anna, Tex., the 19 Illinois Superintendent of the State Insane Asylum, was shot and almost instantly killed by Henry Purdell, who had recently been discharged from the institution. He had been under treatment for lunacy and was discharged, the superintendent being that he had been cured. Purdell was shot down on sight of the doctor without a word of warning.

Set Accused—South Dakota.

NEAR Mill Creek, Okla., Mr. and Mrs. John Brazelle were found dead in bed, having been murdered in a manner that escaped from the room. White body was found in the room, and they have also murdered their children, some of whom are also shot from the effects of the gas.

Destroying the Old Gun Gas.

At Philadelphia, Pa., the work of destroying the guns used for making coke during 1891 was begun at the Union States Mint. The dies are destroyed at the rate of 1,000 per day in compliance with an act of congress that provides for the destruction, in order to prevent them being used during the succeeding year.

Newest Gas Found in South Dakota.

NATURAL gas has been struck on the farm of R. B. Coddington, three and one-half miles north of Dell Rapids, and has issued at the depth of 2,000 feet. The gas is used for fuel, for lighting and heating purposes, and the oil is thrown up and pumped, after settling from water wells from the vicinity.

A WARRANT was issued in St. Joseph, Mo., for the arrest of L. G. Wyman, a life insurance agent, on the charge of swindling Andrew County farmers out of insurance money. Mr. Wilson was indicted by the Grand Jury at the last term of the Andrew County court, at which time several of his victims made affidavit that he had represented himself as being an agent of the Home Insurance Company of Chicago, and had written scores of policies for them and collecting the money for the same, and telling the farmers that their policies would be sent to them anon. In the absence of a quorum of the farmer personal agents, he had no chance to deliver the policies, and did a bonafide business until one of the farmers, becoming suspicious at the non-arrival of his policy, wrote to the office at Chicago and received a reply to the effect that there was no such man in the company of the Home Company.

The brutal assassination of two men near Willington, Cheyenne Nation, was declared by the grand of George L. Crosby and Jack McKinney, aged 70. Three men traveling in a wagon were seen going into camp near Willington. The next day two shots were heard in the bottom of the Washita River, and the men, with their camp, were found horribly mutilated. Two men were seen to follow the men and lounge with a rifle to load the wagon and team on the streets of South Bend, Alister counties.

AT Anna, Tex., the 19 Illinois Superintendent of the State Insane Asylum, was shot and almost instantly killed by Henry Purdell, who had recently been discharged from the institution. He had been under treatment for lunacy and was discharged, the superintendent being that he had been cured. Purdell was shot down on sight of the doctor without a word of warning.

Set Accused—South Dakota.

NEAR Mill Creek, Okla., Mr. and Mrs. John Brazelle were found dead in bed, having been murdered in a manner that escaped from the room. White body was found in the room. They have also murdered their children, some of whom are also shot from the effects of the gas.

The Bellaire Breeze says that one-half the citizens are sick with grippe, and the other half are busy taking care of them; and that the steel rails on the C. & W. M. were laid into the village on Saturday night.

A most remarkable phenomenon was witnessed at Traverse City one night last week. At a few minutes before 8 o'clock the bells at the waterworks and the electric light plant gave out simultaneously. The men at the plants concluded that the fish take pipes from the bay had been stocked by floating ice. They went to the bay to investigate and found the bottom of the bay entirely bare for fully 100 feet from the usual shore line. The water had fallen fully seven feet. Boats of all kinds, steam and sail, were grounded. Docks were high and dry upon the beach, and men are cottages that had up to now before had their steps lapped by the waters of the bay were now seven feet right rode from the water line. For fully an hour the city was in total darkness and many assembled at the beach and upon the docks to view the curious phenomenon. Then with a mighty rush the waters came back to their natural place with the force of tidal waves. The waves tumbled over each other as though lashed by a mighty wind, and their tops threw clouds of spray many feet into the air. Boats were washed from their moorings and cast many feet upon the beach; docks piles were loosened and came tumbling into shore with the rushing waters, and the doors and windows of many of the cottages were smashed in. The damage was considerable, especially to shipping. Once before this fall that water in the bay fell five and one-half feet in two days, but this sudden fall discounts any recent bay by the oldest inhabitants. As no strong breeze was blowing from off shore the mystery remains the more inexplicable. Some express the belief that the curious phenomenon was due to seismic influences, yet in this latitude such disturbances are scarcely known, and other shore cities would certainly have noted a like fall of the water if this had been the cause.

Petoskey Record: The steam yacht "Beulah," owned by Mr. A. M. Daggett, was brought down from Crooked Lake last week and taken to the boat house of J. W. Cook & Son, for a thorough overhauling. She will be placed on Bear Lake in the spring.

When the last pine has fallen beneath the ax of the imported Canadian chopper there will still be wealth in Michigan forests. The Oval Dish Company, of Mancelona, is paying $6 per thousand for maple, basswood, and birch logs and $5 for beech and elm. Only a few years since this timber was piled up and burned to get it out of the way.

A big balance weight on the transfer dock at St. Ignace parted and a 12 year old boy standing near it was thrown into the lake. Dock hands thought the boy was drowned, but when they started to search for his body he was found sitting on a plank under the dock, blowing on his fingers and whacking his feet together to keep warm.

Judge Severens of the United Court has announced orally in favor of the Wisconsiner Institution for Savings, as against the City of Cadillac, in the Ashley bonds case, recently submitted to him. This decision means that the city will have to pay the full amount of the bonds given to James Ashley, Jr. as an inducement to secure the building of the T. & A. railroad to Cadillac.

Boyne Citizen: Dr. Sanderson is very low with that insidious disease, consumption. It will be remembered that some three years ago the Dr. sought the sunny climate of Arizona with the hope of eluding the disease which was then beginning to make itself itself. But this hope is vain, and two years ago he returned to spend the remainder of his life among old friends ans familiar scenes.

Cadillac News: Representatives of several hardwood manufacturing firms have been in Cadillac during the past few days, looking for favorable locations for the continuance of their business, the hardwood having become exhausted where they are now operating. All these manufacturing concerns will find satisfactory locations somewhere in Northern Michigan, if not within the limits of our city.

A lo..motive and caboose on the C. & W. M. ran over two Indians at Acme early Monday morning, cutting the head of one completely off and taking the top of the head off the other, and breaking his leg. Three bottles of whisky were found in the pockets of one and four in the hands of the other. Their names are Mitchell Blackman and Long John. Both have been quite prominent men among the Indians.

It is a pretty difficult matter for the free traders to keep up their criticism of the McKinley act, and at the same time explain away the benefits that have already followed as a passage. Without the advantages of that act American pork would doubtless be excluded from nearly all the European markets. American breadstuffs would have been driven out of the West India markets by discriminating tariffs. Brazil would sell to us nearly all her chief products, and at the same time buying in Europe with the money we pay her what she needs for her own people. And so it would be with other nations.

Six thousand acres of Indian lands at Mt. Pleasant will soon pass into the hands of the pale-face. The work is being done rapidly and in a few more years Poor Lo will have completed the deal by which he began long ago to sell his birthright for a mess of fire-water.

The maxim that that there never was a good war nor a bad peace, is not specially applicable to our present relations with that impudent and insignificant republic that tweaks our noses and asks us what we are going to do about it? That would be a good war which should give this toy-stirring people to understand that the Government of the United States is able and willing to protect its citizens from being slaughtered by a mob of cut-throats. It is a bad peace which compromises those insults and encourages their continuance. It would therefore be no mark of national dignity or symbol of patriotism that would induce the powers that be to forget and forgive the offenses perpetrated upon our citizens that any other government under Heaven would have resented to the wiping them out with bloodshed and carnage. It is a pity too, that our navy could not at once have been brought into requisition to exercise its prowess upon a country so well deserving a sound thrashing. The manly and resolute stand of the administration has had the effect of suddenly bringing Chili to her senses.

The free traders' explanation of the remarkable change in our foreign trade relations is novel as well as amusing. It is the result, says our esteemed contemporary, the Philadelphia Record, of a tremendous reaction against high tariff! France has just raised her tariff from 25 to 50 per cent. Higher than it was before. This the Record says is a reaction against high tariff! The German Reichstag voted down by a large majority a proposition to reduce the tariff. Another reaction! New South Wales, the only self-governing colony in British Empire which adhered to free trade, has just repealed it, and adopted a protective tariff. Another reaction!

—The ladies society of the Congregational church, will give a social at the church next Wednesday evening.

—Connable & Sons, the fish merchants, have contracted for the entire next season's catch of Gedeon and O'Neill.

—Married, at the residence of Mr. Engleton, Saturday last, by Rev. M. E. Hayne, Mr. Joseph Smith to Miss Margie Olney.

—The Hoke & Carmichael sawmill at Bay Springs was totally destroyed by fire Saturday afternoon. It will be rebuilt.

—We have it from reliable authority that train service will be put on the Charlevoix Petoskey end of the road as soon in the spring as possible.

—L. E. Smith, 2d engineer of the fire department, has leased his house on the north side to John Williams, and taken up quarters at the town hall.

—The last stone was laid on the north abutment pier of the railroad bridge Monday. Pile-driving for the center pier will be commenced at once.

—Walter Alley, adopted son of Contractor Newville, of the C. & W. M. extension, died at Ellsworth, Jan. 29, after ten days illness of the grip. He was aged 22 years and unmarried.

—R. A. Posey received a telegram Monday from Manistee, that his father was very low. He left at once for that place. His wife and Mrs. Ida Emrey accompanied him.

—The Detroit Tribune of Monday makes the announcement, which is not denied by a prominent railroad official interviewed, that the C. & W. M. and D. L. & N. railroads have been sold to the Lake Shore company.

—The advice of all physicians is that persons who are convalescing from the grip should be very careful not to take cold. The relapse of nine cases out of ten, is more dangerous than the first attack.

—A private letter from A. E. Hayes, formerly of Advance and East Jordan, and who was well known over the county, states that he is located at Fruita, Col. and highly pleased with the country and its prospects.

—Boyne Falls News: Very much to the surprise of the public some of the criminal cases that have been waiting trial at this term of the circuit court have by motion of prosecuting attorney Burnham, been dismissed. This action would seem to place a premium on lawlessness.

—That the judge of this circuit should be driven to the extreme measure recorded in the proceedings of the last term of court for this county, is an unpleasant thing to contemplate. That there is a community in Charlevoix county where the right arm of the law is nerveless, and the hand of justice paralyzed; where hoodlums are supreme and decency held in subjection to lawlessness, is a sad commentary on civilization. Mr. Ramsdell's pronouncisamento has in it the fire of indignation, and if it serves to restore decency and respect for law, it will entitle the Judge to the gratitude of all good people.

—James McGeough of Norwood has leased his farm and saw mill to Geo. D. Hunter, who will operate it until a purchaser is found, and will go to Illinois. Moore & Nettleton have the handling of the property, and advertise it for sale in their change of ad this week.

—Messrs. Horns & Cameron, of this place, have been awarded the contract for the construction of the Charlevoix freight depot. The structure will be 24x80, with a six foot platform on the track side, and a 16 foot platform on the other three sides. It is probable that the building will be used for the passenger depot for a short time in the spring, for service on the Petoskey end.

—The Democrat was in error in stating that Connable & Sons had sold their property at the foot of Pine lake to the railroad. We are informed by both Mr. Connable and a railroad official that not only is it not true, but that no proposition has been made. Mr. Connable also states that the property cannot be purchased, and their plans concerning the Charlevoix plant have not been changed.

—Mr. Ralph Connable is in receipt of a letter from Congressman Wedduck, stating that his bill reducing the tariff on linen gilling twine is now in the hands of the Ways and Means committee, with a likelihood of passing the house. The bill reduces the tariff from 60 to 25 per cent. The bill will probably be soon reported back, and fishermen should move on that congressman in the matter, and move it soon.

—The editor of this paper was absent from town on the occasion of the entertainment of the Charlevoix Minstrels. The audience was large and enthusiastic. The general verdict is that the show was an unusually fine success. There were features of excellence, notably the dancing of Wood, Guard and Hogan. The faces were well rendered, and other specialties met with appreciative comment. The show at East Jordan the 19th and at Boyne City on the 11th.

—The water-works question bobs up again in both papers, in the shape of correspondence. Letters dealing chiefly with the question of purity of the water. While we concede to Mr. Miller the right to express his opinions, regardless of his property possessions, we are sorry to see him dip in the face of scientific fact. If the investigation of scientific men does not suffice to prove that surface impurities pollute our water, our own past experience should. It is "a condition that confronts us, not a theory." While we are talking about the "water tight" qualities of earth strata, we know that germs of disease exist. While, perhaps, 50 per cent of our wells may be pure, the other 50 per cent, may contain distilled death, and we believe they do. That a percentage of the sickness among our people, and the offal of their household, reaches their water-supply, there is not a shadow of doubt. While we grant that the question of germ-loaded tubercle disease is a serious one, and one to be avoided if possible, the question of dollars and cents is dwarfed by the higher consideration of public health, to say nothing of the safety of property. This fact of disease in well-water has been so often proven that there is longer room for argument. We have already been grievously smitten; shall we further court the angel of death by continued indifference. Shall we place the value of a few paltry dollars above the lives of our loved ones? Which is the desideratum?

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the Sentinel:

I have had the temerity to say a word in opposition to the opinions of the majority, for which I have been taken seriously to task by Mr. Pure Water and lashed for my pains. In the course of his very able article, he takes up more room in a repetition of my name than he does in refuting any of the ideas set forth. In answer to my question as to the impurity of the water in our wells, he refers in a very feeling manner to the "silence of the little grassy mounds in the village cemetery." Had he been better acquainted with the history of many of those grassy mounds he would not have introduced that argument as proof of the impurity of the water in our wells. Years ago, "ere there was a hundred inhabitants in our village, and not more than a dozen wells in the town, there were more of those little mounds raised in proportion to the inhabitants than has ever been since. The villagers then mostly drew their water supply from sparkling Bear lake. Nearly every family mourned the loss of one or two of their precious little ones. The typhoid fever soon destroyed stopped not in the village, but reached out into Marion and other towns and claimed its victims. It was the same disease that has been occasionally breaving some of the inhabitants ever since. Was it then occasioned by the impure water of our wells before they were dug? Hardly. It is no proof that our wells are impure because children have died of diphtheria. As well we might claim the same cause for grip.

At the meeting of the State Board of Health, the arguments rather went to prove that diphtheria was the result of impure air rather than impure water. The germs arising from cesspools or overflowing vaults—of which reports says we have many—and where these places are wet the germs would not live. Typhoid fever was said to be the result of excreta in the water or other substances taken into the system. Be that as it may I have always believed that the same cause invariably causes the same effect. If typhoid fever in our wells must be pure the greater part of the time, as only occasionally occurs a case of either. Then my theory of the under currents purifying the wells may be true. He tries to make me agree that impurities or foul matter from a distance gets under the ground and is washed hither and thither." That is an idea of his own. The contention is in regard to the surface water. If foul matter from a distance gets under the ground where will they draw their supply of pure water from? As a rule the deep springs have their sources through their pipes as through the ground. I have always supposed that water if free to seek its level. That being the case, when the water rises in Lake Michigan the current will be toward that lake. If these currents only continue long enough that the water merely reached the lake, would it not have forced the water that underlaid the village into it. Have we not good reason to believe that these currents often extend far out into the lake. I am proud to think that I am placed "fully in accord with the scientists" in the matter of under currents. They fully admit that where the water has free ingress and egress the effect must be purifying. There is a word my critic thinks overwhelming. That is slush. He forgets that the purest of water is easily reduced to slush, and on being stired a little is liable to slop over. I believe that the surface water, owing to the gradual slope of the ground, soon finds its way to the lake and but little of it finds its way into our wells. In no place do we find any evidence of this leakage of surface water. As I have said before it never even dampens our deepest cellars and no evidence or it is seen when we dig one. He says he "would fill column after column" where such works have paid their cost at one firm. Can not the same be said of the Silsby. I am not opposed to water works when the proper time comes; but I do claim that it wrong to burden the people with taxes for improvements not presently needed.

"Stop will you!" he said, in a tone of attack," said the hermit, "but what we began yet we must finish before we part."

This the savages did an hour later. Darkness had come down over the region but the hermit stood at the window, and his keen eyes were fixed on the dim moonlight.

"I understand their plans now," he said at last.

"What are they?" asked the scout.

"They are coming to attack the cliff."

"It is almost preposterous."

"Still, under the cover of the darkness they hope to reach us."

"Yes, I understand that."

"Now, one thing has prevented the success of their subterfuge."

"And that?"

"Their treachery," replied the old hermit, grimly.

As he spoke Walford stood to a corner of the cabin. He lowered some object by a cord from the window of the cabin a distance and

He lighted a match and swung the object near of the window. It proved to be a human upper bodyless trunk. Its rags, suddenly cast forth, illuminated the dark foreground.

It showed the savages to half a dozen places in the face of embankment, as to scale the cliff and reach the refuge of their enemies.

Cries of rage and dismay escaped them as the shadow of the hermit hurled their plans, both Walford and the scout began firing at them and the Modocs retreated.

The flashes of the hunters soon ceased to be seen, leaving the valley in darkness and silence.

"They seem to have abandoned the attack," said the scout, in a low tone.

"For the time being, perhaps," replied Walford; "but we shall have more trouble with them before the night is over."

"You think so?"

"I know it, from them!"

Both each peered curiously from the window in hopes of the hermit's fire parted the darkness.

"At arrow," said the scout.

"Exactly."

"Tipped with fire."

"Yes."

"They mean to burn us out."

Walford laughed grimly. "If they can!"

"Sst! There are others."

Half a dozen fire arrows were shot upward from different points of the valley. Most of them fell with a dull thud against rock. Some shot over the cabin. Some struck the cliff, and were extinguished. Others described a circle and fell to the ground. Some, however, it was evident penetrated the stone surface of the exposed floor beneath their feet. There they could not see. Well-nigh seemed unobstructed in these quarters.

"Afraid!"

"Of the fire."

"I do not believe they can fire the cabin."

"Why not?"

"Is what about that."

"The logs are certainly on fire," remarked the scout.

"Wait, when we are in danger we will retreat."

"Where?"

"To one of the rocks."

"Is there a way to leave here?"

"Yes."

"And reach the valleys?"

Walford nodded smilingly. He saw he be satisfied from the wind, so that a faint glow showed beneath the cabin.

"They're done it," he said, calmly.

"Now comes the fire."

"Yes, I know it."

"The, we had better leave here."

"Suppose we do?"

"Then let us do so."

"In a moment, Walford."

"Where are you going?"

"To see what the way is clear."

Walford left the hut on the side farthest from the mountain. Ranger Ralph remained at the window, looking down at the valley. Every moment the glare increased. Evidently the bottom of the cabin was on fire. The arrows of the Modocs had ignited the floor.

Suddenly the hermit heard the fancies crackling fiercely. The smoke began to fill the cabin, and he was ready for retreat.

Still he determined to await Walford's return, although an anxious sound started and wakened the scout.

There was a tearing, crashing noise.

The hermit turned to see what had occurred. The cave appeared to drop precipitately.

In a flash the scout realized what had happened. The floor had weakened, the joists that left the floor in place. Those who had ventured on it had fallen with the soft presumption of disaster to the scout.

He had just time to reach the door, when he was swept down with the transgressors. He reached the door leading to the open air, where he was hurled back upon the floor gave way. With a crash they went, falling to the valley below.

Triumphant shouts of dismay arose from the valley below. They expected to see the scout and the hermit dashed to pieces.

Ranger Ralph had escaped unhurt, however, and Walford was not in the cabin when the drop, or cave

In his precipitate haste he stumbled and fell. He dropped over the edge of the cliff and landed on a ledge about twenty feet below. The fall made him insensible.

When he awoke to consciousness it was broad daylight, and the valley was deserted, after several days of safety. He ventured to leave the cottage Ranger and Walford had left behind. The scout found himself alone in a park, and with nothing before him except complicated plans and a broken leg.

CHAPTER XXII.

On one exam.

One week after the occurrence of the events narrative in the last chapter, a military banquet was given from the last of a series of banquets given from the last and closed of July from a forest beyond which rushed the rushing gushing discoveries of Gold Valley.

The spot was located about one hundred miles south of Moore's Bluff, and although remote from any large business center, was possible of numerous little settlements and mining camps.

The hermitage took a rapid and phenomenon

CAPE SPARTEL LIGHTHOUSE.

There is a lighthouse that has a noteworthy history. It stands on the extreme northwest corner of Africa, and its name is the Cape Spartel lighthouse. It is a fine and solid piece of stone work and its top is reached by a winding iron staircase, says the Chicago News.

The government of Morocco thought it was very hostile treatment when it was compelled to build this lighthouse. The other governments requested Morocco to build the lighthouse as an aid to navigation, but Morocco bluntly refused. Then diplomatic pressure was brought to bear, and with the unfailing telent of the commercial nations demanding that in return Cape Spartel with a lighthouse, the sultan consented after considerable grumbling. The contract was given to a French firm and a French engineer superintended the building enterprise.

The lighthouse is noteworthy for the considerable measure in which it is supported. Ten governments contribute a fixed sum annually to keep its light burning. The agreement with Morocco was that if the sultan would build the lighthouse the other nations would attend to its maintenance. Ten of them, therefore, contribute $600 apiece, and this money pays for the service of the lighthouse keeper and his assistants and the oil and other material needed. The foreign diplomatic agents at Tangier form the board of lighthouse supervisors and the Moroccan government has nothing to do with the management.

The lighthouse is in very beautiful situation. It frouts the Atlantic ocean, and the cliff upon which it stands falls 300 feet almost perpendicularly to the water's edge. It is the favorite spot ground of the European residents of Tangier. Almost every day there are excursions to Cape Spartel, which is about eight miles from the city. The view around is strikingly beautiful. From this elevation visitors look out upon the ocean, while they can see many miles up the Spanish coast and the entire length of the strait of Gibraltar, whose beauty is probably not equaled by any similar body of water. Cape Fradigar is plainly in sight to the north. It was from that the great naval battle was fought on October 22, 1805, when Nelson defeated the French-Spanish fleet. Looking up the strait of Gibraltar visitors to the lighthouse can see the white houses of Tarifa, with its great fortress projecting into the sea. This also is a historic spot, for it was here that early in the eighth century a large body of the Arabian conquerors of Spain first landed upon European soil. Then Gibraltar itself, in all its glory, is in plain view, and the ships of all nations are seen passing to and fro through this strait. In its origin, in the method of its support, in the magnificent view which it commands and in its importance to the world of commerce Cape Spartel lighthouse is certainly one of the most notable works of the kind.

EGYPTIANS DISGUSTED.

Long Hair and Beard Were an Abomination.

In Greece, during the heroic ages men wore their hair and beards long, which so disgusted the cleanly and clean-faced Egyptians that if we are to credit Herodotus, no one of either sex of the latter nationality went, on any account like the lips of a Greek, make use of his knife, bit spit and cauldron or taste the meat of an animal which had been slaughtered by his hand.

It must not be inferred from this that the Greeks in the early days of their being were altogether barbarous but they were certainly not civilized—not so well acquainted with the arts of peace and war—as the Egyptians until long after they had made their mark in history.

The love of the beautiful was there, no doubt, but it had not yet manifested itself and raised the social character of the people.

It required the softening and humanizing influence and intercourse with more liberal nations, such as Egyptians and Phoenicians to one or the other of whom they are indebted for much that they possessed.

It would seem that in the matter of personal adornment, they derived the knowledge from the Egyptians and that they improved upon those begin-nings in their own sense of the fitness of things developed into a passion for the beautiful. The arrangement of the hair they and their women carried eventually to the highest point of artistic excellence.—Gentleman's Magazine.

Fortune's Wheel.

Louis Prang, the famous chromo-lithographer, was a Prussian exile printer at the age of eighteen, and was traveling through Europe for a Bohemian manufacturer, when the revolution of 1848 broke out. He was obliged to flee to Switzerland, and then came to New York in 1850. He did so poorly in one business that he sold out all his rights after a year's hard work for $50, but with that $50 he got together the capital which in after years enabled him to start a little lithographing shop. It was an illness that caused him to relinquish his trade of wood engraving and started him in the line that brought him fame and fortune.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Sage Brush Humor.

Traveling through the sage-brush country a jackass and a rabbit, who exclaimed in great astonishment:

"Good heavens! how did you grow so big? You are donkeiuse the largest rabbit living."

"No," said the jackass, "you are the smallest donkey."—San Francisco Examiner.

Bimini and the Fountain of Youth.

Bimini was a fabulous island firmly believed in by the Indians of the Antilles, though they could give no further clew to its location than that it lay some hundreds of leagues south of Hispaniola. On this island was the famous Fountain of Youth, which had the power of restoring youth and giving perpetual health and vigor. It was the search for this fountain that led Ponce de Leon and Hernando de Soto to Florida, on the outskirts of which the island was generally supposed to be situated.

RUSSIAN CHILDREN.

Their Life in the Far Mountains in the Long, Cold Winter.

But everything is very different when the terrible Russian frost sets in, within Ivan's Kor in the St. Nicholas and hill and valley sinks beneath one great shroud of white. Very rare and dreary do those green, sunny slopes look in the winter months with a few leafless trees standing dumbly up through the drifts, and the forest cold wind howling down the passes, driving great showers of snow along with it. No more light clothing, no more bare heads there. Every one, whether a child or grandsire, is muffled in a great thick sheepskin frock reaching down to the feet, with a big collar turning up all around the face, till you can hardly see who it is.

But the little Russians are not afraid of the cold, and have amusements in winter as well as in summer. When the sun is bright, and there is no snow falling, they can go out upon the hills with their sleds—for they have sleds there, of course, and these little mountain people are quite as fond of them and as clever in managing them as any children in the world. Famous sliding do they have down these great slopes, and what rare faces do the boys by it, and wonderful appetites do they have afterwards, with them to their suppers of brown bread and kasha (buckwheat porridge mixed with butter), after the fun is over.

And in the stormy evenings, when the grim northeast wind comes howling over the wild, lonely mountains, bringing with it all the cold of the frozen wastes of Siberia, when the great trees are falling so thick and fast that no one can see an inch beyond the window, and far up among the hills you can hear at times the crash of a tree breaking down under the weight of the snow,—then in the hut the little folks to cuddle around the warm stove, and to roast chestnuts in the embers, and for the bigger girls to plait straw mats. And then their old grandmother, sitting at her spinning, on a stool in the warmest corner, with a red handkerchief round her head, wrinkled old face which looks just like an oak carving, will tell them some wonderful fairy tale or some story out of Russian history—perhaps about Ivan Vetlii, who beat the Tartars, or Peter the Great, who built St. Petersburg, or the brave men who burned their great city of Moscow to drive away Napoleon.

Sometimes the children take their turn and sing a funny little song about the "white goose," as they call the snowflakes:

Daddy, daddy Winter,
Let your white geese fly
Send the wind to drive them
All across the sky.

Bend the bussing pine trees,
Make the lake and earth
Sleep around the Swalets
We don't fear a cold.

And I don't suppose they do, for in spite of these wild, cruelly cold their rough climate these little Russians are a very merry race indeed.

NOT "PIZEN."

A Freshly Filled Straw Bed and Its Startling Occupant.

A gentleman who traveled in Western America some years ago, says that he thinking he has a "sensation" when he recalls his experience in spending the night in a farm house. It was late in the summer, and the farmers were doing their threshing, while their wives were emptying their mattresses and refilling them with clean straw. Late before dark the traveler reached a comfortable-looking house, where a hearty welcome was accorded him when he asked if he might stay all night. While eating his supper he heard the farmer's wife say to her husband and son:

"The straw mattress from the spare room has will have to be filled. I emptied it to-day and forgot all about it until this minute."

When the tired guest was shown to his room he undressed hastily and climbed into bed. Every movement of his body caused the straw to rustle under him, and pretty soon he discovered that rustled even when he was lying perfectly still. He was of a nervous temperament and the sounds most disturbed him. He was only sensational. He would be still for a moment and then the straw would rustle coutly. It might be a mouse, he thought. In bed, lighted his candle, and looked at his mattress. All was quiet now.

"I expect it's nothing but gravidge, pen and scissors," he said, "I'm not going to be cheated out of my rest by some harmless insect."

He got back into bed, passed a restless night, hearing the rustling sounds frequently. The next morning he told to his host:

"I beg your pardon, but I think that a mouse or some small animal was in the straw you put into the mattress on my bed last night. I heard and felt something rustling constantly."

"We must see about it," said the man. "Hurry you pitch the mattress out on the grass and empty out the straw. Like as not some of them plaguey field-mice get into it. It was so dark we couldn't have seen it if it had been a hog."

A few minutes later Henry appeared at the open window with a black snake fully four feet long, dangling from the end of a stick.

"There you are," he said incidentally. "That's all it was. He was terrible mad and, came at me the minute I let him out. But I reckon he life out of him in no time."

"Did you suppose I was afraid that thing in my bed?" gasped the stranger, shuddering from head to foot.

"Chuck!" said the farmer. "He wouldn't hurt you some if he had bit you. Then kind of swelsen don't pizen."

A Bad Spell.

"Spell wrong," said the teacher.

"B-a-n-g," spelled the boy.

"Wrong" said the teacher, "spell it again."

"Ag-ain," spelled the boy.

"See here," said the teacher severely, "what do you mean by spelling 'wrong' again?"

"You told me to spell it again," whispered the boy. And the teacher was so mixed up she had to dismiss the class.—Detroit Free Press.

CIRCUIT COURT.

At the opening of the circuit court on Tuesday afternoon last, the Judge ordered Prosecuting Attorney Burnham to proceed with the arraignment and trial of the persons accused of crime in the county. There were seven criminal cases on the docket.

Mr. Burnham said that the criminal calendar was in a very singular and peculiar shape. That there were respondents there against whom no crime known to the law was charged; that they had been held against his consent and direct advise. On the other hand there were cases that in his opinion ought to be prosecuted vigorously, but that he could not do so for the reason that the witnesses upon whose testimony he must rely for a conviction were drunk and every time they were wanted these witnesses were in some mysterious manner made intoxicated helplessly so that they could not testify.

Mr. Burnham said that in his efforts to execute the law in this county he found himself baffled and foiled at every turn, both in the direction of shielding accused persons by care being taken that the witnesses were not forthcoming or else that if they did appear they were in such a helpless condition mentally that their testimony could not be received. On the other hand persons were accused of crime, examined before a magistrate, and against his express wishes, were held for trial till the next term of circuit court when, perhaps, their accusers would settle up matters between themselves and would not appear against him and the person would then at that late day be discharged.

Whereupon the Court said:

There appears to be a serious condition of affairs prevailing in a part of this county. I gather from statements of the Prosecuting Attorney and from statements of many respectable citizens with whom I have conversed, that the administration of justice in such that the machinery of justice is formal and cumbrous, and ineffective to secure the ends for which it was established and ordained. Instead of a system of criminal jurisprudence, which should secure the speedy punishment of the guilty, it appears that the process which is set in motion to secure such conviction, the officers of justice, that they are needed to secure convictions, frequently entrap and compel contribution from parties without the consent and over advice of the prosecuting attorney. That when the law is violated the prosecutor is called on to prosecute, and he is compelled to do so, and in the efforts to bring the guilty parties to justice. That ignorant, unscrupulous citizens are enjoined into their causes, made intoxicated and robbed of their property under the forms of justice, witnesses and other assistants are said to be without a cent for their property. That these matters have become so far that elections are so conducted under the forms of law, and those committed to the care of public system and property is made subject the good name of the county tarnished. It seems that the powers which have been given to the people to be called in for the purpose of certifying this great wrong and preventing the good name of the people of this county. And, Mr. Burnham, I would recommend you to make a thorough investigation of these matters and report to me the results of your labors, and may God speed you in the work and if it is deemed advisable—and from reports I hear of the condition of affairs I think it is—although I may be considered out of my circuit Judge to be summoned at the next term—I recommend that these matters be investigated.

Before this Grand Jury can then determine the condition of affairs. You may make this investigation, Mr. Burnham, and inform me of the result of the people so desire. I am sure you will act up to what I have said. We will be a Grand Jury because we have the authority likewise I have written and promulgated under the forms of law and.

These cases will be continued till next term of court to await the result of your inquiries.

The following cases were disposed of viz.:

The People, vs. Charles Holden, larceny. Dismissed.

The People, vs. Frank M. Coe, larceny. Contin ued.

The People, vs. Calvin Holbrook, obtaining money under false pretenses. Dismissed.

The People, vs. Calvin Holbrook; unlawfully cutting timber. Dismissed.

The People, vs. William Windling; unlawfully concealing mortgaged property. Dismissed.

Northern Michigan News.

The railroad crossing, switches and side tracks have been laid in Bellaire.

Wm. Tingle, an old resident of Charlevoix county, died in Petoskey the first of last week.

The parsonage of the Free Methodist church at Elk Rapids was destroyed by fire on Sunday.

F. P. Myers, of Boyne Falls, says he believes that he is the only man living who has suffered with la grip three weeks and gained in flesh every day.

George Cristensen of Cadillac, has imported a span of blood hounds and will send them to his Minnesota camp where they will be used on a 35 mile tote road to haul supplies to the loggers.

Boyne Falls News: A close estimate of the expense of the circuit court which is now in session at the county seat is $65 per day. At this rate a session lasting six days would cost the county $450.

Large quantities of logs are being shipped out on the new extension of the C. & W. M. between Traverse City and Elk Rapids. Wood and hardwood logs are also being hauled and piled up for shipment later.

The cold weather has caused an almost entire suspension of work on the northern extension of the C. & W. M. Tracklaying has got as far as Bellaire, and will not probably go more than three miles beyond that point.

The Herald says that V. E. Roland has sold his East R., farm, for $12,500 to James B. Flint of Cockford, Ill., and that Mr. Flint will engage extensively in raising high bred horses on the farm. It will be a fine thing for the whole country.

Bellaire Breeze: Bert Dickerson, of this village, has a cat which will climb upon the center table, unclasp a photograph album lying on the table and then turn the leaves over one at a time until he has looked it through. His catship will also go to the organ and pull the stops out, but as yet he has not been alone to play.

Thursday night last the usually quiet and peaceful village of Petoskey was the scene of one of the most cowardly and brutal crimes ever known in the history of the place. Mr. E. H. Hustrd, who lives on East Lake street, took a lantern and went out to look his barn and see that everything was all right before retiring for the night. As he stepped outside the barn he was struck with a club and knocked down. His assailants then kicked him and stamped his head and face until the flesh was beaten into almost unrecognizable shape, and the lower lobe of one of his ears was torn off. The ground were the murderous assault took place was covered with blood, and for several hours afterwards presented the appearance of a slaughter pen. After his assailants had left him stunned and bleeding upon the earth, Mr. Hustrd managed to crawl to the house on hands and knees and was assisted to bed. Mr. Hustrd lingered until Saturday evening, when death ended his sufferings. The men charged with the crime are Swedes, working on the railroad. They were arrested and are now in jail at Harbor Springs. Strong talk of lynching was indulged in both at Harbor Springs and Petoskey.

"There is no reason to doubt the honesty of the telegraphic dispatches from Traverse City regarding the tidal wave at that point," said Gen. O. M. Poe lately to a reporter for the Detroit Tribune. "Such things are not improbable, they are only uncommon. In my life I recollect two or three very notable instances of the kind. Some six years ago there was one on Lake Huron, a very sudden one, as they all are, and the old propeller Quebec was caught in it and badly damaged. The water suddenly receded and just as suddenly returned. The high wall of water fell upon the forward part of the Quebec and smashed her very badly. The one at Cleveland will be remembered by all. On the return of the water it flooded one of the elevators and drowned one of the men that was in the building. Just what the cause is is hard to determine. I think that barometrical pressure and the wind is chiefly accountable for it. Take for instance a large body of water like Lake Superior. Suppose the barometer lowers an inch at one end and rises an inch at the other, the difference in the rise and fall of the level would be very great and would cause such an oscillation as that reported from Traverse City."

W. H. Vaughan will have several thousand feet of hemlock cut at the Burgess mill, to be used for fencing the Lakeview farm.

The town board gave thirty days extension for the payment of taxes.

Tuesday the 2d of February is Candlemas day. This day is called thus on account of its being celebrated in Roman Catholic countries with processions by torchlight and the performance of mass afterwards. It commemorates the attendance of the Virgin Mary in the temple forty days after the birth of Savior. The Germans say the badger peeps out of his hole on Candlemas day, and if he finds snow he walks abroad; if he sees the sun shining he draws back again. Probably the saying that "if Candlemas be a shining day, the winter is not half finished" may have arisen from the notion of the Germans.

WAR AVERTED.

After two months of "high tension" and a united national sentiment to resent the Chilian insult with shells, Chili has awakened to the fact that she was playing the fool, and has answered President Harrison's ultimatum with an abject apology, in the matter of the Baltimore incident and the Matta note, and proposes to submit the question of indemnity to the U. S. supreme court. There is no longer any danger of war, but the incident and outcome serves to warne foreign nations, big or little, that our Uncle Sam's patience is not to be trifled with.

—Will N. Moore has a brother in the Chicago Theological Seminary who graduates in April. He has just been selected as one of the three orators of the next commencement exercises.

—Casper Schuler, whose death is recorded in our Northern Michigan column, was formerly a resident of Charlevoix, where he conducted a saloon.

—W. H. Dewuer left yesterday on a northern trip that will take him to Petoskey, Harbor Springs, Cross Village, and Cheboygan, and will be absent ten days.

—Mrs. H. S. Harsha received a telegram from Wooster, Ohio, last week, announcing the death of her sister. She could not reach Wooster in time for the funeral.

—R. A. Emrey and wife and Mrs. Ida Emrey returned from Manistee Thursday. Mr. Emrey left his father at the point of death. He returned to Manistee Monday.

—James Alexander of Ironton, died Saturday morning of hernia. He was an old soldier, and was buried in the cemetery plat of Baxter Post, of this place Sunday.

—On Monday, Ezra Meech leased the Ingleside boarding house to Albert Noble, who takes possession March 1st. Mr. Meech goes to Elsworth to enter the grocery business.

—Hot Chautauquans! A special meeting of the C. L. S. C. will be held Friday evening of this week at the home of Mrs. John Burns. All come and bring "Chautauqua songs."

—Last week, the "McCabe building" occupied by A. Brown, as a bakery, was purchased by Dave Francis. He expects to put in a bakery in the spring. Mr. Brown removed to the old Harry Newman Bakery.

—Gard Brown has bought the Jefferies meat market building. Jefferies go out of business this month, and it is rumored that another market will take its place. Inter—McLeod leased it yesterday, and will put in a market.

—Sunday noon, as the Sunday schools were being called together, everybody was startled by the fire alarm, augmented by the church bells. A dense cloud of black smoke blew eastward from Bridge street, and a general fright ensued. It was only a most remarkable chimney burn-out at Calkins & Warnes' drug store, and was soon over. But it was a lively for the fire department. The Sibley was at Ferguson's corner in four minutes from the alarm, with twenty pounds of steam. A good record.

—J. Z. Linton has a new ad. in this issue.

—Remember the supper to-night, by the ladies of the Congregational church. A select program will be given.

—A most distressing accident happened to Mrs. Jacob Steed, on Wednesday. She fell upon icy ground, fracturing her hip-bone so badly, and in such a manner that surgical skill could not effect permanent reduction, and she will always suffer from the injury.

—Clarion had a big blow up Saturday. The boiler in Merrill's mill exploded entirely wrecking the mill. Seven men were in the filing room, and strange to say, the only person hurt, was a person from Petoskey, who happened to be standing in the mill. A flying bolt hit him in the head, but the injury was not fatal.

—Our good friend Robert Miller continues to the front again as the champion of the anti-water-works element. His proposition for a water test is intended to be fair, yet falls short of fairness. The selection of water from one well would manifestly be no test at all. If the test be made of water from wells of various depths, and in different localities, say not to exceed four, we heartily concur in the proposition. In his estimate of the cost of water works supply to individual homes Mr. Miller evidently contemplates a fountain and lawn-sprinkler in every front-yard and a penstock in the garden-patch. Instead of "ten or three dollars per month," the water-rate for ordinary domestic use would not have exceed fifty cents per month. Indeed, the average cost in Michigan, for family use, is but $6.47 per annum. From a volume of water works statistics at hand, it appears that the average cost in Charlevoix, for ordinary family use, would be about $6.00 per year. Only by the use of irrigating hydrants and bathroom comforts could the water bill reach Mr. Miller's figures. But let the Council be petitioned to make a fair scientific test of the water in the wells.

Norwood Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. Boyce of Traverse City, are visiting their daughter, Mrs. John Clements.

Mrs. Hannah Wagner of Charlevoix, is visiting in town this week.

The peas are picked and the pea pickers return to Traverse City today.

W. E. Campbell of Torch Lake, invited the Norwood school down to see him, which they did last Friday night, and had a most pleasant time.

Although its leap year there has not yet been a wedding around here this year. What's the matter girls?

Geo. H. VanPelt arrived home Tuesday.

Nick Shores has been hunting foxes the past four weeks. He got one Monday however. We think he shot it, but if the dog could talk there might be a doubt about it.

Hastings from Hayes.

Mr. Whitman and wife of Petoskey are visiting at Chas. Howe's.

H. S. Newton and wife were visiting at East Jordan Sunday.

A. W. Chew and wife were at Clarion Saturday and Sunday.

Henry Howe and Miss Amelia Struthers were married on Saturday

Mrs. Geo. Saunby returned home from Caledonia Friday.

Water Works Resolution.

At the council meeting held last Friday evening, a resolution was offered, submitting to the electors at the next annual charter election, the question of issuing $25,000 for water works. The resolution was laid on the table until the next meeting.

A majority of the council favor the resolution, and it will unquestionably pass, leaving it with the people to decide the matter. Meanwhile, it will be well to remember that every town of any importance in Northern Michigan, except Charlevoix, already have water-works.

Shall old fogyism prevail here?

Water Works Again.

To the Editor of the Sentinel:—

It has been said that to err is human. That being so, it follows that in all mooted questions one side or the other must be in error, and in some cases both sides err in some particulars. That may be the case in the contention between you, myself and others.

In all disputed questions, facts and not theories should be our reliance. So, in order to settle the dispute as to the purity of the water, I have this proposition to make: You and Mr. "Pure Water," or anybody else, may select any well in town, the water of which is used for domestic purposes; send a quantity of the water to any reliable analyst, and let the result be the test. Until the fact of impurity is so established, I protest emphatically against bonding the village for water-works.

It is claimed by some that water works would be a source of revenue to the village. If so, from whom would the revenue come? Would it not come from the inhabitants, who, in many cases, would be compelled to discard a bountiful supply of equally pure water for the privilege of paying a monthly water-rate for two or three days?

I cannot see the evidence of fifty or even twenty-five per cent. of the water being impure. The fact of the many deaths from diptheria, at different times, does not prove it, seeing that at least three several times the disease was brought from other places. It has again made its appearance four miles south of us, and may again travel this way. The very disease that Prof. Vaughan said would result from our impure water, if things were as represented, is not yet much in evidence, or, if at all, in rare instances.

The cause of diptheria was very different, as he described it, but can easily be removed if the proper methods are adopted. A good beginning would be for every household to dump his ashes into the vault, instead of in their back yards and alleys. Every vault that is merely a pit dug in the ground should be at once cleaned out, and water-tight vaults put in their place. We appeal to the village council to make a move in this direction.

While they are considering these matters, it will be wisdom for them to take up this matter of water-analysis. Until they have good reasons for condemning our present water-supply, there is no valid reason for bonding the village for water-works.

Yours,

ROBERT MILLER.

Undine.

Married, at Boyne City, Saturday, Feb. 6th, Mr. Henry Sherry and Miss Millie Struthers both of Hayes.

The 4th of Feb. was the occasion of Mrs. Crane's 48th birthday, and her children had a surprise party for her. About sixty of the neighbors and friends gathered there and had music and dancing. All report a jolly good time.

Capt. N. P. Peterson & Co. have bought the schooner Roy Belle of Chicago and will run her on the Undine and Sheboygan route next season.

IN POLAR REGIONS!

A Famous Hunting Place for Whale and Its Dangers.

From the northern part of Mudson bay, already arctic in character, stretches far toward the pole a deep inlet, which some early navigator of those desolate polar shores has termed Ina's Welcome—as if any ship which that ice-bound and lonely coast could be welcome to a person just from civilization! The name, no doubt, was given in memory of some escape from the drifting ice-packs, when the inlet furnished refuge from one of the fierce storms of that polar region.

Ina's Welcome is a famous hunting place for the great polar whale, or "bowhead," as the whalers call it, says St. Nicholas. This huge whale, which is indeed immense in size, often makes his home among the great ice-packs and ice-fields of the polar seas, and a goodly quantity of these it finds in Ina's Welcome. But these ice-packs, swinging to and fro with the tides, currents and winds in such a narrow inlet as this render navigation dangerous even for the staunch whale ships, and they generally make their fishing grounds off the lower mouth of the great inlet, where the cruising is much safer if not so profitable. Occasionally when some exceptionally good locomotor is in charge of a whaler, he dashes into the better fishing grounds for a short cruise; another has skilled hand by brighter prospects, or discouraged by a poor catch outside, enters the inlet and either reaps a rich harvest of oil and bone, or wrecks his vessel. Or he may escape after an imprisonment in the grip of the merciless ice-fetters for a year or two longer than he had intended to stay.

Such was the fate of the good ship "Gladiator," from a well known whaling port in Southeastern Massachusetts. She sailed to the northernmost reaches of the "Welcome," as she always called it, and, after a most profitable catch of "bowheads," had the ill-fortune to remain firmly bound in the ice for two years. During this long stay much longer than that for which the vessel had been provisioned, the crew were dependent on the many Eskimos who clustered around the ship. The native supplied them with ample quantities of reindeer, musk-ox, seal and walrus meat, in return for small quantities of hardware and clothing. Their companionship, too, rude as it was, did much to while away the dreary, lonely hours of the two years' imprisonment.

AUSTRALIAN ABORIGINES.

The White Man Killed Them Off With Prison and Bullets.

The aborigines of Australia were exterminated by poison as well as by bullets, declares a writer in the Chicago Inter-Ocean. I can well remember when a child listening to an old Moreton Bay settler giving an account to a number of admiring auditors of the manner in which he had "dosed" a number of the savages. They had been the cause of a good deal of trouble among his sheep and cattle, and of constant alarm to the whites residing on his station. So he determined to teach them a lesson. Under a pretense of a desire to cement friendly relations he sent a message to the tribe that he would have a number of sick men from among them to come and strip bark to roof some new huts that he was about to build. He promised to do them well and they were to have unlimited supply of damper and beef. The place of meeting was appointed in the neighborhood of a stringy bark mountain. He would himself take out the floor and bake the damper.

The time had come, the blacks had arrived, and the good white man (as they now thought) had brought a barrel of flour with other provisions.

In anticipation of the feast the blacks scattered about and commenced their work of stripping bark, while their good white man baked. Not the slightest suspicion of poison entered into the minds of the blacks. They gathered up for the great feast, after putting in a morning's work, contingent to can, cockatoo, and the white man, anxious that they should see so much that they should never want to eat again, urged them to eat more and more. Soon the effects told, they jumped up with a spasm, then sat down, and soon the word went round. "The white man has poisoned the damper." Maddened with agony and rage, they rushed for their spears, which had already mounted his horse, but only barely escaped by a dingling full speed away. I heard this while man describe how, a few days after, upon coming back to the spot, the scene all round like a chamber of horrors. The damper had only too well done its work.

In traveling about the bush I have often seen skeletons, skulls and the scattered bones of dead blacks who had fallen victims to the anger of the white man.

A Japanese Railroad.

A rack rail way seven miles in length is under construction on the Usui mountain, Japan, to connect the central of the State railway at Yokohama and Karuizawa. There are twenty-one tunnels—12,200 feet in length in all—along the line and the steepest grade is 1 in 15.

Jelly From Elephants' Tusks.

How many people in the Washington Star, have ever eaten jelly made from elephants' tusks? Yet it is very good indeed. In the English factories, where many tons of ivory are sawn up annually to make handles of knives and forks, great quantities of ivory dust are obtained. The dust is sold at the rate of 6 pence per pound, and when properly boiled and prepared it makes the finest purest and most nutritious calcium jelly known. Years ago ivory jelly was a very fashionable remedy and much sought for.

RELIGIOUS MARTYRS.

In Retinue in the Japanese Persecutions of Christ-Like Deeds.

Every visitor to the beautiful harbor of Nagasaki, Japan, says the Chicago Herald, in the south of the Japanese possessions, is shown, as the steamer moves slowly up to the anchorage, beneath the foreign settlement, the jutting rock of Pappenberg, near the entrance, with one sensation cliff descending sheer for some hundreds of feet into deep water, and in external appearance not unlike the huge cliff known as Gibraltar, lower near Cloverlily. From the top of this cliff the traveler is told in every book referring to the subject thousands of Christian converts were cast into the sea or dashed to pieces in the fall, during the bloody persecutions about the middle of the seventeenth century and the place has therefore acquired a gloomy notoriety all over the world. The late Laurence Oliphant, who was the author in his "Narrative of Lord Elgin's Mission to China and Japan," and described Pappenberg or the Papalian rock of Japan. Every writer in Japan has accepted the story to this day and the tale of human cruelty and human sufferings of which this frowning precipice has been the witness has excited the awe and pity of persons to whom Japan itself is no more than a name. It appears now, however, that Pappenberg had nothing to do with this tragedy. Dr. Rees, a professor of the University of Tokio, has recently investigated the course of the Christian rebellion in Shimabara in southern Japan in 1637-8, one of the most interesting episodes in the history of foreign relations with Japan. It was after the suppression of this rebellion that the executions at Pappenberg are alleged to have taken place. In a paper read before the German Asiatic society of Japan Dr. Rees shows that the rock was not used for the purpose, to mention of it is made in any of the contemporary records, and, seeing that the crews of the rebellion was, it would have been absurd to have dragged the prisoners there. It had happened, however, was far worse, though the scene was different. Shimabara is a peninsula near Nagasaki, the interior of which is occupied by a volcanic mountain called Unsen, which is said to have one of the largest craters in the world, and which is about 4,800 feet high. Its slopes and base are full of boiling sulphur springs in a constant state of effervescence. The frightful persecutions of the Christians in the peninsula in which, led to the rebellion are referred to by Dr. Rees.

"The new lord of Shimabara," he says, "Matsukura Shigemasa, and Matsukura Shigemasa, who succeeded him in 1630, are held up in the reports of Christian eye-witnesses as exceptionally cruel persecutors of their Christian subjects. The peninsula became the scene of an organized insurrection, with the object of martyrs for its ever-persistent confessors of faith. Pages have carefully reproduced the pathetic martyrology of those survivors from the reprisals of the fugitives who gave evidence before the commission of missionaries established at Macao and Manila. I have selected but one, the most note worthy, of those torturings and deaths which attested the greatest number of victims as of example. In this case the zealous Christians were led to Unsen, one of the massive rock barriers that precipitously overhang the ever-smoking sulphur springs, and from thence were hurled into the boiling depths below. Japanese sources coincide with the missionary reports that this was a form of execution most commonly employed, and that it remained in use for a long period. The irony suggested by the name in that those who seeked heaven should be cast into depths which are the nethermost hell (Uigoku literally greatest hell), gave the method of inflicting punishment a special charm in the eyes of the persecutors."

It remained fresh in the traditions of the Europeans resident in Japan, and has given rise to the legend that Pappenberg was the scene of the tragedy.

Give All the Boys a Chance.

Lieut. A. R. Wyckoff, U. S. N., has written a paper on "The United States Naval Apprentice System," in which he proposes the extension of the system in the manner to gain recruits from the rural districts of the states where good American stock is going to waste. He would have the boys recruited from the good boys of the country rather than from the bad boys of the city. Why should the navy be confined to the seaports, and not have representatives of all parts of the country?" asks Lieut. Wyckoff. "Recruiting officers could be sent from place to place, advertising thoroughly in advance, and remain only a few weeks in each town. The precise number needed could be restricted to three or four persons and the expense of each party would be small. When a dozen boys had been enlisted they could be sent to the nearest rendezvous. In this way the navy could be Americanized and popularized, for the poor boys of every state would have an equal chance."—Scribner's Monthly.

Words in the Bible.

According to The Presbyterian and Reformed Review the total number of distinct words in the New Testament, excluding proper names and their derivatives, is 4,629. A few comparisons may be interesting. The vocabulary of the Old Testament is larger. Gesenius' lexicon, omitting proper names and obsolete roots, contains 8,710 words, of which 642 are marked "Chald." The "filled" and the "Olympic" together contain 9,000 words. Shakespeare uses 15,000 and Milton 9,000.

Congressional.

On the 21st, Mr. Stanford addressed the Senate in advocacy of the bill introduced by him to provide the government with money sufficient to supply the national want of a sound circulating medium. He thought the time for such legislation had fully come, and the bill was calculated to enlist support in the future. Mr. Cockrell reported the bill for the relief of the University of Missouri, at Columbia, and after explanation it was passed. The La Abra bill was again taken up, but without disposing of it the Senate adjourned. In the House Mr. Dockery, from the committee on ways and means, reported a joint resolution authorizing the President to appoint a commission of three persons to ventilate the cause of the recent financial stringency. It was referred. Mr. Tucker, from the committee on judiciary, reported back the anti-option bill, with a recommendation that it do not pass. Mr. Hatch, of Missouri, introduced a bill authorizing the Postmaster General to contract for the transportation of the mails between Kansas City, Mo., and Denver, Colo., by the Kansas City, Pittsburg & Gulf Railroad. Mr. Harmer, of Alabama, from the committee on Indian Affairs, reported a joint appropriating $15,000 to complete the allotment of lands to the Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians in Oklahoma. Passed. Adjourned until Monday.

As Known Situation.

For the first time since the big fire, the water supply of Chicago was for a country cut off for a whole day. The results were confined to the flooding of the empty pipes of the city, the situation two years ago would have been a terrible one indeed, and as it was the inconvenience was great. Nothing in small fires were reported, but several weeks ago a force of men was put to work at night and night to prevent the possibility of a repetition of the trouble. The men their efforts the blockade became such as to completely cut off the water supply.

EASTERN.

At the Detroit Pressroom, near Williamsburg, Pa., a Philadelphia named John Miles, who has been sleeping for thirteen months and shows no signs of waking up. He was taken home from Williamsburg Hospital about four months ago. The sleeper opens his eyes occasionally to take a little nourishment, but immediately drows his head under the covers and falls into a stupor condition.

With the aid of the police, the officials of the Pittsburgh, Allegheny and Manchester Electric Line at Pittsburgh were enabled to open up their road, after an almost complete suspension of traffic for nearly a week. Cars were escorted with armed officers on the front and rear of each car. Along the line, a dozen or more cross extra police officers were stationed to prevent tracks, while guards surrounded the car sheds and kept the strikers off the company's property.

THERE was a disagreeable light on train No. 6 on the New York Central railway. The train left Albany on Friday at 7 P. M. Just as it was pulling out from Poughkeepsie three intoxicated men clambered on board, throwing their cigars, overalls and sledges on the platform of the Buffalo car. They were very rude and boisterous and successfully took charge of the car. Chief Detective Hoagland and some of the passengers arrested them, but only after a lively scrimmage.

THOMAS SCHOFIELD died at his home in North Lima, Ohio, at the age of 104 years and 3 months, very caused his death. Schofield was extremely proud of the fact that he was the oldest man in Connecticut. He was in the events of his life of which he was very conversant, and could tell the whole thirteen yards of longstitch and prescribed to President Madison. President Madison was inaugurated in the year of his birth. He died, during the first President who took the oath of office administered in Washington and made the United States.

FATE OF A UNION SCOUT

TAKEN FROM HIS COMRADES AND SHOT.

He Defined to Serve the Confederacy—A Women Who Had Loved Him Brought Him to His Untimely Death—A Blockade Runner and Missing Million.

Story of a Stalkless Conscript.

THE eclipse of war passed, and the East Tennessee, with like Confederate sympathies arrayed against the military power of the North, the days of '61, when members of the same family arrayed themselves against each other in different paths to the same goal, the Union and the Confederacy, in a concatenation of circumstances and accidents, one foggy morning in December she found herself along way outside of her intended course and within three hundred yards of the Federal lines, where she was immediately captured her without a struggle or any injury, to the board of officers who was present at her capture. Nothing could be never seen in any ship such grace and swiftness. She was condemned and sold in New York on or before the 19th day of February, 1861. Four men became her owners, three of whom are dead and one is living. The ship never paid her cost, but she was a quarter dep. It was given to the Confederacy. A work after the ship was condemned, Jefferson Davis brought the news of the surrender of the Union forces at Fort Sumter, the collapse of the Confederate States Government, and the fall of the Gulf of Mexico. Confederate bonds fell four cents on the dollar. Mr. Davis, Prime Minister to London, Mr. Charles Francis Adams, Minister from the United States Consul at Liverpool received a dispatch from Washington that Great Britain was sending and take the offensive in the matter. Even it it should, while is by no means certain, it must be remembered that there is another party to such negotiations, whose concurrence is desired. It is questionable whether such a policy would be acceptable to the United States. Insults to the flag and seamen are to be taken up and considered as subjects for arbitration by any fair and honorable man. Nevertheless, the Britishers have been in the habit of demanding that the United States and the House bill fixing the time for holding elections for members of the United States in the Northern District of Iowa was passed. The bill provides that the election shall be held on the second Tuesday in November instead of on the third Tuesday in September, as heretofore. The change was made in the interest of the Republicans, who have been in the habit of demanding that the United States Government should be called upon to arbitrate the matter. Nevertheless, the Britishers

The two children who accompanied himself and wife contracted malignant diphtheria while en route east, and were dangerously sick for some time, while Mrs. P. is about worn out by the anxiety and care of attending them. Mr. Palmer himself has also been subject to severe mental and physical strains by the sans trying ordeal. The little ones, we are happy to say, had passed the dangerous point of this terrible disease when Mr. Palmer left them.

The New Election Law.

The Legislature of 1891 passed a general election law, which revolutionizes, to a certain extent the methods of conducting election in this State.

While most people interested have looked up and familiarized themselves with the general law, we find that many have lost sight of the fact that a supplementary act was also passed, which applies to municipal and township election, and under the provisions of which our Spring election will be held, As the act in question, while brief, is very important, we publish it in full. It is Act 194, and will be found on page 274 of the Public Acts of 1891, and should be studied in connection with Act 190 on page 256 of the same book. The supplementary Act reads as follows:

AN ACT to prescribe the manner of conducting municipal and township elections and to prevent fraud and deception thereat.

SECTION 1. The People of the State of Michigan enact, That all elections hereafter held in the various cities, villages and township in this State shall be in conformity with the provisions of the laws governing general elections so far as the same shall be applicable thereto, and all the provisions of such laws relative to the boards of election inspectors, the arrangement of polling places, the manner of voting and receiving votes and the canvas and declaration of the result of such election, are hereby made applicable to such municipal and township elections, but the time for the opening and closing of the polls shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 2. The township board of each township, and such persons as shall be elected therefor by the common councils of the various cities and villages in this State, shall be the board of election commissioners for such township, city or village respectively, and shall perform such duties relative to the preparation and printing of ballots as are required by law of the boards of election commissioners of counties, and like duties and privileges as are enjoyed and granted by the law governing general elections upon the various committees of the different political organizations are hereby prescribed for the city, village, or township committees in elections held pursuant hereto; except that it shall not be necessary for the committees of the different political organizations to furnish a vignette or heading for the ballots other than to designate the name of the party or political organization which which they represent.

SEC. 3. In municipalities governed by this law, the name of candidates shall be given by the committees of the various political organizations to the board of election commissioners of such municipalities not less than five days before each election, and the proof copy of the ballot shall be open to the inspection of the chairman of each committee at the office of the township clerk, and city or village clerk or recorder, not less than two clear secular days before such election.

Approved July 3, 1891.

Dissolution of Partnership.

Notice is hereby given that the copartnership heretofore existing between the undersigned in the photo-graph business, is dissolved by mutual consent. Mr. E. E. Bowman will continue the business, to whom all accounts will be paid.

Elk Rapids Progress; The Iron Co. have made arrangements with the Chicago & West Michigan for a engine and forty cars to run on their wood and logging business. The train with a crew will be on in a few days.

—Died, Sunday, in Traverse City, January 31st 1892, one poor lone stage route, aged 20 years more or less. This decrepit old thing carried in its time uncles, female and mails, but was never a source of pride to Elk Rapids or profit either. It did its service fairly well, and though now dead we cannot help giving it a parting kick. It served too long; it was too slow; its death is the natural outcome of progress, prosperity—and—pride.

A boy ten years of age, by the name of Taylor, who lives a few miles west of Traverse City, has been trapping for small game near his home during the winter. A few mornings ago he found a stranger antelope in one of his traps which was caught by its foot. The animal showed fight and the boy secured a club and started in, but was able to make but little impression on his antagonist. He then borrowed an ax of some neighbors who were chopping near by and with this he rendered the attack and soon came off victor. The animal was full grown, wild enough that the boy succeed in killing it without being injured is something remarkable. He certainly has good grit.

Blaine Not a Candidate.

Hon. James G. Blaine has written a letter to the Chairman of the National Republican Committee stating that he will under no circumstance be a candidate for President.

The Treasury well says of the South American republics: "We do not covet their territory. We desire their peace and prosperity." But we can not allow them to insult and murder men who wear the American uniform.

What has become of Hill, David Bennett Hill, formerly autocrat of the Democratic party of the United States from his place in Albany as Governor of New York. Since he went to Washington, weeks ago, and by the inexorable "courtesy of the Senate" was placed in a real seat, both figuratively and actually, nobody has heard of him. Can it be that he has found his real level below all the old or new members of the Senate? The Nation does not yearn to know what has befallen David Bennett Hill personally, but there is a little natural curiosity to be informed as to the present official status of a gentleman who lately went to Washington with a great State in his pocket.

Philadelphia Times: If the present war flurry shall lead to the construction of a sensible system of seacoast fortification, it will prove a blessing, not in disguise, but open to the eyes of all. While it is true we are at peace and desire to remain so, it is equally true that our large seaboard cities practically defenseless against a destructive bombardment by the navy of any first-class power. This should not be the case, no matter how peaceable our intentions may be. The surest way to maintain peaceable relations with the rest of the world is to be in condition to defend ourselves against attack by any foreign power. Senator Dolph's bill may not be the best that could be framed for the purpose, and it may call for the expenditure of a larger sum than is necessary. It has this merit, however, that it contemplates the immediate beginning of a necessary work and provides for its continuance until a complete system of fortifications has been constructed. If it is too extravagant or if it is objectionable in other features it can be amended but the senate should consider it seriously at once, and after putting it in proper shape send it promptly to the house for concurrence. We are getting a navy we need not be ashamed of. We should soon have some sea coast fortifications that will at least look threatening if nothing more.

Remember A. T. Washburne's 1/2 off sale.

That Savannah & Lay pine is still figuring in the courts. Doyle the man who worked up the deal, secured a big judgement against Torrent, but it was appealed, and now come Torrent's son-in-law, who wants $100,000 from Torrent & Petrie, for money due from his interest in the Kalkaska timber, cut for Torrent & Petrie by the Smith Lumber Co. It is badly mixed, and if Sever, the son-in-law wins his case it will beat Petrie out of his share of the profits. As Sever is a son-in-law of Torrent, it looks suspicious to a man up a tree.

—Pile-driving began yesterday for the bridge across Newman's creek on the Ironton branch.

—The Charlevoix Minstrels are to show in Elk Rapids Feb 24th and at Traverse City on the 25th.

—The Charlevoix Minstrels will give a masquerade ball at Lewis Grand Opera House on Monday night next the 22d.

—Reported, that Seymour Bros. have purchased the steamer Soo City, and will run her in connection with the steamer Petoskey next season.

—The W. R. C. will give a social at the home of Mrs. Albert Brown, on Friday evening of this week. Hot rolls, coffee, etc., all for fifteen cents

—H. S. Harsha has been appointed Charlevoix agent for the Peoples' Live Stock Insurance Co. The company insures only horses

—Mr. Frank M. Paine, of Rockford, Mich., a graduate of the Michigan Agricultural College, has accepted a position with Meech & Son, florists, of this place.

—John Baker is happier than if he sold a barn-full of bob-sleighs, a threshing machine and a steam engine. It is a girl, and all parties concerned doing well.

—Mrs. Francis West, late of Chicago, and the owner and occupant for many years of the "West Cottage" at the Charlevoix Summer Resort, died in Paris, on the 11th.

—The telephone managers of the Traverse Bay region have united in a company address to ex-Super intendent Watson and expressing their regrets at his retirement from the service —On May 28th last, in St. Clair river, the propeller Lyon came in collision with L. C. Allen's dredge, doing considerable damage. Allen libeled the steamer, and last week recovered $2,000 damages.

—In view of the difficulties of her position, the School Board, at a recent meeting, passed a unanimous resolution of encouragement and confidence in Miss Francis, as teacher of the 5th department.

—Eagle River, Wis., paper: The brass band boy have reorganized, Ed Brown has been elected leader and A. G. Hichison, secretary and treasurer. They have taken in some of the younger boys and are practicing regularly. They expect to have the best band ever organized here.

—The many friends of Rev. W. E. McLennan will be pleased to learn that he is the pastor of the Milburn Memorial Chapel, at South Bend, Ind., one of the most desirable appointments in that Conference. It is the opinion of the Survivors, that "Billy" is worthy of the best of them, not only because of his marked ability, but by reason of his deep sincerity and love for the cause in which he is engaged.

—A. J. Emery, father of H. A. Emery, of this place, died at his home in Manistee, Sunday, after a long illness, of consumption. Mr. Emery was well known here, having for several years, spent a portion of his time here with his sons. He was a superannuated Methodist Minister, of most lovable nature, and deep piety. He goes hence at a ripe old age, leaving to his family the best legacy of an exhalted character and a life worthy of emulation.

—Chicago Tribune: The engrossed copy of a memorial tendered J. T. H. McKay, General Freight Agent of the Lake Shore, on his retirement from the Chairmanship of Freight Committee of the Central Traffic Association, is on exhibition at the office of Chairman Blanchard, and all who have seen it agree that it is one of the finest specimens of penmanship ever produced. It is a gift of which Mr. McKay may well feel proud, not only on account of that kindly sentiments it expresses, but on account of its value as a work of art.

—Chief Engineer McVean and Division Engineer Northrop, of the C. & W. M. Ry., arrived Friday. Saturday with Mr. Harris, of this residency, they went over the line of the Ironton branch, and inspected the bridge work.

—The dastardly and cowardly assault made by a certain individual last week, upon an inoffending citizen, who was at the time in a difficult situation to defend himself, has excited considerable interest. Justice McLeod, Saturday, fined the assailant $10 and costs, besides reading him a severe lecture. Out of respect for his family, we will not publish his name, but the party himself does not deserve this consideration.

—Apropos of the fact that the Charlevoix School building is heated and ventilated by the Hess system, it will be interesting to our readers to know that the Detroit board last week awarded a big contract to the Smead (Italian) system folks after a hot contest between the two companies, and others, and notwithstanding the fact that the Smead bid was much higher than that of the Hess Co. The Detroit papers say the Smead system won on its merits.

—Cards are out announcing the marriage on the 22nd of this month, of Miss Pearl Lennox, daughter of Capt. Wm. Lennox, of Ironton, to Mr. F. J. Wolcott, late of California, and a son of Mrs. Victoria Wolcott of Ironton. Miss Pearl may be classed as a Charlevoix girl, or, at least, one who has very many friends here, who will unite in cordial wishes for her happiness. Mr. Wolcott is a young gentleman of extensive travel, and in every way worthy of his bride.

—A most destressing accident occurred Friday on the pile-driver at work on the railroad bridge. Wm Farquar, a workman, was adjusting the top of a pile while the hammer was suspended about a foot above the pile. The hammer was released, coming down upon his hand mangling it in a frightful manner. He was taken to Dr. Lefgren's office, and his second finger amputated, and the hand sewed up and dressed. The hand will always be crippled, but how badly the Doctor cannot now say.

Blaine's Letter.

The announcement is made that Hon. James G. Blaine is not a candidate for the presidency. Such announcements have heretofore made; but this time the declaration comes from Mr. Blaine himself and is a formal letter to Hon. J. S. Clarkson chairman of the Republican national committee. There is no disguising the fact that this determination on Mr. Blaine's part will be received with unfeigned regret and deep disappointment by a vast army of patriotic Americans. And their great admiration for the foremost of all American will be intensified ten fold by reason of the loyalty to his party which Mr. Blaine has shown in speaking freely and frankly upon the situation. Mr. Blaine could have the nomination by the best intimation that it would be acceptable; and indeed it is not unlikely that it would have gone to him without any utterance one way or the other. However the welfare of the Republican party demanded that before long its adherents should have some sign from the great premier as to his intentions, and this sign has at last come in the shape or a formal withdrawal of his name in connection with the nomination. This announcement is simple, plain, straightforward. It gives no reason for the act, and we are left to infer that Mr. Blaine is merely satisfied with the honors he already has had. The office of president of the United States, exalted as it is could add no laurels to the fame of James G. Blaine. He is easily the first statesman of all parties, possessing a larger personal following than any man of his generation.

For about a month passed fifteen head of wild elk have been in the wood one and half miles northeast of Empire, Grand Traverse Co., day and night. They have no shelter except the trees, and nothing to eat but occessional twig or moss covered bough which they eagerly devour. If the owners of the stock do not make a provision for them in some way a complaint will be filed against them to the Humane Society, who will investigate the case and act in accordance with the law as mercy and justice demand.

ROYAL RANGER RALPH;

—OR—

The Waif of the Western Prairies.

BY WELDON J. COBB.

CHAPTER XXV.—Continued.

The Indian girl—we had exhausted the little Dutch dropped forward and rather lay across Mr. Walford's knees. She stopped sobbing with now and then a convulsive sob from her lovely face. Then she stirred, lifted herself to a sitting position and looked at us.

"Are you—is he hurt?" she cried.

"Not a bit, Pocahontas," I said.

"They have escaped from the cabin, then, and are making their escape?"

"I did. Have you heard from the cabin?"

"No. He has escaped on the trail of his ancestors."

"Then you have heard from the cabin?"

"Tell me what you heard from the cabin?"

"Nothing, except that he was safe when the shots were fired, and that they were where the chase was a strange form of hide-and-seek."

At this the Indian stared in the profoundest amazement. Pocahontas herself seemed dumfounded rather than astonished. It appeared as if he would seek just such a place of safety, and that the Indian maiden had come into Paradise.

"Are you sure that the ranger—friend—escaped?"

Deeply, Pocahontas informed her of his adventures as we had their most. She listened with a deep interest when Dutch had finished to demand Isaac Tracey's fortune. She had learned the number of seeds, and had he considered it the best place of shelter in the mountains.

When she found her wish fulfilled, and in his judgment it was the best place, she found their her father's treble had escaped.

"And was thought that I was a prisoner with them?" she asked.

"We went on to say that she had escaped from the cabin, and that we had come to her rescue."

"Then you knew that I was a prisoner?"

"Not a bit of it. Certainly, Sphinx the Indian girl reported the story with several additions."

"Then you knew that I was a prisoner?"

"Not a bit. What do we mean, mate?"

"Then you knew I was a half-breed?"

"Yes, Captain Modoc. I saw from the first that you were a half-breed."

"Then you knew I was a half-breed?"

"I thought so, and I knew it when I heard the Indian girl."

"Then you knew I was a half-breed?"

"Yes, I knew it when I heard the Indian girl." Pocahontas rose, rather proud and sat off the old stump of the woods all by a cedar-tree, and leaned against it.

And so Riding a caper that seemed to remove all suspicions of his safety, Walford flung his hat on the ground and faced the assembled critics outlawed.

CHAPTER XXVI.

THE SCOUT.

So fantastic and grotesque were the actions of the lunatic that Dougal had evidently abandoned his suspicions of his being a spy. Like Dustan, he began to believe that their strange visitor was some one of those demented creatures often met with on the frontier.

"The first thing will be a fallen aeronaut," he said.

He had opened and fashioned a small alcohol lamp, and he filmed the hot air produced by burning from a few rags or her object he had in his hand.

"Watch the balloon, gentlemen," he said, "and you'll see it ascend and ex plode in midair."

The bag began to fill, and finally arose in the air. Everyone was lifted to watch its course, and the lunatic prepared for his final move in his power stance he drew out the bandage. The balloon arose a few feet. Suddenly it exploded.

Simultaneous bursts of pale arose from the thinning. Every man seemed gone wild suddenly. The Indians, as Walford had intended, in exploding had released some captive people, which had fallen into the cons of the gaping bandits. Blindfold and bound, they fell for the most part helpless.

Dougal and Dustin, however, had escaped the general suffering as they had watched the forest in a little distance. As Walford noticed this, he found a package in his pocket of Indian fragments. A shrew taper ignited the bandage.

"The gifts—the magic," cried Dougal, as he saw the bandage ignited.

The bandage had contained gifts the Indian has disappeared.

The bewildered captives left the spot where they had been bound, and Dustin and Dougal made a simultaneous rush for the magic as the scar and the man then sought.

Dustin secured him by the arm and held him firmly. Dougal rose only the very most prized in the vehicle.

"Let go, I say!" he cried, as he struggled in the grasp of the Scotchman.

"Yes, I will, I will. Who has taken from?" he demanded.

"Wait, wait!" cried Dustin.

"Yes, I will. Who has taken from?"

"Wait!"

"Wait! What do you mean, man?"

"Wait!"

"Yes, Captain Modoc. I saw from the first that you were a half-breed."

"I thought so, and I knew it when I heard the Indian girl."

"Then you knew I was a half-breed."

"Yes, Captain Modoc. I saw from the first that you were a half-breed."

"Then you knew I was TOO ACCOMODATING.

The Drummer Threatened to Make the Fast Entirely Too Successful.

A traveling for a New Yorkdry-goods house was in the smoking car of a train on an Ohio railroad, says Mr. Quad in the New York Evening World, when a horsy-headed young farmer came in for a smoke and sat down beside him. The young man felt and looked happy, and pretty soon he remarked.

"I heard some one saying you was from New York."

"Yes."

"Drummer, ain't you?"

"Yes."

"Sin around a good deal, I spose?"

"Well, I've been traveling for ut tom years."

"Shoo! You must have seen a heap. Say! I've got a sort of favor to ask yo."

"What?"

"I'm engaged to a gal in the next car. I'm going with her down to Moulins. She's the all-fredest purtiest gal in four counties, and I know she loves me, too."

"But what?"

"You know a feller is allus sort of uneasy about his gal 'till he marries her. She pretends that she wouldn't even look at the president of the United States if he was a single man, but I dun no. You'd be sure o' those women."

"No, you can't."

"May be purtendin' to love you like so—adire, and yet be planum to drop you for the first better-lookin' feller who comes along. She's in the next car and I'd kinder like to try her. I'm pretty sure she's all right, but I'd like to know just how she'd act if you went in and sat down beside her. I know it's asking a big favor of you, but—"

"Oh, I'm perfectly willing to accommodate you," interrupted the traveler. "But you must promise to abide by the consequences."

"How?"

"Why, if she seems to take to me you mustn't get mad and raise a row. I am only trying to accommodate you, you know."

"I don't think she'll take you!"

"Why, I can't say. She's sitting in a seat alone. I'll take my grip and walk into the car and sit right down beside her."

"Yes."

"Then I'll speak about the weather—the scenery—ask where she is going and so on, and the chances are that in about ten minutes we'll be talking away like two old friends."

"Humph! It took me three months after I dared ask if her ma was well!"

"Then I'll gradually lead up to the subject of my being a widower," continued the traveler. "I'll remark how lonely I am, and how I am thinking of marrying again, and how my second wife will have a sealskin sacque, diamond earrings, and a horse and carriage. If you come in and find me holding her hand you mustn't get mad and pitch into me."

"Goin' to talk sealskin sacque to her, eh?"

"Yes."

"And diamond earrings?"

"Yes."

"And tell her she can have regular Brussels carpets, stuffed chairs and a lived gal?"

"Certainly."

"You wait a minute!"

He got up and left the car. Just then the whistle blew for a station and the train soon stopped. The traveler looked out of the window and saw the young man and his girl getting off with as much alacrity as if there had been a collision expected. He put out his head and called:

"This isn't Medina; what are you getting off here for?"

"I know it isn't Medina," replied the young man as he came forward a few steps. "Conductor will stop off here and man the next train."

"But I thought you wanted me to do you a favor?"

"I do. You just keep right on that train and get out of the state of Ohio as soon as ever you can, and if Lever pitch you within fifty miles of my home after I'm married I'll dump you all over the country.

Suffering Indians.

A sealed schooner that stopped at one of the villages of Aleu island, the most westerly of the Aleutian group, in the North Pacific ocean, was asked merely to give a little relief to the suffering natives, numbering about 80. Several years ago it was a great place for sea otters and when a for company established a trading post many Aleuts were attracted to the island, but when the company moved its store the natives were left there. The island is barren and the native must live on fish and sea lions. They drink the oil from the sea lions, but as they have neither boats nor hunting outfits the supply is small. They make clothing from anything they can get, being thankful for gunny bags that may be left by vessels that pass occasionally. One woman was found who had been on her back for three years on account of a broken leg, the bone not having been set. The Indians cannot get away and must soon perish unless relief be sent.

Concerning Fancy.

The curious man believes himself eclipsed by the latter of his neighbor, that which is good in itself becomes an evil to him, and makes him wish it either removed or extinguished. Envy, like cold poison, benumbs and stupefies, and thus, as it consumes its own importance, it folds its arms in despair and sits cursing in a corner. When it confesses it is commonly in the dark, by treachery and undermining, by calumny and detraction. Envy is no less foolish than detestable; it is a vice which they say keeps no holiday, but is always working upon its own disquiet.—New York Ledger.

A Cosmopolitan Hen.

A new kind of a bird has been discovered in Wyoming. In company with a dozen buzards it was hovering over the carcass of a dead horse in a pasture. It has the head and beak of a hawk, the body and neck of a rooster and its tail is similar to that of a peacock, and when shot made a noise not unlike that of a guinea hen. The bird will prove an interesting study for scientists but was shipped to New York city.

THE MISERY OF BALDHEADS

Thousands of Dollars Spent Annually to Make the Hair Grow.

I make a good deal of money out of bald-headed men," said the barber to a New York sun man. "It is true that I do not know of any way to make hair grow on a bald head; but nevertheless I honestly say to every customer who asks my opinion exactly what I believe, it has been my unvarying experience that no baldheaded man gives up without a long and expensive series of experiments the hope of one day seeing his hair restored. No man, no matter how bald-headed he may know, or what variety of nonsense he attempts he may have seen to make hair grow where it has once disappeared, each baldheaded man seems determined to make all the trials for himself. He thinks he may succeed where others have failed, and does not begrudge the expense.

"I have seen a barber whose head was as destitute of hair as a marble top table unblushingly recommend a hair tonic or hair restorer or invigorator as certain to make the hair grow. The baldheaded man does not ask the question why the barber has not tried it on his own billiard ball but confidingly purchases bottle after bottle in the vain hope of making up for nature's deficiencies.

"There is a little fuss thus grows on many bald heads that causes a good deal of derision. Seeing and feeling this fuss the bald-headed man thinks his new crop is coming surely. He reasons that if this fuss is shaved it will come out stronger, so he has his head carefully shaved. Then the fuss comes out again. But it is still a fuss and it continues to be a fuss and never gets to be anything but a fuss. It may not be coaxed or driven into anything but a fuss.

"Now, knowing all this the barber can not be so blind to his own interests as to go very far out of his way to convince the hopeful and trusting baldheads who do not know it and who insist upon learning by expensive experience. It is no particular harm for a baldheaded man to keep on trying ever one thing and then another. It amuses him and is profitable to the barber.

"There is a baldness that comes from sickness, especially from scarlet fever, when the hair falls out and the head becomes bare for a brief period. But in such cases it is no art of the barber and no mere concoction of materials that makes the hair come in again. It is the remedial effort of nature. The hair would come back in such cases without the use of any ointments or ointments. It is possible that in many such cases the fact that the hair did come back at a time when some particular ointment was used led to the belief that it was the ointment that did the work, although the truth was that the hair would have come back without any ointment of any kind.

"Men are usually more disposed than women to experiment on bald heads. One reason of this is that men do not wear false hair so securely as women do, but rather shift greater risk of detection.

"Any one who could really compel a growth of hair on all bald heads would secure an immense fortune and the gratitude of mankind. A similar fortune and gratitude await the man who can prevent the growth of hair where it is not wanted.

"GO TO HALIFAX"

The Why and Wherefore of the Evil Name Assigned to it Town.

The evil repute of Halifax implied in this adage comes to it by inheritance from Halifax in Yorkshire, England. Halifax law, as long ago described from a letter of Lord Lovesner quoted by Motley in his "History of the United States," was that criminals should be "condemned first and inquired upon afterward." A law which in that one particular at least resembled "Jeffreys Justice."

Halifax lay within the forest of Hardwick, where the law was that if a felon was taken with 13½ pence worth of stolen goods he should be tried by four forth burgers from four of the greatest towns and if condemned by them he hanged the next day. After this proceeding had been carried out to the letter the man might be sent to a jury. Halifax is also credited with being the home of the guillotine, which the regent, Earl Morton, introduced into Scotland only to have his own head chopped off with it.

THE TURTLE'S NEST.

For Fifty Years the Sun-Turtle Has Visited It Annually.

In the town of Fatten, Mexico, a place distant from side-wheel river five miles there is a great curiosity known as the "turtle's nest." For fifty-two years a turtle has come annually to the nest to deposit her eggs. Over half a century ago she selected her nest, then an open field, but now in a yard in front of a residence. A relative of the owner of the house branded the date 1841 upon the turtle's back and it can be plainly traced now. She comes about the same date each year and her five feet days are passed in inspecting the ancient nest the yard and surroundings.

Later she digs a hole in the ground and there deposits her eggs. This year she left forty-two eggs but as many were carried away and the others often disturbed, only about a dozen of the eggs hatched out.

The owner of the house had ten of the little turtles, now more than twice the size of a postage stamp. The old turtle always departs after laying the eggs. The warm sand and the sun serve as an incubator.

This turtle has been at the Drew Dead Water on the Matlacamacha river fully fifty miles away from her nest. Her weight varies from thirty to thirty-five pounds, and it is said she was large when branded as she is now. Both dates are common to Fatten and is always welcomed by old and young.—New York Times.

The Singer's Prayer Book.

A curiosity is the "Singer's Prayer Book, only an inch in breadth by seven in length, and containing about 70 pages. It gives the Bible, Prayer Book, one-and-twenty metrical psalms, and will go little the smallest coat pocket or a purse.

All must go at the same uniform reduction. Now, when goods you desire are offered at a sacrifice, to procrastinate is to throw money away.

WHY HESITATE?

Don't make a mistake and go elsewhere looking for bargains, but come at once to headquarters. Every overcoat in the house has to go if prices will move them.

This is a chance of a lifetime to buy goods almost at your own price.

WHY DOES THIS BOY RUN?

He is Late for School. The old clock stopped and he didn't have a watch. He has been late before and will probably be suspended, and may grow up in ignorance the rest of his life. This might have been avoided if his parents had purchased one of Bellinger's clocks. He will give you your choice for $5.00.

He is also selling a first-class watch a perfect time-keeper, in nickle-silver cases for $8.00. Just receiving an elegant new stock of JEWELRY and SILVERWARE.

The Lovemakers.

In the Times, the two, in debate on the report of the committee on Ivins was discussed only to be interrupted by the delivery of Breckinridge Harmon's sophomoric oration on the foreign relations. This message announced that China's latest foreign difficulty was settled satisfactorily, concluding by that country paying the indemnity demanded, yet to be arranged, that Minister Denby resign a memorial for stirring of war, and that Taiwan returned with the bonds. A serious report had to be not quite peaceful but cordial. After the reading of the report, Mr. Ingalls, the above-mentioned young orator, the author of the report, was the speaker of the Freedom's gratitude. The resolutions were adopted unknowing from, cheerfully, was known the personality of the resolution on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, which was the subject of a long and tedious speechmaking, giving to the constitution in the district of Columbia, constitutional amendment, and the bill to repeal the Pacific Railroad Pacific Railroad. Mr. Cockran of New York, mentioned the death of Representative Fitzpatrick of New York and the House adjourned. The Senate was in session but a short time, the Senate in the Senate in error of the day was the passage of the Freedom's gratitude. The resolutions of satisfaction was expressed in error. The railroad crossing, switches and side tracks have been laid in Bellaire. J. F. Merrill, ex-postmaster at Acme has been arrested for a $200 shortage in his account.

Bessie Carr, a St. Ignace girl, froze her toes so badly while skating that she will be a cripple for life.

Chebaygan has a deep, flowing well of warm water and it keeps the grass green about it all winter long.

Boyne Falls News: It is estimated that between $60,000 and $40,000 will go out of this community this season for food and hay.

The contract for putting in the new water works system at Mancelona has been awarded to a Minneapolis firm at $11,500. The town voted to bond itself for $15,000 for the improvement.

The old Settlers will hold their annual meeting at Elk Rapids, Tuesday 1st. The officers of the association will meet at the Marshall House, Saturday, March 12th, to make arrangement for the event, which will eclipse all previous efforts. The usual Grand ball will be given.

Boyne Falls: A party of Grand Rapids & Indiana railway surveyors has arrived here and commenced a preliminary survey for a branch of that road from this place to Boyne City. The length of the branch will be about six miles. It is to be completed sometime the coming summer if it is be standard gauge.

In their extensive fishing business R. Connable & Sons use about 1,000 nets, which cost when new $20 each or $20,000 for the outfit. The repairs on these nets for the current year will cost about $5,000. As each net is 720 feet long the aggregate length of netting would cover a distance of more than two hundred and forty miles.

Boyne Citizen. The funeral services of Dr. J. L. Sanderson were held at the Presbyterian church Friday, February 2nd. He was 47 years old, what is usually considered the prime of life. His last few years presented the impressive spectacle of a silent waiting for the summons that was daily, almost hourly expected.

Peter Transeo, a railroad employe of Petoskey had been saving his earnings until he had $200 in gold; but instead of depositing it in one of the banks for safe keeping, he placed it in an old satchel and left it in his room. The latter part of last week he discovered that his room had been entered in his absence and his money stolen.

James B. Adsit, prominent attorney of Traverse City died at his home last week aged 37. He was an active member of the Baptist church and an enthusiastic Prohibitionist, seeking the race for attorney general upon the party's state ticket at the election. A cancer in the stomach developed about a year ago and doctors had given up all hopes of his recovery.

Harbor Springs cor. Petoskey Resources: The first mail from St. James Harbor Island, since between Christmas and New Years arrived here Tuesday, Feb. 9th. It started from St. James on Friday, and arrived at Cross Village on the night of the 6th, after a six day passage. The mail carrier encountered many hardships in making the trip with dogs, sleigh and snows.

Henry Lewis Pipp, of Kalkaska, has attained name in one of Capt. A. W. Anson's contracts for the year and for '92. Pipp is a young fellow of pluck. He was born in Brighton, Livingston county, in 1860, and has played ball for 12 years, part of the time professionally, but usually as a recreation from business cares. He is six feet, two inches in height and weighs 205 pounds. He has been identified with the firm of Pipp Bros. & Macfarlane in the hardware business in Kalkaska for the past seven years, the firm name at present being Pipp Bros. & Co.

Thomas N. Clark —as one of the witnesses in Michael Zerbe's lumbering job near Central Lake last Tuesday morning when he was taking his last load of logs to the lake, the neck yoke broke in going down a steep hill the sleighs ran up on a log by the roadside, overturning the load. When the yoke yoke gave out, Tom most have slid from the sleighs and endeavored to stop the team, and from his position could not know that the sleighs were overturning. When about an hour afterwards, some of the other boys came to the spot and saw the upturned load, they supposed that Tom had gone after help to get his load out of the way and being in a hurry to get by with their load, they immediately proceeded to remove the obstruction. Their consternation and horror can better be imagined than described when upon investigation they found the body of the finest fellows in northern Michigan crushed almost beyond recognition under the heavy logs.

It is rumored that negotiations are pending for the sale of the Arlington hotel property in Petoskey, and that the popular summer resort hotel will probably be in new hands next season.

Boyne Citizen, The spur of the G. R. & I. to be extended from the bowl factory, at Charlevoix, to this place, early next season, will also tend to make things boom. Of course there are a few who continue to doubt the railroads coming, but it is now an assured fact and cars will enter Boyne City not later than July 1st 1892. This road will continue on to East Jordan and will again tap the main line either at Mancelona or Kalkaska.

St. Ignace Republican. The ice bridge between St. Ignace and the Island moved out Wednesday morning toward Les Cheneaux, leaving open water from the merchandise pier to Chimney Rock and British Landing. A skiff could on that day be rowed from McGulpin's Point to either of the St. Martin Islands, touching at this city and the Island of Mackinac. The mail from the latter point was brought over in a skiff on Wednesday and Thursday, a very unusual event for the first week in February. On Wednesday the steamer St. Ignace had open water from her pier in this city to within three miles of Mackinaw City. The ice she passed through appeared to be from six to eight inches in thickness.

Cheboygan Tribune: James C. Rice, a former will know citizen of Mackinac Island and who had many old times acquaintances in this county, died at the Commercial hotel, Chicago, Monday, of general debility, aged 71 years. The deceased was born in Canada in 1818, but in 1828, at the age of 20 removed to the island, where for 52 years he was one of the leading and best known businessmen. He built a number of vessels and for many years was one of the most extensive fish dealers in this section. For several years he had made his home at the Commercial hotel, Chicago. Jim" Rice, as he was familiarly known, was an honest man and esteemed by all who knew him.

The fact that Secretary Blaine will not be a candidate defore the Minneapolis convention will set the presidential bee buzzing in many a bonnet where heretofore the music of that busy insect has been wisely suppressed. Numerous States, whose first choice was Blaine, absolutely and unquidedly, will have not our inner second choice in the shape of "favorite sons," and what, with the Maine statesman out of the field, would have been simply going through the form of nominating by acclamation the people's choice, now bids fair to be a hotly contested fight, the outcome of which will be the re-nomination of Benjamin Harrison. But one thing is certain, Mentlun will send a delegation solid for Alger.

Spurgeon's Little Prana.

The Rev. C. H. Spurgeon used to be very fond of sending his friends odd words which have a double meaning. One Thursday evening after the usual week-night service he thus addressed his deacons: "Brethren, I think it is much too bad that not a single deacon follows me on the platform in time for the service this evening."

The deacons at once began to exonerate themselves. One said, "Beg your pardon, sir, but I opened the door for you to go down on to the rostrum, and not one followed you," and several others stated that they were close behind the first speaker. Here was a dilemma the beloved and highly respected pastor saying one thing and the faithful and devoted deacons stating just the contrary. After a few minutes silence the pastor, with a smile brightening his homely countenance, replied, "I am right in saying not a single deacon followed me as you are all married."—London Tit-Bits.

Court Painters.

When the late King Charles of Wurtemberg was yet crown prince and he was ordered to become engaged to the Russian Grand Duchess Olga, he was shown a portrait of her. After regarding it intently, he exclaimed: "How daringly they have flattered her! The hair is too abundant, the eyes are too brilliant and the complexion too unhealthy." The courtiers asked in astonishment: "But does your royal highness know the grand duchess?" "I do not know her," was the reply, "but I know the court painters."

CURIOUS HYPNOTISM.

A Prisoner Becomes Unconscious During His Trial.

We read frequently of judges falling asleep during the hearing of a case but for a prisoner to be slumbering peacefully during the whole of his trial is probably an unprecedented occurrence. This curious spectacle was witnessed recently in the Tenth Police Court, Paris, says a Belfast News Letter, where a man named Emile Duval was charged with illegally personating a barrister and common swindling. After giving his name in answer to the magistrate, the defendant refused to reply to the questions put to him and his counsel explained to the court that Duval was fast asleep, although his eyes were wide open.

The magistrate was, of course, rather suspicious of such an explanation, and in order to prove that his client was not shamming Maitre Rayneval placed his hands before the prisoner's eyes, and, drawing them suddenly back, caused him to get up and leap over the barrier which separated the dock from the court. He was led back to his seat, but it was found impossible to awake him. The trial, however, was proceeded with, as Maitre Rayneval, in Duval's defense, explained that he was a highly hysterical, hypnotic subject, and that at times he would remain for long periods in what is known as the "automatic ambulatory" stage of the disease.

This means that the patient, although in a state of complete somnolence, acts like an ordinary individual and can travel, carry on a conversation, or play cards without anyone suspecting that he is asleep. His sensibility, however, he is entirely unconscious of what he has done while in that condition. He has had on one occasion traveled from Paris to Troyes without being conscious of doing so, and on recovering his senses, discovered that he had lost his overcoat with a sum of money in one of the pockets. He had no recollection as to where he had left the garment, but some months later, on telling his story to a surgeon of the Hotel Dieu, the latter stilledly threw Duval into a state of hypnotic sleep, during which he explained the position and number of the room in a hotel at Troyes where he had left the coat. The landlord was communicated with, and the story found to be perfectly correct.

The hearing of the case was terminated some time before Duval could be awakened, and the passing of the sentence was delayed for two hours, as the court did not wish to condemn a sleeping man. Finally, when he recovered his senses, the prisoner was informed that, on account of his extraordinary temperament, his offence would be visited only with a penalty of one month's imprisonment.

LARGEST IN THE WORLD.

Passenger Elevators on the Banks of the Hudson, New York—Cost.

The largest elevators for carrying passengers in the world have been completed on the banks of the Hudson near Weehawken, says Harper's Weekly. The high table-land in New Jersey, opposite New York city, and between the Hudson River and the Hackensack, has up to this time not been used as generally for purposes of pleasure and residence as it should have been. This elevated plain, known as the Palisades, is at its beginning some one hundred and fifty feet above high tide, and is over a mile wide at the same point. It stretches north for many miles up the Hudson River, and naturally rises in elevation as it proceeds. This high land has been accessible only by steep grades for wagon roads and by means of stairways which clinched inconveniently up the steep cliff. The Hudson county railway company, which operates the elevated road at Hoboken and controls many of the street car lines in that neighborhood, has of late years been extending these lines, and increasing the facilities for getting on top of the Palisades, and from one point of this high plateau to another. The most recent addition to the plant of this company has been in the building of huge elevators at Weehawken, where the ferry-boats from Forty-second and Jay streets, New York city, discharge their passengers, and where also the West Shore railway starts north and west to Albany and Buffalo. These elevators are the largest ever constructed for passengers, and in planning them the engineers have adopted new devices to secure their safety against accidents. From the elevators, which rise just from the water's edge, there is an immense viaduct, or elevated railroad, which runs some 900 feet here to the hill, where connections will be made with the various steam and horse cars which will run in one direction and another.

The Bifenburg products can compete with all rivals, and this fact will be demonstrated.

—The report that Seymour Iron had bought the steamer Soo City turns out to be incorrect. A Manistee dispatch states that they have closed negotiations for the purchase of the propeller Chicago, of the Crosby and Morton line, which has heretofore run between St. Joseph and Chicago. She is valued at $60,000, is licensed to carry 500 passengers, is first-class in every respect, and is said to be the fastest single screw boat on fresh water. She will run in connection with the steamer Petoskey between Chicago and Petoskey.

—The Democrat's report of the result of the East Jordan water bond question, last week, was not correct. The facts are these: Bonds were voted for water-works, but many of the electors were made to understand that it was only a ruse to raise money for railroad aid, a condition that materially aided in carrying the election. An injunction was issued by the Circuit Court Commissioner restraining the Council from issuing the bonds for water-works. The motion to dissolve the injunction was set hard at Traverse City by the Judge in Chambers, last week. E. W. Mayne appearing for the Council, and Messrs. Cruickshank and Corbett for the Complainants. The Judge held that the proceeding of the Council were regular, and refused to go behind the returns," in the claim of fraudulent election. He set the injunction stand until next term of court, to permit Complainants to amend their bill. But on the present showing the injunction will not stand.

Lanahpear Bros. are prepared to do house-cleaning, painting decorating and paper-hanging, etc., on most reasonable terms. Get your work done now, before the rush begins.

Notice to Teachers of Charlevoix Co.

Among the "Rules Governing Examinations," recently received by the County Commissioners throughout the State from the Superintendent of Public Instruction, are the following:

"The questions upon a given subject will be distributed at the same time to all applicants, and no recess will be allowed until the subject is finished."

"Applicants when absent at its opening, will not be admitted to the examination except by the unanimous consent of the Board of Examiners."

"No candidate must leave the room or communicate with any other candidate or any visitor during the examination, except by permission of the Commissioners."

The first of these practically decides that applicants for third grade certificates must complete their work on the first day of the examination.

WATER WORKS.

The question of Bonding the Village Is Submitted to the Electors.

The Village Council last Tuesday evening submitted to the electors the question of bonding the village in the sum of $25,000 for water works, and the matter is now squarely before the people.

It is proper that the question should be fully discussed, and all obtainable information placed before the people. Some of our citizens oppose the proposition on the ground that the village is already bonded to the outside limit of its ability. Be that as it may, there is consolation in the thought that we have full value to show for our indebtedness, and the consciousness of money well invested.

But the proposition now before us is one of business economy, at once embracing the considerations of public enterprise, sanitation and the safety of our homes and places of business. The evidence collected shows that in most cases, in this State, water-works plants are self-sustaining, and in many an income is derived equal to the interest on bonds. White Cloud is in this list. Holland writes that their system is self-sustaining, and Fenton reports a satisfactory system, with rates at $4.00 per house of five rooms and five persons. At many other points the rates are $5.00.

Coming nearer home, we cite the case of Traverse City: Years ago they granted a franchise to a private corporation, and a model system of water-works has since been in operation. Lately the village proposed to buy the plant but were refused. Why? Because it pays a trifle over 10 per cent over operating expenses. The Petoskey plant pays operating expenses, and almost reaches interest on bonds.

We can only base our calculations upon the experience of others; on that aside. Shall we have water-works? In the light of existing necessities, in the matters of sanitary and fire-protection, and the beginning of a decision in our existence confronting us, in our opinion the electors of Charlevoix will make a mistake if they do not adopt the measure.

Insurance men tell us that a satisfactory system of water-works will reduce the rate of insurance on Bridge street from half to one per cent., and in other localities in proportion. Less than one-half of one per cent. on the assessed valuation will pay the interest on the bonds! We regard opposition to the measure as false economy. We venture the assertion that very few who oppose the proposition would refuse to pay a trifle annually a sum equal to the increase of tax, to bring the desired benefits.

Charlevoix, with its surpassing beauty, great natural advantages, and bright prospects, can afford, at this point in its history—a period of transition to a new life—to step upon a higher plane of public enterprise.

This question of a water-test, which has been discussed of late, as a contingent of the water-works question, should at this time be dismissed. No intelligent person will assert that with a frozen surface this is a proper time for such a test.

Impartial scientific investigation by the State has made record repeatedly, that with under conditions which exist here, will become impregnated with disease, and the evidence sustains the record.

Norwood Notes.

Henry Superman returned from East Jordan Wednesday.

It looks as though we would have to draw ice from Antrim City this year.

Henry Superman will run the Norwood mill for G. V. Nash this summer.

Fred Myers has taken the contract of G. V. Nash, of cutting his shingles this summer. Timber will be gotten out for a six million cut, all cedar.

The dance last Friday night was well attended by masqueraders and a nice time was had.

The Rev. Mr. Barney failed to make connections last week, so we are unable to tell you about the "evils of the age going."

The school exhibition was postponed on account of the revival meetings now being held here.

TO LOUISE.

OFFAND, if fickle Fate shall deem
Me worthy, Dearest, to be your lover,
Whom you receive
In your shoes,
I shall not grieve
To be your slave,
A CONSTANT lessee with unfaithful lords,
Five leaves, quoth expressive Hamlet
Of blisses and blessedness!

To one of the Sons and Mothers
To Naples, where—well, guess the rest—
Of course I shall be glad
If you meet a friend of mine
Where Jupiter Jove has come to snare
Unfathomable souls of the deep
Of your cognomen.—

If you would have me go with you to Jo,
Have the fairest in Jamaica
And chickens by the score, you are through!
Like faded flowers
Will you wear through her blues, dear one,
Or my poor love you?—let me be
And I would bring you to Jo in the air!
Than waste the hours.

But if you'd have a Jerusalem car
To ramble, honey bee, my dear—
Now that's another thing, Mrs. Wonder
Would never forbear,
If you would only say that's quite
A nice whole day to will undoes,
A taste of happiness that's—one
And—over above.

Why, then, take this I offer you,
Who'll find that I can win, in Jove
Despite the foreign who
All around Tie Belvo,
For never have I loved before,
Although in truth I've met great store
Of maids, for whom I'd be I wrong
Only Jemima.

And then, my sweet, our love will be
Not long, nor fickle,
As earthly paradise will die,
Nor ever shall
Eyes will take the least I need,
If you will your affection lend,
If may be, until the end,
Your valentine, dear.

SPRISED THE TEACHER.

Valentines, valentines, the stationer's which was lined with them, the counter was piled with them—tiny nothings, such a medley of cupids, arrows, golden darts, and flower-peeping through the dainty white and gold lace; and, last of all, the sweet verses under these mute bold beauties. No wonder the dainty maidens blushed, brought their lipsies, and with one voice exclaimed, "Lovely, lovely!"

The next instant, like a sudden ray of sunlight, they faded into the shop. Mr. Popham, the stationer, a pale, thin little man, who always looked as if he were cold, began to think it was a pouring day after all.

"Oh, I choose this, and I choose this just—wait—let me think—and this—"

How the heads bobbed and the hands daintily lifted one after another, bright eyes still peeping from delights. Mr. Popham began to feel a warm glow within his heart that spread and spread until he was so comfortable. The within began to smooth out of his face, his shoulders came down, his crooked spines relaxed and looked comfortable like the rest of him. Mr. Popham was sweet to love a fine time.

It had been a cloudy, chilly day, a few people had stopped in the stationer's, but had not bought anything. He had been growing cold, his wrinkles tighter, his shoulders higher, and his fingers more crooked, all day; now he would have a fine trade. Every one of those dear little noddles would buy a valentine, some more than one, perhaps. One, two, three, four, five of them, five valentines, sure, perhaps six or. If! that would be—

"I choose—"

Would they ever stop choosing? Suddenly the volume closed, and only one was to be heard, in a half whisper. As Mr. Popham was saying, he had to listen to frowns, he couldn't hear a word. Then they all began to whisper and tip toes on their toes, and smile and bold their heads over the counter, and—he thought he did hob their heads! What tantalizing silliness! Why, he didn't believe it, every mother's daughter of them tip-toed out of the door, giggling and whispering, chattering until they disappeared from sight.

Never was Mr. Popham more disgusted in his life. He closed upon the door, shot and locked as his back, where he stood, expected to make some, but the door entry, and drew himself up into such a rigid height, he looked like a little starched dwarf. It was very cloudy, dark and chilly outside.

The next day was St. Valentine's Day, admiral and darling day of lovers. Lovers, in a certain school-room not the five hundred miles, were in a look behave. The teacher was having a hard day of it. Five pairs of eyes constantly strayed from the books to the teacher, from the teacher back to them and then exchanged meaning glances with each other. Five pairs of feet kept in unusual restless shuffle, and kept the rest of the school in a shuffle, too.

The teacher had no idea that a certain five were in cause of this, that loosed her for the school, the whole school day, but could not tell which one or some to guess. The more she commanded and threatened the worse they grew. Her patience was at sixes and sevens. The teacher, failed in geography. The idea of being so stupid as to say what! what were the principal products of the Shenandoah Valley, "Hoes."

Miss Wade, the teacher, was either pretty nor sweet-tempered, but she did try to teach them, to pay the parents all agreed they—the scholars—never lagged so much in one term before.

Would it never be four o'clock? Miss Wade pressed her hands to her aching head. That ceaseless, creeping hustling had set her nerves on edge, and the bold, disobedient eyes of the inattentive children were enough to drive a saint.

At last the clock came in the shape of a little, fair, red-haired, cold-faced boy on the way home. Meg's foreboding that innocent, half-pathetic, innocent smile of his had saved him. Brother was in salvation for mischief today. It was nothing that he did, it was the trouble he always fit that. She did not much care for him, he was a cold-blooded little prig and tattler, enough to make a sister blush. Meg was antimonious, a little proud, quite sensitive, and very fond of her brother. She gave him his parcel. But he took it from her with a disposition expert enough for head to hang with pain, and then, of a cold like a fiend. He held even Meg, his chief and looked out of his wicked eyes at some chance passer-by, pointing for the rest of the school to look, holding his hand over his mouth and giggling more idiotic-like still. Then Miss Wade felt that she could not and would not endure any further naughtiness from this demoniac incarnate, and when every scholar had arisen and stretched his or her neck, she was fairly choked. Some one must make funds an example of, here was a good chance.

"Sammy Porter—in earnest—come. At the sullen moment a knock came at the door. Miss Wade smoothed her face as best she could and answered the knock.

There in the doorway stood Mr. Popham the stationer, bowing and smiling in a very unusual way. He placed a package in the wondering teacher's hands.

"I was requested to deliver this to you, miss. Yes, indeed, to you, miss. A fine school you have, miss. You, sonny, a fine school, miss. Good day, miss." And with another bow and flourish he disappeared.

The teacher walked slowly back to the desk and would have held the parcel in one side. All at once she noticed how faces on her desk and how eyes popped out of the window, as she stood at the door. She looked up; there they sat in their prim glaring, scandalous as ever. Every eye was fixed on her with a strange curiousness, even Sammy forgot that moment to smile.

Miss Wade's head began to tremble, also slowly and the cord, removed the wrapper, and behold! a time and gold covered book. Furnes, Longfellow's poems. Her name was on the fly leaf. What a fine clear print. What fine illustrations. She turned to the blank leaf to look for a clue to this mystery. There was printed a gentle verse, beside which was written in the large, even letters of a lady-writing—

"With our best love. Long may you teach in the school room on the hill."

No name.

It occurred an age to the waiting scholars that the teacher had over the book, it had not been looking. Every eye was sparkling, every face smiling.

Humph! her cheeks flushed the brown, and the glass clapped their hands. Sammy Porter was called back like a jack in the box, his face fairly shining with delight.

"Hush," said Ora, at last. Teacher is going to make a speech."

Miss Wade leaned heavily on the book restingon the desk as she stood before them. "Dear children," she began, in a very unusual voice, "sit down, and, hot face on the desk and rest."

The children were silent, and gazed at her with wonder and awe. It was the least supposed that teachers ever cried. Two Miss Wades! Two Miss Wades with an silly ordinary, wonderful, wonderful, wonderful! Sammy Porter, the school-boy, who was the pride of the teachers held in reserve, like choice pieces for the highest form for occasions, wet made a neat little speech to express her thanks.

If her head hadn't ached so bad, all her school hadn't been so cross, if she hadn't thought such hard thoughts of the scholars—well—if she hadn't been about to fresh Sammy! No wonder she cried.

Sammy crighted about like an eel, and worried to the door, and stood with anxious perplexed eyes at the door, wondering what was the matter. He was naturally bravely up to the platform and stood at her elbow, and he leaned her work the end of his finger by bonnie, his face as sober as a judge, and looked up at her. "Say, teacher, ain't you glad?" A sweet look of her face. Sammy forgot and touched her; but when she looked down at the sweet face with the freckles, beautiful, honest gaze, she the good-natured mouth. Here Miss Wade came and laid, was not strong enough to resist the temptation.

She made a motion he did not understand, and he stooped to her lips. She clasped hands her arms and kissed him before the school. Then she sat and to think I cause so near whipping him. Sammy was astonished to see them and she kissed every one of them.

"Come, boys, I wish to take each one by the hand."

Sammy had recovered his equilibrium. He stood in three with exaggerated behind.

"Boy, teacher, this begun B. She said, I choose teacher for my valentine! Then the rest wanted to choose you—the rest to the once, you know. Same Tucker told me should kick me. Then thought of having one big valentine, and I chose you, and around last night to the school, and the man they bought it. Well, I guess I'm tired, and I'm stopped out of breath, then with a snap of the eyes, I guess you pleased you teacher."—Household Monthly.

WHATEVER regret is felt for the death of the last pretender to the British throne must be that which it is natural to feel when a man in his youth, and especially when in extreme health, dies. There was nothing in the character of the deceased to embitter his loss. He had not made himself unpopular, he would make him a different role to play in life, have endeared him to the English people either as a king or as a prince. His marriage was a mere piece of statecraft, so that there is no romantic element here to add to the sadness of his being taken away; and while death, and especially the death of a prince in which life is felt to hold out prospects so brilliant, must at the other time seem sad, this is a case where the affliction which follows the shock is not likely to be either deep or lasting. There is no question that the Prince of Wales is the heir to the throne by his brother George, illustrated as that man has litterte been to the British throne.

THE main for circus performances in theatres—much respected for giving us, in "The Country Circus," one of the most amusing pieces of theatrical fun we have seen for years. Every building impressive, who can number capital enough to buy an excellent Business, a few barred house covered with paper, and to hire a second-hand clown, has started on the road with a "combination," which is brilliant beyond description—on the bill boards. Most of the animals in these circuses are capable of reflection and some of the performances act as if they were of the same still material. But these are small and immature circuses, which thinly scattered and overlook in their desire to make the acquaintance of the latest theatrical fad.

CATCH any top of ten or twelve, and ask them what they read you all find they are chapped and rough and bleeding. Girls of the same age have nice smelling things on their dressing table that they put on their hands at night, but Mr. Bay is left to the care of nature, and she is not very tender to her sons—at this time of the year.

CHANGED HIS MIND.

Mistake Made By a Moralist Trying to Teach a Lesson.

As old gentleman, with an appearance of authority, stood looking at a number of workmen who were putting up an enormous building, remarks the Average Traveler. He manifested a keen interest in what was going on. He examined beams and scrutinized the great sieve that was to form the mesh at the entrance of the mammoth structure.

A thoughtful fellow came along and speaking to the old gentleman, asked: "Would you object to giving me a few moments of your time?"

"No, sir."

"Will you step over here, then, out of the way?"

"I will."

They stood apart from the busy crowd about them. The old gentleman looked inquiringly at the thoughtful-looking fellow and said:

"Well sir?"

"I have called you aside to speak a few serious words to you. At first it may strike you that I am presumptuous, but after awhile you will see that my motives, if not commendable, are at least honest. As I came along there just now I saw you standing in old forgetful attention, gazing at the exteriors of this great building, and I wondered if it had ever occurred to you that it will not be long until—now perhaps—the great house now going up will belong to some one else. You are going to protest I see, but wait a moment. Your race in this life is nearly run. A few days more you, as thousands as one of those foundation stones will slink beneath the surface of the earth. The anxiety you felt in this great building will be gone—all gone—you will be over. Please wait until I get through. We will not consider as to the future dwelling place of your soul; we will not hint that your deeds have not been noble and generous enough to insure you eternality of peace but we will do this. We will question the judgment of a man who puts foot on the crumbling brink of time, giving up his few remaining days to gazing with infantine rapture at a building projected by greed and executed in vanity. Pardon me, if I seem harsh, and force you yourself sufficient patience to listen to me until I am done. A few more hours and the world will move on without you. You won't be in it, as the vulgar saying goes. No one will miss your energy in a sort of self-gratulatory way. You will be forgotten."

"Hold on," said the moralist, mildly protesting. "Wait until I have uttered a few more words and then I will let you return to your vain occupation. Now you I were a wealthy man and knew my time on earth was short what would I do? Put up a great building and set as I have done to live always? No; I would do some good with money; I would leave behind me one man at least who would hold my memory dear. I would select some poor, grateful fellow, let me tell you, he is only broke off—I am the most grateful man in this world. In the secluded frame of memory I now hold no picture of a man who gave me 10 cents five years ago. Now, let me tell you a story."

"Your talk is worth $5," said the old gentleman, "and I'm sorry you didn't let me make it for you."

"Save what?"

"The talk!"

"How save?"

"By telling you that I'm not putting up that building—that I merely stopped here to look at the workmen. I am the pastor of the Third Presbyterian church and—what's your name? Why? Well, good day, and I will forget to be grateful for all you put in this life."

WHAT MINISTERS WEAR.

Silken Sashes—Tall Attire Prefered by Congress.

I have been parading the suburbs of Washington diplomacy recently in a view to knowledge. It would appear that the United States never has secured what manner name an ambassador. An embassador is a sort of peculiar king-pin, but we don't see him in our game. We are content with members and counsels. The president court dress, prescribed merely by custom of 1867, is black, coat, a silk swallow-tail. This occasions a very hard contrast, and makes many of our representatives look like farm-hands.

The statute of 1867 was found necessary to nip a budding gayety of dress set growing by "John Quincy Adams. It is not my intention to disparage admiration of the Adams family. It began well with old John, and continued in full tilt with fair repute to present times. But John Quincy, of all his brightness, his vigor, his ... must now and then have been drowsy off his mental reservation. He wrote poetry, for one thing, and he bedaughtily aim of making a man, albeit he never did. Back in his day, too, he fabricated an American court dress—a garish thing which would well become the man with a mind who precedes the band. In minutes of this hour, and indeed on the frosty stands indicated were given to capariment themselves therein.

He called for a blue coat bright with buttons of brass, gold braid and epaulets of the sort common in pictures of General Scott. White breeches in the loose species accompanied this blue coat, and a pair of silver shoes with silver buckles, adorned the story. A cocked hat with a cockade and a sword in a scabbard of gold, completed the ensemble. Single as its wearer walked about, a fetish in the Adams uniform. Everything save the sword and cocked hat, dyed the coat and breeches the color of a funeral and you are.—Washington Letter to Kansas City Times.

Indians in Massachusetts.

Intermarriage, with colored people the Marshpee Indians in Massachusetts have decreased about four hundred. They occupy a reservation on the shore of the lake in Marshpee township, Mashpee by the Cape Cod folk. Much the relief of the tribe, is the disaster, and as Indian boy marries a mulatto and from Sandwich. There are in the lake are owned by a big club of which Grover Cleveland, Joe Jefferson, R. W. Gilder, Chauncey Wood of Boston, and C. E. Norton are members.

HOMES FOR A DOLLAR EACH.

Immense Droves of Horses in Queensland Have Become a Nuisance.

No one can buy a horse in this city, says the Washington Star, which is as far any purpose, for less than $100. A broken down car horse is worth nearly this amount. A horse for a grocer's cart in New York Chicago or San Francisco will cost from $150 to $200. In Queensland, Australia, however, the horse market is away down. A good, well broken animal can be bought for $5. Farmers in the interior cannot afford to send horses to Brisbane for sale because ordinary stock will not bring more than $1.75 per head. They shoot them instead. And, what is still more startling they pay at the rate of 62 cents per head for hauling them short.

All of these statements are strictly correct. The colony of Queensland is now seriously discussing the advisability of passing a law imposing a tax on all stallions and authorizing the appointment of inspectors to see that all unfavorable animals are killed. All over Queensland they are going to keep down horses as we keep down the superabundance of dogs in the city of Washington. The same state of affairs holds in some of the other Australian colonies.

Horse breeding in Australia was for many years a remunerative business. A great demand was created by the taking up and occupying of new country, from the opening up of new gold fields and for the prosecution of the sugar industry.

Every one who had land began breeding horses. Now the demand has ceased, the sugar industry is declining, the mining is stationary and the owners of what was formerly new country are sellers instead of buyers. The consequence is that the whole country is overrun with unsalable horses. They cannot be eaten like sheep and cattle, and a boiling down factory for the manufacture of glue and other products failed after consuming 20,000 animals.

Now, in a semi-wild state, they overrun the entire interior of the colony. The best of them bring at auction not more than $15 or $14 a down. Property-holders in New South Wales have relieved themselves of the burden on their grazing lands by shooting them. On the Barwon river, within two years, between 60,000 and 70,000 head were destroyed, at a cost to their owners of 25 cents per head. Queensland has now the same trouble to fight. A law entitled "The Marsupial Destruction Act" is now in force, directed against the kangaroos. It stands the increase of these native animals. But a kangaroo skin is worth $2.72 in the open market at Brisbane.

He not more need is there then of a ... destruction act when horses are large animals, and more are more numerous than kangaroos and are equally worthless. This is the question which is agitating the property-owners of Queensland at the present time. It is learned from the recent bulletin of the department of agriculture of that colony. Will it pay Australians to ship these horses to the United States? The passage to San Francisco will take twenty days. The Pacific Ocean at certain times is always smooth. One of the Australian steamships will probably carry from 700 to 1,000 horses at one trip. The import duty on horses and mules at present is $30 per head. It resolves itself into a question of water carriage.

A DOG WITH A HEART.

How He Mourned When His Pal Got Was Left in Peril.

Here is a pathetic little story, illustrative of the affection that may be cultivated between a dog and a cat, says the Baltimore County Union, and being a strictly true story makes it all the more worthy of telling. A family in the town had a dog about 14 years old and a cat about 9, both of which they had raised.

Between these animals the most marked affection sprang up, and they were inseparable friends. They ate together, slept together, played together, and if by chance they became separated they each showed in the most marked manner their discomfort and unhappiness. If the cat got out of the house the dog would meet persistently and dolefully until she came back, and if the dog happened to be absent the cat acted in a similar manner.

A short time ago the cat died, and was then her companion manifested the most unmistakable signs of distress. He pushed her body around with his nose, apparently trying to wake her all the while whining in the most woebegone manner.

A little boy in the family, whose constant companions the animals had been, decided to bury his dead friend, and, securing a box, decided to put the body in it, and, after nailing on the lid, carried it into the garden, dug a hole and covered it, as he supposed, securely.

In the mean time the dog moved about the house, refusing to either eat or drink, and looked so distressed that it was painful to see him. One day the boy noticed the dog's nose and head were covered with mud, and he thought at once strook him that he had found his friend's grave and had tried to resurrect the body. He went into the garden and found that his suspicions were correct.

The dog had actually dug down and uncovered the box, but as the lid was securely nailed on, he could not bring the body to the surface. The dog followed the boy to the grave and whined and howled piteously while the boy made arrangements to resinter the cat. After a good many days the dog gradually came back to his appetite, and, although still more or less doleful, had apparently regained his normal condition. This is a homely little story, but it has one merit—it is strictly true.

Indians in Massachusetts.

Among the many hermits in Maine, John Hallins, of Kay's Corners, in Wakefield, is the quietest. He lives in a tumble-down hut, through the roof of which rain and snow, sunlight and starlight have easy access. He cooks his own food, makes his own bed and does all the work about his "castle" including the care of an emaciated horse. He believes in witches, and every night, despite his seventy years, he mounts guard with a shotgun in a short and unpleasant chase.

THERE is fighting over the land in the Cedar river community, twenty miles west of Milan, Tenn. For a long time a feud has existed between the Pattons and Jones, and John Patton killed Frank Jones, the son of the family, in a fight. Jones's brother, Frank Patton, killed John Patton, and John Patton killed Frank Patton, the last named being a boy of 17. Two days later, John Patton was killed by a posse of 30 men who had come to defend them when he died. Henry Parfect repudiated the deed, and lands the land with shotguns.

IT is a strange story. Deputy Marshals Burrell and Reynolds arrived in Atlanta, Ga., after a big haul in Raines. The deputies raided three stills. Seven men were captured. While on the way from the place of capture to Gainesville Deputy Burrell followed some disappointed Deputy Reynolds. Reynolds had four of the moonshiners in charge and Burrell had three. Two of Burrell's prisoners were handcuffed together. Reynolds had John Lowell, married with four of Burrell. Suddenly the two men separated, and, to Reynolds' horror, they were seen while the other appeared to be out over eighteen years old. The sister the dead and dazed sister and mother of young Lowell. Mrs. Lowell, clasping her dead boy's head around the body, pitching his arms to his side, kissing the lonely and that was being reached by the two women, and, as she was on handcuffed, broke for the woods. Reynolds shack Mrs. Lowell off and would have fired at the retreating moonshiner had not the dead boy's mother sprang directly between them. The young fellow made good his escape.

POLITICAL.

THE Democrats carried the municipal election in Duluth.

THE United States Supreme Court rendered its decision in the Nebraska gerrymandering case in favor of Mr. Bell. The opinion was delivered by Chief Justice Fuller. All the members of the court excepting Justice Field concurred in the opinion. Mr. Justice Harlan, Justice Gray and Brown did not concur in one of the opinions. The decision overrules the decision of the Supreme Court of Nebraska, holding that Mr. Boyd was not a citizen and that Governor Thayer was entitled to hold over until a successor had been duly elected. The main question was whether Mr. Boyd became a citizen of the United States without making out naturalization papers, his father, a British subject, never having become fully naturalized, although he had declared his intention to take out the necessary papers. The son went to Nebraska when it was a Territory and became one of the pioneers of the State. He claimed that he had never exercised the privilege of a foreigner, but had held several public offices, including that of mayor of his town, and had been twice elected to the State. The Court says that the citizenship was raised. A long controversy ensued as to whether Boyd, the former governor, Thayer, was entitled to the seat. The Court says that Boyd has voted and for a long time held public office is sufficient to establish his right to citizenship.

A manufacturing establishment employing seventy-five hands, has been secured for Bellaire.

H. S. Newson has been appointed postmaster at Burgess Charlevoix County, vice S. W. Salter resigned.

East Jordan Enterprise: We hear that Register of Deeds, Orlando Hair will erect a fine residence on his farm near this Village the coming season.

Captain Matthews, of the life-saving station at Frankfort, has resigned. He is the chap who shot one of the men in the arm during a quarrel last fall.

The Democrat of last week says that A. P. Heasley formerly County Clerk of this County, has been admitted to the bar and intends to practice law from East Jordan.

Eugene Wilson, of Antrim County lately brought into East Jordan three elm logs, taken from one tree, that scaled 3,360 ft. This at $5 per 1000 brought his load to a trifle over $25.

Ralph, the young son of Hugh McAuley, of Elk Rapids, drank half an ounce of laudanum while his mother was out, and all the doctors in the town couldn't save him.

Rose & Carmichael's new saw-mill at Hay Springs will start up March 15th. The mills at Boyne City, Boyne Falls and Advance contributed the lumber for rebuilding the mill.

East Jordan Enterprise: We are informed that the Erie L. Hackley will be back here again the coming season, but not in charge of captain Pillow, who is now at Tacoma Washington.

H. McFarlane, of the steamer St Ignace, has an old penny in his possession which was taken from old Fort Michilimackinac, of massive frame. It bears date 1737 and was found by William Harris.

The Cheboygan lumber company secured a $1,000 verdict against the Delta Transportation company, because a spark from the steamer Michie M's stack set fire to their dock and lumber piles.

Elk Rapids has just purchased two hose carts and 1,000 feet of hose. The temporary pump house for their system of water works is completed, and steps are being taken to organize a "Volunteer Fire Company."

Allan B. Chapman, son of the late H. B. Chapman, and owner of a considerable amount of property at Bay Springs and in other parts of this county, died at his home in Hillsdale last week from the grip.

Traverse Bay Eagle: A. W. Wait is pushing the work on the C. & W. M. building on the extension as fast as the weather will permit. The depot at Elk Rapids will be the same size as the one here, is nearly completed.

Bellaire Breeze: Fred Smith, formerly of this place but now of Advance Charlevoix County, wishes it announced that as soon as navigation opens he will come to Bellaire with a steamboat with he will run on the upper lakes.

Captain McCarty, of St. Ignace, made the run from St. Ignace to Mackinaw Island in eight minutes in his 30 boat the other day. He said the trip could be made in shorter time if it were not for the large cracks in the ice.

One day last week the store of S. P. Ferris, at Walloon on Bear Lake, was completely destroyed by fire. Mr. Ferris estimates his loss on the stock of goods at $200 and that of A. M. Cole, who was the owner of the building, at $500. No insurance.

East Jordan people voted $10,000 worth of bonds for "public improvements," and now that the railroad is coming their way they have sworn out an injunction to restrain the council from issuing the bonds. They claim they really believed the money was intended for water works.

Cheboygan Tribune: Parties are getting out and drawing birdseye maple logs to the station for shipment to New York City. The freight is about $70 per carload. About two carloads are at the station ready to go forward. The bark on the logs is all removed by pounding it off with the poll of the axe, so as not to make any cuts in the solid timber.

The Attorney General has set aside States Games Warden Hampton's ruling that the setting of numbers of "tods" or "tip-ups" from an the ice on inland lakes, was a violation of the law. Consequently Mr. Hampton publishes notice that all deputies will discontinue prosecutions on that line.

It is reported that two men by the name of Lelland, mail carriers, started to return to their home at Beaver Island from Cross Village recently. They finally brought up again at Cross Village after being out on the lake, floating about on the ice for a week and encountering great perils and untold suffering.

Charles L. Fuller, aged seventy-nine years, and his sixteen-years-old son were taken to Grand Rapids from Antrim County, to answer the charge of being moonshiners. At the examination witnesses testified that the old man had a rude still in the woods near his house and sold the raw liquor to the neighbors and in the lumber camps. The officers introduced as evidence a lot of potato and corn mash and some of the liquor. The old man was bound over for the grand jury, and the boy discharged.

Boyne Falls News: Engineer J. Koep, of Petoskey, commenced, last week, to survey a route for a branch from this place to Boyne City. It will follow the old Addis road bed as near as practicable. It is very slow and tedious work the transit and level in the snow, and especially in the severe weather we have been having lately, but the survey will be completed by the middle of next week. It is the general opinion that branch will be built early in the spring.

Petoskey Record: The ice crop is very promising here. The field in front of this port is broken snow ice of no account. About two miles out is a narrow streak of blue ice but it is not over six inches thick. There is however good ice over in Harbor about eight inches in thickness, which will probably be increased to ten inches before the 1st of March. Cobable & Son are making arrangement to cut their stock there and ship round the bay on cars. It will cost them about twice as much per ton as when cut there.

Frankfort had a murder last saturday night. The killing occurred as a result of a saloon row. Saloon-keeper E. H. Stra ble became involved in a wordy racket with Capt. Chas Sutherland. Sutherland left the saloon, followed by Strauble and his wife. Words followed, and Sutherland slapped the saloon-keeper. There in a general melee between Sutherland and the two, Strauble threw his left arm about Sutherland's neck, at 1, pulling a revolver shot him just above his left eye. Sutherland was just alive Monday noon. Strauble and his wife are in jail.

It must be that Presidential complications have blinded the Democratic Congressmen to their promises to their party, when they got down to business at Washington. They promised that when they got rules for governing the business of the House they would not present a new tariff bill, complete in detail, but they were going to attack the iniquitous tariff by sections. Well, two months passed before they could decide on a code of rule. Weeks have passed since they adopted rules, but what have they done? Echo answers. What? Springer, the sponsor of the crazy quilt method, was going to put wool on the free list, but has not yet offered a bill to that effect. He waiting for a report from the census department in regard to the production and consumption of wool. In other words he does not know, in his own mind, until he can get the official figures whether it would be policy for the Democrats to advocate free wool or not. We are of the opinion that when he gets enlightened he will not be so anxious for free wool. It is the same with other features of the McKinley bill. The people are realizing that the calamity wailers were false prophets and instead of the new tariff law being a tax on the consumers, as free traders predicted, it is just the reverse. "The poor man" sees that his dinner pail has not been "taxed" one cent. Consumers of woolen goods find they can buy goods as low, and in many cases lower than before the passage of the bill. Every intelligent person knows that the bill has been a benefit to encouraging the establishing of new industries and stimulating old. The tariff on tin plates has been the means of the building of several large plants employing thousands of men and yet unknown is selling as low as ever before the bill was passed. The manufacture of pearl buttons has been established on a large scale, employing many at good wages. The silk plush feature of the bill has been the cause of new industries, in that line, being established, furnishing employment to many and yet consumers find that instead of plushes being advanced in price, owing to the tariff, that they are being sold today for less money than before the passage of the McKinley bill. It is possible, yes, quite likely, that they realize the danger, at this critical period, of experimenting.

A Letter From One of General Custer's Aides-Captain.

To the Editor of the Sentinel:—

I have noticed with considerable interest the charge made by the New York Sun against Gen. H. A. Alger, and would like to tell what I know about that brave officer and his war record.

I had the honor to command a Company of his regiment, the 5th Michigan Cavalry, and participated in nearly every battle in which that regiment engaged. During a portion of the time I was a prisoner of war. I was with Alger at Winchester, Cedar Creek, at the fight at Sheperdstown, in which the 5th covered the retreat across the river of the Cavalry bridge, and my company was the last one across, Gen. Alger following us. We dismounted five times to fight before crossing. Gen. Alger exhibiting the same daring courage that characterized him in every battle in which he was engaged. Every officer of the regiment now alive will remember that Alger was sick at that time, and I remember distinctly when he went to the hospital.

Alger came to our regiment under trying circumstances. He had been Major of the 7th cavalry, and was promoted to Colonel and transferred to the 5th. There was a good deal of growling among the officers of our regiment at this appointment, as it checked promotion among our line officers. But inside of a month Col. Alger won the heart of every officer and man in the regiment. They learned to love him as a commander, and admire his skill and bravery. No braver man ever drew a saber.

The New York Sun, nor any coterie of candidate-killers, can never make an officer or man of the old 5th cavalry believe there is a spot on the military record of Russell A. Alger. He was a knightly and daring soldier, and would die rather than dishonor himself or his flag.

Yours,
HARRISON BERDAN,
late Capt. Co. I, 5th Mich. Cav.

Geo. Medsker narrowly escaped serious injury one day last week, while loading logs: the boom-chain broke, letting part of the load drop down on him.

Miss Nettie Shrier, of Charlevoix, spent Washington's birthday with her friend, Miss Rinie Kane.

It is almost miraculous that more fatal accidents do not occur in the woods among the lumbermen. To hear them recount their hairbreadth escapes makes one's hear stand on end.

The following is the report of District No. 1 for the month ending January 29: A grade—Roy Pierce, 95; Nelson Tillotson, 92; Ada Horton, 99; Tillie Horton, 98; Norman Eley, 77. B grade—Grace Scott, 87; Ida Gray, 90; May Scott, 84; Eddie Eley, 84; Donovan Eley, 83; Martin Cole, 75; Ida Cole, 81; Ella House, 85. C grade—Walter Scott, 86; Myrtle Scott, 85; Aaron Ion, 72; Ella Petoskey, 90. D grade—Oscar Tillotson, 95; John Yohr, 93; Alman Horton, 90; Freddie Miller, 72; Durell Horton, 70. Nellie M. —To RENT.—An improved farm, for a term of years. Address O. T. Booth, Oden, Mich.

It is safe to say that the Michigan farmer who is this winter getting out and selling hardwood logs at $9.50 to $2 a thousand is making as much clear money per thousand as the mill operator who buys, cuts and sells the lumber therefrom. The farmer in the first place wants to get the timber off his land in order to clear it and what he gets for the logs is so much gain. Thus it looks as if an investment in good hardwood farming lands in Michigan is better than putting money in some speculative rat-hole.—Northwestern Lumberman.

A Wonder Worker.

Mr. Frank Huffman, a young man of Burlington, Ia., states that he had been under the care of two prominent physicians, and used their treatment until he was not able to get around. They pronounced his case to be Consumption and Incurable. He was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds and at that time was not able to walk across the street without resting. He found, before he had used half of a dollar bottle, that he was much better; he continued to use it and is to-day enjoying good health. If you have any throat, lung or chest trouble try it. We guarantee satisfaction. Trial bottle free at F. G. Hines & Co's.

Itch on human and horses and all animals cured in 30 minutes by Woolfrey's Sanitary Lotion. This never fails. Sold by F. G. Hines, druggist, Charlevoix.

—The caisson for the center-pier of the railroad bridge is being sunk and "floated" into place at these piers to do on the Allmendinger contract is to place the stone, which will be finished this month.

—Samuel Colier and wife, of South Arm, were here Saturday and Sunday, visiting their son Thomas and daughter Maggie. Mr. Colier has taken the SENTINEL continuously for twenty-three years.

—Rev. Mr. Barney, ex-actor, who has been holding temperance meetings here, lectured at the Congregational church Monday evening, on his experiences behind the scenes. Mr. Barney is an intelligent and earnest speaker, sincere beyond question, and no greater compliment can be paid his abilities than to say that he proves himself to have been a good actor. The actors was well received by a large audience.

—E. W. Seymour, of the Seymour line of steamers, was in town Thursday, arranging matters for his boats for the season. He was in consultation with the local agent of the line, Capt. O. E. Wilber, and, the wish being favorable to the thought, a gentleman, in the presence of the writer, wanted to bet the Captain that he would command the steamer Tuttran next summer. The Captain assumed one of his phlegmatic expressions of consumption that plainly said he doubt if he wanted to, but said: "No; I have never staid where you is the summer time I was a boy, and I want to see how it seems. I shall sell groceries and bad adhere the hearing lines of the Seymour line next summer. But both boats will have good men. Capt. Dickinson is now selling the F. & P. M. No 2, and will not come back to the Petoskey, so far as I am learn. But look out for great steamboat service at the old Fox dock." And the Captain scooped a half pound of oyster right into the tea-chest.

—We are glad to be able to say that Mr. S. M. See has improved somewhat in the past week, and strong hopes of his recovery are entertained.

—Mr. Wm. Burton, engineer of the Elk Rapids Chemical Works, died at that place last week of grippe, and was buried by the Odd Fellows. He was 35 years old, and had many friends. He was the son of Mrs. Thomas Kelly, of this place, by her first husband, who was an English army officer. Mr. Burton was a half brother of John Kelly and Mrs. John Lamphear, of this place.

—Those who oppose the waterworks proposition, cannot say they have not been treated fairly by the SENTINEL, as their side of the question has been given more space in its columns than the other. Or friend Mr. Miller, this week, in his argument of inequality of benefit, should remember that the same arguments might be used against the public school system. We note no other points in his letter that have not already been sufficiently answered.

—Mrs. H. G. Edwards, after a long illness, died Monday morning, at her home in this village, aged sixty-two years and six months. The remains accompanied by members of the family, left to-day for interment at her former home, Manitowoc, Wis. A brief service was held at the house previous to their departure. During the years the deceased resided here she enjoyed the esteem of all who knew her. The stricken family have the deepest sympathy of all.

—Daniel Baker, the Manistee hardwood lumberman, who buys largely here, came down from Petoskey Saturday in company with his sister of this. At the top of "Greensky hill" was reached, the white buildings of Charlevoix opening into view, few miles distant. It is a pretty winter picture, and has elicited many an exclamation of delight. Mr. Dalton, enamored by the beautiful view, said: "From whichever side you behold it, Charlevoix is the prettiest town on this side of Lake Michigan, and it's less got to grow."

—The Democrat last week gave expression to the essence of truth in its remarks on the duty of our citizens in the matter of pushing Charlevoix to the front. The SENTINEL has almost worn out the subject. Our advantages are only of value to us as they are made so. Nature produces but it does not develop; it must be assisted. A railroad may be made a medium of progress, or it may be made a detriment. Which shall it be here? Platitudes on this subject bare tradition of salubrious climate, picturesque scenery, broad expanse of lake, and "unequaled advantages of beach and river, read nicely in local literature, but they only furnish winter day-dreams for the summer tourist and hay-fever habitue. It is time for coming events to cast reminiscences" to the graveyard of dead hopes, and begin to propagate a new and vigorous gospel of push. The time is ripe to give this matter serious thought, and decide our own destiny—decide whether we shall permit the dry-rot of inactivity to continue, or infuse into our veins a current of new life-blood! We must awake and live, or sleep and be run over. The destiny of Charlevoix is in its own hands; it must hustle and keep up with the procession, or be thrust aside into the perpetual obscurity of Antrim. Charlevoix must can head the line or bring up the rear. Which shall it be?

Special Notice.

As we are desirous of further reducing our big stock before inventory, our 1 off sale will continue two weeks longer. We shall give customers some unusual bargains; any lots of dress goods will be cut to half price. All new goods received. Our new spring dress goods trimmings, white goods, laces, embroideries are heavy, and are without doubt the best value ever offered. A big new stock of carpets, matting, etc. MASON & BERDAN.

Charlevoix county is the smallest bailiwick in the State, but she won't take a back seat in this matter of multiplying and replenishing the earth.

At Advance last Friday morning, Mrs. P. Kurkoski gave birth to two girls and a boy. All doing well.

The father of the event is an old settler of this county, and is a Pine Lake merchant and shipper.

Hartland Notes.

Very nearly the entire official corps of the C. & W. M. Railway Co. were here Friday. The party included General Manager Heald, General Supt. Agnew, Chief Engineer McVean, Division Engineer Northrup, Attorney Smith, Assistant Attorney Grover, Gen. Freight Agent Davis, and Roadmaster Doyle. They were accompanied by general contractor McLane. The party came as far as Central Lake by rail.

In an interview with contractor McLane that gentleman said: "If nothing extraordinary occurs to prevent, the grading will be completed in twenty days. The steel will creep north as soon as we can get at the road-bed, and ballasting will be resumed all along the line as soon as the frost is out of the ground. We shall operate several steam shovels 20 hours a day, and put on a night force at surfacing if necessary. We expect to have the road ready for trains in July. In regard to this McCracken & Silsby business, you may quote me as saying that when the final footings are made, if there is a nickle due them it will be paid."

Regarding service on the Charlevoix-Petoskey end of the road, General Manager Heald said: "We shall not operate that part of the road north of Charlevoix until the entire extension is completed. Shall we give special local service between Bay View and Charlevoix? Undoubtedly, in the summer season. You may be assured we shall do all that is warranted."

Roadmaster Doyle, who saw Charlevoix for the first time, was enthusiastic in its praise. "It is the prettiest town, and has the best natural layout of any place on our extension. I do not see what can prevent a healthy boom here as soon as the road is in operation. What do I think of the road? Why! I can't be beat. You will have splendid railroad facilities."

General Passenger Agent DeHaven and his corps of assistants are at work on a pamphlet, to be issued early in the summer, descriptive of the country along the extension, and Mr. DeHaven writes the SENTINEL that in all references to this place they shall term it "Charlevoix the Beautiful."

CHAPTER IV.

THE MENTIONED PHANTOM

I mechanically sought the door, and was startled, indeed, upon suddenly encountering Burton, who was leisurely pacing up and down the north balcony. He noticed my abstracted laughing, and mentioned how to be seated upon the balcony railing.

"Did you enjoy yourself?" he asked.

"Very immensely," I did, but whether I enjoyed a stroll or a ride I cannot determine. In fits as one dazed I gazed upon the landscape, and I passed through all these things, or were these actually sights and sounds together as a logical sequence?"

"Those were the shades of the people who once lived here," replied Burton. "They were here to celebrate a wedding, family anniversary, and also to receive the betrothal vows of a young lady, who have undoubtedly heard, is destined to work out an important work in connection with the house."

"Yes, certain lies, I presume," said I. "But what?" I asked, as the mission—all mysterious mission—that I have heard referred to so many times within the last few days.

It has been contained that other are should acquaint you with the necessary information," replied Burton. "Meanwhile, the matter is serious part of the mission has been confiscated by some of the people, but they will undoubtedly be made plain to you in due time.

"The glorious prospect of waking up in the morning, the sunshine, the fragrance of the wood, fresh air, the sweet, fresh air, through natural bars (there are no glass in the windows) and other objects. How she disappeared by the side of a narrow door which she quickly gave to open. It lay of little a twist, set in the side of the wall, and I was forced to tie door partly ajar. The phantom slightlied desire to have little peep, but with the aid of an iron bar that I forgot upon the door, I pried the door back, out of curiosity, I suppose, I stepped upon the door, I found the door was not locked, and I walked in.

The room was filled with many chairs, writing desks and various-shaped book cases, containing books, and a few, very few books, and a few, very few, volumes that attracted my attention. I opened one, glass front, and opened it. A small parcel fell to the floor, the latter, a few forms a quaint little volume that seemed to be a attention, taken from a

The Republican State Central committee have called the States Convention to meet at Detroit at 12 o'clock noon April 14th 1892.

Dana acts like a sort of psoriasis on the body of the Democratic party. It no sooner gets him suppressed in one spot than he breaks out with increased virulence in another. And he isn't limited in his action like the seven-years itch.

The only ground upon which free silver can become popular with the south must be that it is in line with a great democratic principle, for it contains 20 per cent of repudiation—a favorite policy with southern democrats in the past.

From the fact of an increase of ozone in the atmosphere, Secretary Baker, of the State Board of Health, predicts an increase in influenza. Dr. Baker believes that electricity generates while gas destroys ozone. The extensive use of electricity and the abandonment of gas means increasing annual epidemics of influenza.

In spite of the London Times: and the hot headed Chileans, the stars and stripes still floats over the American legation at Valparaiso, and brave Pat Egan, may his shadow never grow less, has upheld the honor and dignity of the country he represents, and deserves his full share of the globe, also if the victory was a bloodless one Egan was the right man in the right place.

Grover Cleveland, sometimes called the "stuffed prophet," was given an immense ovation at Ann Arbor, Monday. He was welcomed by the mayor and 3,000 student yells. The enthusiastic greeting given this distinguished ex-President, tends to show that while David B. Hill may live the State of New York pretty solid, Cleveland has a much larger following outside of the Empire State. Mr. Cleveland's address at Univerity Hall, was well prepared and ably presented.

The banquet given by the Michigan club at Detroit last week was an immense success. Such distinguished Americans as Gov. McKinley of Ohio, Senators Dolph and Perkins, J. Sloat Fassett, Richard Yates, Gen. Alger and J. C. Burrows were present on that occasion and addressed the multitude. Altogether it was a magnificent gathering and will tend to create enthusiasm in the ranks of the Republican party, and assist in making their victory next fall more grand and more complete.

England has manifested anything but a friendly attitude during the late unpleasantness between the United States and Chile, and has proven the hollowness and hypocrisy of her pretended friendship for this country. We will improve the first opportunity she gets to humiliate and embarrass us, as she has ever done in the past, and Uncle Sam will be found to be prepared with a strong and well equipped navy to promptly resent any or her interferences in our business. In the present instance England was more to blame than Chile.

The malicious partisan charge that General Russell A. Alger's release from the service of the United States during the war was not strictly honorable, is sufficiently refuted by the fact that, at the close of the war when the same authorities were in control at Washington, he received the honor of a brigadier generalcy brevet. This could not have been done without deliberation, especially in view of the fact that General Alger had been the object of an unfriendly recommendation on the part of his superior officer, General Custer. The motives for Custer's unfriendliness General Alger has explained. General Alger's war record is that of a fighter. He won promotion by gallant conduct in the field, and his reputation as a brave and faithful soldier of the Union is too well known to be injured by such an assault as that to which we allude.

The Northwestern Lumberman, of Chicago, in an issue of recent date, publishes a call for a National convention of the lumber manufactures of the United States to take action in regard to a bill introduced by the Democrats in the House placing lumber on the free list. The call is signed by hundreds of lumber manufacturers doing business in the many states of the Union. We notice the list of signatures comprises manufacturers located from Maine to California, and in several of the southern states, among them many Michigan manufactures. The meeting is to be held in Washington March 3. The call says "In 1891 $13,500,000 value of Canadian forest products were imported into the United States, that sum representing represented manufactures capacity in the States, and causing a loss to laborers approximating $50,000,000. TRAGEDY IN HIGH LIFE

HORRIBLE MURDER CAUSE BY JEALOUSY.

Passenger Train and Horse Car Collide—Decision of Chief Justice Maxwell—Wealthy Harlan Sarah's Pets—Humor in Its Own Home.

Congressional.

Senator Palmer of Illinois spoke in the Senate on the Blair educational subject—an alteration of the Constitution of the United States which shall provide for the election of Senators in Congress by a direct vote of the people. The Senate then took up the House bill for a drawback on bounty. Mr. Blair of Missouri spoke unfavorably to the bill of the bill while Mr. Harper, of Ohio, vigorously opposed it. Mr. Harper, in the course of his talk, said he would like to see a drawback on the bounty of $1 per ton, dollar and a half per ton, would the bill. If anything should be made a large tariff it should be the cost of Kansas and not the silver of Colorado. Silver was then still under fire for some and the discussion of the Indian bill was begun by Mr. Dawes, who made a long speech in favor of the Senate amendments to the Indian bill. The amendments were finally agreed to, and the bill was generally discussed until adjournment.

—The Northern Michigan Seed Co., of this place, is steadily developing a good business, thereby doing the country much good in the way of the introduction of improved varieties of seed. They will have a new advertisement next week. Look for it.

—Honorable Chas. J. Dalthorpe, of Petoskey has been re-nominated for the Judge of the 33d Circuit. His chances for re-election are good, for two reasons: The circuit is Democratic, and Charlie Dalthorp is a gentleman, and an upright and capable judge.

—Petoskey Democrat: There was a wonderfully brilliant display of the aurora borealis last Friday evening. So brilliant was the sky at times that almost cast a shadow and tinted with pink the snow on the ground and the sides of buildings facing to the north. A Grand Rapids traveling man, who was passing the Park hotel at a time when the entire sky was aflame with a rose-tinted crimson, called to some of his fellow knights of the road there to come out and see the aurora borealis. Mr. Ripley, the driver of the Charlevoix stage overheard the summons and rushed out with the traveling man to behold the ruddy display. Ripley soon returned, his countenance clothed with disgust and chagrin, and in tones of unpressed rage muttered: "Is that what ye call Old Glory? Why nothing but blues blasted northern lights."

—The stone work for the railroad bridge was completed at three o'clock Monday, by the laying of the last stone on the south pier. The three piers constituting the foundation, are fine specimens of masonry. Engineer Harris on Monday laid out the work for the protection pier, and the pile driving is now being done.

—Quincey Tinacker, of the Northern Michigan Seed Co., has an establishment at his office, samples of the Early Acme dent corn, which he introduced into the Grand Traverse region seventeen years ago, and has raised successfully every year since. The fully developed ears construct the oft-repeated statement that this is not a successful corn-raising climate.

—The East Jordan Enterprise, in its last issue, states that "there is a flutter among some of the county officers against the calling of a grand jury." We are assured by three of the county officers that there is no foundation for such a statement. The suggestion of the judge in the matter was promised on the continuance of the prosecuting attorney first taking action. The county officers referred to, declined to sign the petition until that action should first declare a grand jury called for by the emergencies of the case. The indifferent relation exist upon the county officers, by the Enterprise in referring to "illegal fees for official services, allowing bills, etc," is unwarranted by any evidence in the hands of the Enterprise, or any other person.

—The talented Inwood correspondent of the Democrat, in a recent issue of that paper, announced the pathetic circumstance of the death of Moses Bowdish's mule. Mr. Hilton expressed his sorrow, and intimated that when he thought the mule was in articul mortis. The correspondent in his eagerness to get a scoop on the SENTINEL, was too hasty. The mule, as if conscious of the presence of a newspaper writer, changed his mind, and determined to tarry yet a while in this world of trouble. That the mule was very sick, there is very little doubt, and that evidences of that condition were plainly visible in the countenance of the sufferer, we do not question. We are even told that there was a marked change for the worse the instant the correspondent entered the barn yard. But yet, the mule was very hearty in his diagnosis. The mule rallied, and lives to laugh to scorn he, who presumed to indict his obituary while yet he lived. That mule will yet pass the correspondent upon the Norwood road many, many times, and as our friend beholds the elastic step and well rounded figure of the noble animal, he will reflect upon the trying vicissitudes of a journalist's life, while the rendining and spendingss of the wronged beast will suggest cave in approaching too near his business with long five barrel guns, and yet longer the correspondent.

Water-Works Question.

The opinion is held by some who have not investigated the matter, that the proposed water works plant is intended to cover only a limited area of the village. This is a great mistake.

The plans upon which the estimates were based in submitting the proposition, contemplate water-mains on every street in the village, including both terraces, and provide for hydrants sufficiently frequent to afford ample fire-protection to every part of the corporation.

Very little remains to be said in support of the proposition, and certainly every argument against it has been exhausted! The question is, whether we are wise enough to prove ourselves an enterprising and public spirited community. In view of what has been done and what is being done around us, a rejection of the proposition would do Charlevoix more harm than could accrue from the payment of five years interest on the bonds.

The change that water-works would make in the general appearance of Charlevoix would be worth all it costs. Green and thrifty door yards, well-kept lawns, with growing shade-trees and shrubbery enhance the value of property. Attractiveness attracts, but parched and lifeless surroundings are only indicative of the lack of public spirit. Charlevoix is already called "the beautiful;" it can be made still more beautiful.

A good system of water-works will give Charlevoix a prestige that will return an equivalent for its cost in many ways, and settle the question of pure water.

A Point in Question.

To the Editor of the SENTINEL:

I do not give any importance to the question of politics in selecting village or township officers, and shall always vote for men and not politics in such cases.

But I wish to ask if there are not enough tax-payers in the village of Charlevoix from which to select candidates for the council, without having to nominate men whose name have never appeared upon the assessment roll for anything except poll-tax, and that unpaid?

Is it not right to expect that those whom we select to govern our village shall be those who help to bear its financial burdens? It is easy enough for those who pay no tax to advocate water-works bonds; it costs them nothing.

I know there is no "property qualification" in this country, but is it not common sense?

Yours,
A TAX-PAYER.

The New Ballot Law.

1. An official ballot, containing the name of every candidate, of all parties, will be furnished an elector at the polls.

2. He retires with his ballot to the booth.

3. If he wishes to vote a straight ticket he marks the ballot with the other single mark in the small white square immediately under the name of party for whose candidates he wishes to cast his ballot, and folds ballot so that the initials of inspectors shall be in full view.

4. If he wishes to vote for candidates on different tickets, erase the name of the candidate on your ticket you do not wish to vote for, and make a cross in the square before the name of the candidate you desire to vote for, or write name in the space under the name erased. Slips may be used if desired.

TWO DECISIONS.

The U. S. Supreme Court Sustains the McKinley Bill and Reed's Ruling.

On the 29th, in the three cases in which importers sought to test the constitutionality of the McKinley tariff act, the Supreme Court of the United States confirmed the judgments of the New York and Illinois circuit courts, in favor of the constitutionality of the act.

On the same day, in the "no quorum" case, in which suit was brought to test Speaker Reed's famous ruling, it was decided by the court that the rule was valid.

To the Editor of the SENTINEL:

I fully agree with you in regard to a full and free discussion of the water-works question. After a free and full discussion a free and fair election should settle the question.

As a basis for the submission of the question an estimate of the cost of the proposed plant was first submitted to the Council. The estimate was $25,000. According to the details of the estimate, some will be left out in the cold, as far as benefits are concerned. Will they be exempt from tax to pay for the benefits of others? Justice would be, no benefit no tax. Neither should a tax be taxed to furnish better fire protection to B, whose carelessness endangers all. B should rather be required to use more precaution.

The majority should not be burdened because of the criminal conduct of a small minority; neither should the minority be oppressed by the ambition of the majority. To get down to bottom facts, it seems that the main desire for water-works is based on two things: a desire on the part of a few to have the public furnish for their especial benefit protection against their own carelessness; and the other is metropolitan ambition.

The need of water-works as a sanitary measure is refuted by one who favors the proposition, who was heard to say that he would never drink the water unfiltered. The present water supply is from the same source from which they propose to pump their supply, with the advantage of filtration in favor of the present supply.

As to the question of analysis being outside the range of common sense, the Council can, by reading the names on the petition, form some idea of how many are lacking in that particular. Among them are the names of two editors. (That's "a horse" on us Mr. Hangman.—ED.) If ever wells are affected with surface water it is now, when the snow has taken the frost out of the ground. Henry Bishop, of Kalamazoo, writes that "waterworks, to be relied upon as fire-protection are very expensive." I am sure we shall find it so here, when we consider the necessity of operating them night and day, corresponding expense of fuel, and the bursting of pipes, etc.

Will men who have put down wells at great cost, and have a supply of good water willingly throw away their wells and tap the big money-sucker? As to the argument of reduced rates of insurance. Insurance men will give no assurance on that point until after they have looked the ground over.

Now to those who smile at the stand I have taken in this matter, I have this to say: I have an interest in Charlevoix that they can never acquire. I was here before Charlevoix was named. I helped to bring her out of the woods. I hewed out a waist-deep in the rapids at the mouth of the river and helped to pull in a boat loaded with provisions. I have pulled the logs out of the channel, and carried poles to build the first bridge across the river. I paid my share toward opening our harbor, and for every other improvement, and now I would hate to see her burdened with needless debt.

Yours,
ROBERT MILLER.

SUPPOSITION VS. FACT.

HOW PROTECTION STIMULATES INDUSTRIES.

Praise for American Commercial Supremacy—Drawback Has Been Only a Temporary Effect—Senator Hale to Senator Hill—Country Sure of Success.

Praise for American Diplomacy.

Intermingled with the quiet peace celebration of Central Europe we have triumphant shouts of victory coming from the Pacific Ocean, on trans-Atlantic rival. After a year of painful labor and negotiations, the nations of Central Europe have succeeded in negotiating treaties which at least are but a mosaic composed of thousands of compromises. Every stipulation contained in a neighbor had to be compensated by a corresponding advantage granted to him—it is but an issued reciprocal exchange, that is the term. Behold, the documents signed at Saratoga by the German and American representatives—which we publish this morning, represent a great victory for the American Union, a victory which costs the victor nothing, a conquest without a blow. It is an expression of the superior natural conditions of nations, the end of the superior intelligence of the age, the end of the Atlantic states, of the future home "white Europe." gazr alike in blood and thought. Perhaps no one will lose at the American policy of commercial negotiations and compare it with the system introduced by Bismarck, Germany's idea was to force, in order to obtain good commercial treaties it is necessary first to establish a tariff wall and then to offer and make reductions from the tariff in exchange for reciprocal favors. Under this system the peasants and manufacturers became accustomed to the unusual rate of protection accorded them and some lose sight of the power any reduction therefrom. The manufacturers of Germany, like those of France, and we also, have been taught by a policy of insecurity in the field of commercial enterprise.

The new Canadian government partly abandoned this Bismarck system, though Premier Bowell has discussed to our minister at Ottawa the advisability of reciprocal treaties. They are contained in Article 111 of the Canadian McKinley tariff. Under this tariff as a whole will prove inside the United States remains to be shown, to-day we consider it a good tariff.

The article was inserted by Mr. Blaine, a friendly opponent of Mr. McKinley, and has in the latest commercial negotiations proven its eminent wisdom most brilliantly. Mr. Blaine's plan differs materially from Bismarck's. It is as follows:

In order to obtain favorable treaties the duty on certain important articles such as sugar, molasses, coffee, tea, hides, etc., was greatly reduced or abolished with conditions that it might be reestablished after January 1, 1892, if one nations prohibing by it did not make commercial concessions.

While according to Bismarck's system, Germany's tariff was reduced generally in special articles, and thus gave a general benefit, the McKinley reduction or concession, Mr. Blaine's system secure the foreign exporter to profit by the reduction, and yet makes it him a powerful ally to force his the foreign government to make concessions to prevent the reestablishment of the American duties.

This principle is likewise contained in the new bond, imposition bill, whose threats of tariff war and prohibition have induced European countries to raise their prohibition on American pork. Mr. Blaine's idea has been successful in both cases. It has secured for our farmers a market for their pork, lards, and with other of the South American states, and thus brings Mr. Blaine's system into operation, achieves better realization, at the same time damaging European exporters in all American markets.

Mr. Blaine has already forced Germany, Denmark, Austria and Italy to accept our pork products in American meat, and Italy is on the point of doing the same. But the other unsuits we reprint today constitute Blaine's masterpiece. The central European tariff union has been rendered ineffective with reference to the United States. The German tariff on agriculture products seems to be reduced only in favor of Italy and Austria, and to be retained against Russia and Spain, because the former nations have not enjoyed the most favored nations privileges.

This would have been probable only to German and Austrian farmers, and not to the people, because, these two nations, not raising enough grain for themselves, the price would have been fixed, by Hungarian grain at Black Sea ports, but by American and Russian grain at Danzig, as heretofore.

Mr. Blaine however has remoulded most these calculations and made the new tariff operate with full force upon the United States as well, the reduction of which the United States will profit as follows:

	Old Tariff Duty.	New Tariff Duty.
Wheat	[illegible]	5.62
Rye	[illegible]	5.62
Barley	[illegible]	5.62
Oats	[illegible]	15.00
Potatoes	[illegible]	10.00
Meat	[illegible]	15.00
Lard	[illegible]	15.00
Pork	[illegible]	15.00

These facts may surprise the Herald and other free traders, but they illustrate the foolishness of so much theorizing in regard to the effect of a protective tariff, when the facts of history are so conclusively against them. Protection is necessary, if not that it cannot be dispensed with, at least for the present.

The South and Protection.

Sunday morning the Charleston News and Courier, commenting on the progress of manufacturing in the cotton in disorr of the South, made this statement:

There is one class of work that has not been much considered in the discussion of the tariff question, and that is the work of the cotton manufacturers. The New York papers are anxious to have the tariff so fixed as to give the manufacturers of the North the lion's share. No class of manufacturers has more to gain by the tariff than those in the general examination of business. All the cotton mills are now in full blast and have been so for some time, and are making all goods made of cotton.

The new tariff, government partly abandoning this Bismarck system though Premier Bowell has discussed to our minister at Ottawa the advisability of reciprocal treaties. They are contained in Article 111 of the Canadian McKinley tariff. Under this tariff as a whole will prove inside the United States remains to be shown, to-day we consider it a good tariff.

The article was inserted by Mr. Blaine, a friendly opponent of Mr. McKinley, and has in the latest commercial negotiations proven its eminent wisdom most brilliantly. Mr. Blaine's plan differs materially from Bismarck's. It is as follows:

Meat	[illegible]	15.00
Lard	[illegible]	15.00
Pork	[illegible]	15.00

These reductions will greatly reduce the cost of provisions and food, and the money of his I found stolen to therefore, the victory of the poor man. But the consideration for the poor has induced the German government to make these concessions. They have merely considered the wishes of the sugar manufacturers, who imports to the United States were $24,000,000 in 1890 and $56,000,000 in 1891. This under the old tariff.

Now, the McKinley tariff greatly reduces the tariff on sugar, and in order to benefit by this reduction the sugar has been forced to make the treaty, as Germany, Austria, and other sugar producing countries will have to do very soon.—Pennsylvania Grange Journal of Industry.

The Difference Between a Supposition and a Fact.

Suppose that our nails were made exclusively from the best Swedish iron produced abroad. Then, according to the Democratic theory, the proper action to take would be to put a heavy duty on wire nails from abroad, and let the American market, but the American iron-maker, and the American nail-maker, and let the American wire-drawer be forced, as it is, to take treasury out of its natural market, and compelled to be carried on its channels prescribed by the foreign wire-nail manufacturer.

How would it suit the Herald to take a few facts in regard to the nail industry of this country? It is not difficult to interpret the history of the tariff and affects the manufacture and price of wire nails, for the last twenty-five years. Twenty years ago the tariff bore heavily on the industry, and there could be no question, and there could be no question that it was a free trader low little tariff, and aside from there is no more supposition.

There were practically no wire nails made in the United States prior to 1861. They were an expensive nail, the price was 8 cents, or a little over, in that year. When the tariff was revised in 1861, a duty of 4 cents was put on wire nails, or according to the Herald, of the free trade theory, or "supposition," that duty would have kept the wire nail out of this country. Well, what is the history of the wire nail industry? When the tariff law of 1861 got in operation, wire nail factories sprang up all over the United States, and within a few months the price began to decline so that in 1880 they were sold for 2½ cents a pound, and the Herald knows that the nail has so steadily declined in price that it is now sold at the product of that year reached 1,000,000 kegs. The McKinley bill decreased the duty to 2 cents a pound and the prices are now below the duty!

But there is another point in the history of the nail industry which seems to escape the attention of the Herald. The duty on wire nails not only did not keep that article out of the country, but it lowered the price of the cut nails, making them cheaper and cheaper every year, the process of decline being illustrated by the following:

Senator Hale to Senator Hill.

If David B. Hill would withdraw his letter to Senator Hale, and the Senator desired to do so, he might find a passage in the report of the Senate Finance Committee which would have been quoted to him in the debate on the McKinley bill, but for the omission of a page.

The Senator appears to be somewhat in doubt about the meaning of the following quotation, which we place in the mouth of the Senator from Maine:

"Mr. Hale, I do not know that I can give the Senator from New York any better reply than the reply which I made to the Senator from Ohio (Mr. Sherman) a few days ago. I will read it:

"'Mr. President, I shall never come to Hill I have never yet seen a Democratic Senator, or a Democratic Senate, or a Democratic House, or a Democratic President, or a Democratic Party, or a Democratic Convention, or a Democratic Convention, or a Democratic Convention

A plain, middle-aged woman had been sitting in the passenger coach at my left hand for the last thirty miles, when a writer in the Detroit Free Press, when a man about 50 years of age and palably dressed put on at a small station. He had taken the seat ahead of me, but happening to look around and observe the woman he jumped up and went over to her with a:

"Well, by gosh! but who'd thought it! Howdy do, Mary?"

"Howdy do, Samuel," she replied as they shook hands and he sat down beside her.

"What ye goin'?" he asked.

"Down home to Ellendale."

"Livin' down thar, be ye?"

"Yes."

"You look just the same as ever. I'd a known you in China."

"Yes I don't suppose I've changed much."

"Well, I often think about ye, and I hope you'll do well. I had a git a divorce from you because we couldn't agree, but I don't lay it up agin you as some would. Married again, I'm told."

"Yes."

"Purty decent sort o' fellow?"

"He's a good man—a very good man."

"I haven't wanted to yet."

"Shucks! We jest changed since we got divorced; you allus wanted to be ramble in debt, you know. That and your bein' so mighty independent brought us almost on court our quarrels."

"I wanted to run in debt I never got the chance," she curtly replied.

"Thar wasn't no need to. I was a good provider, as everybody knows."

"Now, Mary—"

"And I don't believe in a wife creeping and crawling to a husband."

"Thar you go—same as you used to give me a lecture."

"If you don't take it you needn't stay here."

"And stay here I won't" he exclaimed, as he rose up. "You are just like you used to be—jest as meek and lowly as ever."

"And I have no doubt you are the same old sakiddle and fault-finder."

"What! What! Some folks blamed me for getting a divorce but I guess they wouldn't if they could hear you talk."

Neat Jokes.

Next John.

Two lord chancellors of England have made the morning over of a sheet of comic paper a device for executing their musical jokes, says the Argonaut. Lord Chancellor Eldon, having been accused by a clerical friend to give him a certain living words on one side of a sheet of paper

"Given, Eldon: I can not to-day give you the preference for which you ask. I remain your sincere friend

"Tom Lyndhurst."

On the other side): "I gave it to you yesterday."

Sir John Sinclair, who had done much for the agriculture of England and was vain enough to think his station should present him with a textbook, and wrote to Lord Chancellor Eldon, inviting him to subscribe to it. On one side of a sheet of paper Eldon replied:

"Sir Dennis Sin Jonn: I am certain there never was a man who displayed more vigor in your services than myself, and I have the honor to remain

"Eldon."

(On the other side the note concluded).

"Myself.

"Your obedient, faithful servant,

"ELDON."

A PUNNEL OF PETITIONS.

The Way Some Were Metamorphosed by the Compositor.

The editor could see that the man was trying to tell a lengthy story in his bosom when he came in, but he never let on.

"Good evening," he said with affected politeness.

"I believe," replied the visitor, stifling his emotions. "That I sent you a communication yesterday, beginning thus: 'Oh, Ewen received a bushel of petitions from churchwoman and temperance societies saying that the salloons be closed, sir, etc.'"

"Yes, sir, you did," replied the editor, "and I was glad to print it in—"

"But you didn't print it, sir," replied the irate visitor.

"I beg your pardon, colonel," disented the editor, "you will find it I read it, but I saw the heading of the article.

"Well, sir, read it now," and the colonel fiercely thrust a copy of the paper at him. "Read, sir, read," he went on, wildly quoting, "'Col. Brown received a bushel of potatoes from churches and temperance societies.' Think of that, sir. A bushel of potatoes! What in the name of justice, truth and equity has a bushel of potatoes got to do with me? I'm as the colonel raved and ranted, the editor looked at the cool, royal type standing out in horrid relief and was utterly speechless.—Detroit Free Press.

A MUSICAL GROVE.

An Orchestral Symphony Not Exactly Pleasant to the Ear.

This township boasts of a curiosity that probably is not duplicated in the entire hemisphere, and probably not in the world. It is a musical grove of chestnut and walnut trees. The grove stands on the north side of Nickerson hill, which is the highest point of land in New London county, and the trees are old and there are very few that are not hollow.

The spot is well known among local hunters as a resort for gray squirrels and many hundreds of these animals are taken out of the grove every year. Into the heart of the trees the squirrels have gnawed their way through the knots and stumps of limbs that have decayed and fallen to the ground. In many cases but the mere shell of the tree stands, and if a fire is built in the hole at the roots smoke issues from a hundred holes above it in the limbs and in the main trunk.

The peculiar sound caused by the wind blowing into these holes has given the grove the name of Singing Trees, says a writer in the Philadelphia Times. In the summer, when the trees are covered with foliage the wind has no effect upon them, but in the fall, when the leaves fall to the ground, the wind has a clean sweep at the trees, and it whistles and moans and hisses through the hollow trunks and limbs until it seems to one a short distance away that a horde of ravenous demons are holding a grand jubilee among the trees.

These sounds are produced only when the wind blows from the southeast. It then sweeps over the top of the hill and falls upon the groves apparently as the wind from this month of a bay falls upon a hollow key placed in his lips, and the sound produced, in many cases, is like that made by a person blowing into the nose of a bottle multiplied a million times. In other cases there is a verse shattering noise as if a giant was blowing through an immense conch shell with paper. Breaking into these tones is now and then a short sharp, shrieking noise and then a hissing sound, as if from the mouths of a thousand python in chorus.

Taken together, these hisses and hoots and moans and shrieks make a pandemonium that one doesn't care to listen to very long. The noise of these trees can be heard five miles away, and it has been heard to the leeward a distance of eight miles. In rearing is looked upon by the people living within hearing distance of it as a precursor of a storm. Among the hills and valleys it is often impossible to tell correctly in what direction the wind is blowing but when the roaring of the Singing Trees is heard the wind is known to be blowing from the southeast, and preparations are made for a storm.

In September, during what is known as the equinoctial storm, this strange grove is heard. Then, above the howling of the wind, the roar rises and falls like the moaning of 10,000 leviatans in the agonies of death.

REMEMBERED BY GRANT.

A Former Act of Bravery Saves a Negro from Punishment.

John Johnson, better known as "Bomb-proof," a debauched but perfectly harmless negro, died lately, says the New York Times. He was well known to Grand Army circles and had lived by the charities of Grand Army men for the last twenty years.

Johnson received his queer sobriquet "Bomb-proof" from General Grant. When the union troops were making their approach toward Richmond artillery duels between the confederate stronghold, Fort Darling, and the United States batteries at Harrison's Landing were of frequent occurrence. It was not often that the confederates' shells did any harm, but one day a "screamer" fell among a number of officers who were seated before their tents. John Johnson, then an intelligent young contraband and the servant of one of these officers, was present. The shell rolled directly at his feet.

Each one did his best to get away from the neighborhood of the unwelcome visitor, except Johnson. He stooped and attempted to roll the shell toward the embankment, intending to hurl it over into the ditch, but before he could carry out his purpose it exploded.

The officers hastened back to where the brave fellow had fallen, expecting to find him dead. He was merely stunned, however, and bore not the slightest sign of having been wounded, but after he had recovered it was seen that the shock in some way had affected his mind, although not enough to make him unfit for duty.

Some time after this occurrence Johnson was court-martialed for something he had done and found guilty. The verdict of the court was sent to General Grant for his approval. The general, who knew of the shell incident, sent the verdict back with this indorsement:

"Not approved. 'Bomb-proofs' are not responsible."

MR. BLAINE DRAWS OUT.

IS NOT NOW A CANDIDATE FOR THE PRESIDENCY.

His Formal Letter of Withdrawal Sent to Chairman Clarkson—Various Views as to How It Will Insure Other Republican Candidates—Political Gossip.

Effect of the Declination.

Blaine is not a candidate for the Presidency. He has made this official announcement in the following letter of Chairman Clarkson, of the Republican National Committee:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 2 6 Clarkson, Chairman of the Republican National Committee.

DEAR SIR: I have received from the President, and my name will not be before the Republican National Convention for the nomination. I quote the answer to a question.

Since the news reached me there have poured upon me from almost every quarter, and from the most unexpected quarters, the most earnest and cordial expressions of good will and good wishes. Nothing in the world could have made me more happy than this. I cannot but feel that the great Republican party is now in a position to make its choice among its many eminent men, with a perfect freedom and a good hope of success. Its ranks are more closely united than they have been for many years. The

CURRENT MARINE NOTES.

The steamer Soo City will run this season between St. Joseph and Chicago.

Mike Litney has engaged as engineer of the steamer Friant, the coming season.

G. C. Gilkes has sold the fishing tug Anapsch to A. Dahlmer and Mrs. Copp, of Northport.

Capt. Dave Parfish, last season of the steamer Onekama, will next season command the Little Traverse Bay steamer Skater.

The steamer Lawrence began fitting out yesterday. Capt. "Billy" Finn can comes out in her again, reports to the contrary notwithstanding.

The bridge was swung for the first time this season this morning. The fishing tug Gilkes went down to make an effort to get out, but as we go to press has not succeeded.

Elk Rapids Progress: E. S. Noble secretary of the Iron Co. informs us that he is in correspondence with several parties who are desirous of placing steamboat on the bay next summer. A boat to run between Norwood, Northport, Suttons Bay and Old Mission to connect with the C. & W.M. will be put on and close connections made.

Last week Capt. O. E. Wilkin and R. J. McNeill took soundings at the mouth of the river, and found it much more satisfactory than was expected. There is eleven feet of water to Lake Michigan, excepting in one narrow place, where they found but ten feet. Steamers will soon reduce that bar, and we will have at least 11 feet of water for next season's business, which is quite satisfactory.

At the ship yards work is booming. Ben Campbell has six men at work on the steamer Grace Harker and tug Parks. On the other side the schooner Sea Gem shows her barrels on both sides. She will come out a new vessel. A good force of men is at work on other crafts, and it all emphasizes the fact that a good dry dock would pay in Charlevoix better than at any point in the region.

Information from Manitowoc, Wis., where the steamer City of Charlevoix is being overhauled, states that our consignee will be more than "in it" the coming season. Her new boilers and machinery will be placed more amidships, and she will carry two spars like the Soo City. Her texas will be lengthened, and contain the captain's room. She will again be commanded by Captain Ira Bishop, and her chief engineer will be J. E. Mason. It is the opinion of those competent to judge that, with her fine model and new and powerful machinery the City of Charlevoix will get to the straits as quick as any of them.

Milwaukee Wisconsin: The outlook for the coarse freighting business on Lake Michigan during the approaching season is perplexingly doubtful. Recently a gentleman interested in the Traverse Bay hardwood trade stated that indications for a decided improvement over past seasons were very bright. In almost the same breath, however, he admitted that the tanner's strike now in progress here would have a bad effect in the trade in bark. As Milwaukee consumes more than one-half of the bark product of the Lake Michigan stores this means a great deal to hemlock. But while everything else may wear an appearance of brightness at east shore points, gloomy reports come from along the west shore and Green Bay.

Capt. H. N. Youse, of the new boat for the Traverse Bay line, sends us the following description of her: Commencing on the main deck forward, she will have 33 feet deck space from the stem to the stairway leading to the promenade deck. The boiler-house is 17-4, by 9; fire-room, 5 ft. 4 by 9; engine-room, 7-4 by 9; passenger-room, 30; cabin, 28-4 by 13; two closets, two wash-rooms; hall between closets; 7 ofm after end of cabin to stem, 8 feet. On the promenade deck, from stem to pilot house, 15 feet; pilot house, 7-4 by 5-8; texas, 11-4 square, divided into three rooms; from texas to stern, 76 feet of deck. The cabin will be finished in red oak panel-work. The engine will be one of Henry Hoeckel's tandem compound, 22 inch stroke, high pressure, and all latest improvements. Boiler, built by Johnson Bros., 7-64ts, steel, and will carry 130 pounds of steam. No pains or expense have been spared to make her as good as the best and as fast as the fastest. She will be on her route about the middle of May.

The following is a full description of the magnetic ice crusher and car ferry being built by the Detroit dry dock company to be similar in design to the St. Ignace and which will run on the same route: The new steamer will be one of the most powerful ones ever built with ability to keep passage open at the North pole. She will have a carrying capacity of 40 per cent more than the St. Ignace and 33 per cent more power. Her general dimensions are: 300 feet over all, 52 feet beam, 25 feet molded depth and draft of water 17 feet. She will have a propeller in each end (same as the St. Ignace) driven by separate compound engines, having a total capacity of 4,000 horse power. Four double end boilers will furnish the steam for the main engines and the many auxiliaries, winches, capstans, electric lighting, etc. She will be housed in so as to better protect the cars from heavy weather, with accommodations for officers and crew on upper deck. Her cost is reported to be $325,000.

Correspondence.

To the Sentinel:

What is the matter with our Prosecuting Attorney? After making the statements he did to Judge Ramsdell, and hearing his reply, why has the Prosecuting Attorney asked for the calling of the grand jury? Does he think himself incompetent to secure testimony and prosecute after indictments are presented? Does he acknowledge that the gang are more clever in spiriting witnesses than he in materializing them?

If the Prosecuting Attorney did not sign the petition for a grand jury why not? I notice some of the county officials signed the petition. Was it because the prosecuting attorney did not? Do they think the grand jury would be useless if indictments were not prosecuted? Are there parties in Charlevoix, Boyne City, and other towns besides East Jordan, who do not want a grand jury? If the prosecuting attorney feels himself incapable to cope with the rascals will he resign and let some one else try it. Has politics anything to do with the absence of certain names from the petition? Is there anyone "near the throne?" Who will enlighten us?

Yours,
QUESTION.

Hastings from Hayes.

A. W. Chew, the Misses Lena Cooper, Kate Haggerty, Maude Drum, Melissa Willis, Ella Grandy and Lenore Marsac, Hayes teachers, were in attendance at the teachers' examination at Boyne City last Thursday and Friday.

The newspapers report that two families were caught in the late blizzard that visited Oklahoma, and eleven persons were frozen to death. They were out on the open prairie without protection, save what their wagons afforded. Our Hayesites who have the Oklahoma fever should take notice that Oklahoma is not the Garden of Eden.

The old settlers' meeting at Elk Rapids, on Tuesday, was a great success. There was a large attendance and a fine time.

B. Titus, of the firm of Carver & Titus, leading insurance men of Traverse City died suddenly last week of heart failure.

Rev Fr. F. J. Dennett, of St. Mary's Church, Cheboygan, died last week with La grippe. He was 44 years of age, and had resided there for ten years.

The Central House at East Jordan changed proprietors last week. Mr. W. E. Parmelee retiring to make room for Mr. Brownell of Harbor Springs, formerly from Manton.

Editor Sprague, of the Eagle, is having a lively tilt with the Methodist divine at Traverse City. It all comes about from the m. d. saying that the secular papers of that village do not pay enough attention to religious subjects!

Grand Traverse Herald: The Herald of Feb. 18th, noticed the fact that Capt. Miller, of the Point Betsey life saving station, had taken 400 perch in Crystal lake one day recently. The genial and courteous captain writes us that this is not only true, but that the 400 were caught with one hook and without change of bait. This adds greatly to the interest of the story, especially at a time of the year when fish stories are supposed to be a little out of season.

Cross Village cor. Petoskey Democrat: The LeBlanc brothers, the Beaver Island mail carriers, contrary to the expectations of everyone here reached Beaver Island safely. Paul LeBlanc, accompanied by C. Bissel, another islander, arrived here on last Thursday with the mail, Oliver remaining on the island nursing his frozen hand. The Beaver Islanders have attested their appreciation of the hardships which they have borne and the dangers which they have undergone in carrying the mail from and to the Island by presenting them with $100. At present the ice is perfectly safe and traveling upon it is not attended with much danger, although such a condition is not likely to continue a great while. Paul LeBlanc and Bissel left here Friday, with dogs and sleds, for the Island, and will continue to carry the mail in this way the remainder of the winter.

RICH FOR GOVERNOR.

There seems to be very little question that Hon. John T. Rich will be the nominee of the next Republican State Convention for Governor. And we make bold to assert that the event will occur two years behind its time. John T. Rich might have been governor at this present moment, and should have been.

Michigan is safely Republican; it only wants a man who can call out the strength of the party, to overthrow Democracy, and redeem the state. John T. Rich is that man. He has a record of untarnished public service. He is a citizen, brainy and honest man. He stepped into public life from the forrow, and after gaining an enviable record in the legislative halls, he went back to the forrow.

There are no spots upon the raiment of Rich but those made by the soil of his farm, and no dirt upon his hands but that which dignifies his manhood.

If we correctly read the signs, this is a Rich year, and a Republican year for Michigan. The party is united, enthusiastic and confident. With Rich the nominee for governor, the victory is already won.

WILLIAM ALDEN SMITH.

Among the leading Republicans of Michigan, there are to-day few more conspicuous figures, and few who have more honestly earned their rating, than William Alden Smith, of Grand Rapids.

He is of Michigan growth, and distinctively the representative of the young Republicans of the state. He has won his way to the front rank in his party by his own energy and ability, and to-day there is not a man of his years in the state who stands nearer to the fountain-head of Michigan Republicanism, or has more friends among the national leaders of the party than he.

As a campaign speaker he ranks among the most effective in the state, and has rendered valuable service as a member of the State Central Committee. His influence in the councils of his party has been recognized in several campaigns.

In the coming State Convention we hope to see his name placed upon the ticket as a delegate-at-large to the National Convention. The young Republican element of the state unquestionably recognizes Mr. Smith as its most capable and most deserving representative, and as an aggressive, stalwart and unselfish Republican he is the peer of any in the ranks of his party.

Norwood Notes.

Vern Pearl now receives a pension of eight dollars a month.

Ed. Stafford broke camp Monday and the boys are now resting.

The ice houses are all being filled this week, from the lake with ice about two feet thick.

A surprise party at Frank Richardson's Saturday night found the above mentioned gentleman, aged thirty two, ready to retire. He said "criper-a-mighty-whats-happened-anyway."

The young ladies of the Norwood school presented Mr. Babcock with a handsome gold ring last Friday.

Theo. Hatlmer, of Milwaukee, and Arch Cameron, of Torch Lake, were in town last Saturday.

Rev. J. G. Holliday went to Traverse City Thursday to attend the funeral of his brother's two months old baby.

The Starke collision trouble, which has been threatening to get into the courts, was settled with Mr. Nash when Mr. Plattner was here.

Charlie Brown arrived from Manistique Monday and will at once begin getting the Norwood band in shape for champagne, (we mean campaign purposes) for the coming season.

If our present county officers are lacking in backbone, necessary for the control of the tough element in the county, relegate them with the Big Four, "to private life and inocuous desuetude."

The primary department of the school will have their exhibition this week Saturday night.

Mrs. E. R. Harris will leave this week for a visit at Detroit. At the same time Miss Ida Richardson leaves for Lowell, Mass., to visit her mother and sister.

—Correspondence and local on our inside pages.

—John M. Ackert went to Detroit Sunday.

—Who said Charlevoix had curvature of the spine!

—The saloons were closed Monday. Water was good enough for us.

—Bert Mason calls attention this week to bargains in various lines.

—S. M. See is still gaining, and will soon greet his friends on the street.

—Now bore for water—you might strike gas, oil, coal or mineral water.

—The petition for a grand jury has been presented to Judge Ramsdell.

—As sure as you are born, Charlevoix is alive and kicking. Make a note of it.

—W. H. Downer returned from the north yesterday, after a two week's absence.

—Mrs. Will Coulter, of Banks, is here visiting her sister, Mrs. W. A. Smith.

—Will our friends throughout the county send us in lists of Township officers elected?

—Don't forget the social to-night at the M. E. Church. Bring your new hymn books.

—A railroad and water-works, both in the same summer, is rather rich for our blood.

—We don't care a ding-dang for anybody. We are on deck, and all hands hold of the lanyard!

—The village ticket published in this paper last week, was elected Monday without opposition.

—Notice is hereby given that Charlevoix will have no more moss growing around her corners next summer.

—Rev. C. F. Van Auken formerly Congregational pastor spent Sunday here and preached Sunday morning.

—We have the new "signs" for printing election tickets in conformity with the new law. Send us your orders.

—Just as soon as you can get to a hydrant, turn the hose on these men who said Charlevoix was a dead town!

—Bro. Hilton says he don't care a cent whether the mule is dead or not. He worked a paragraph in on the subject.

—It looks decidedly as if lake barbors would suffer this year again by reason of the false economy of Congress.

—The pedro club held their "soiree" on Tuesday evening at Odd Fellow's hall, and those present say it was a great event.

—The Elk Rapids Progress last week copied an article from the Sentinel and credits it to the Democrat. Don't do that again Ben.

—Smokers are bragging about that new nickle cigar manufactured by the Charlevoix Cigar factory. It is known as the "C. & W. M."

—A. T. Washburn has a large new advertisement on our eighth page. Mr. Washburn invites your attention to matters of interest to all intelligent buyers.

—About twenty members of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Congregational Church will go to the "Endeavor Rally," at Petoskey Friday.

—We are informed that the Sinby fire engine dropped her tongue and swallowed her end, when the water-works vote was counted Monday night.

—Uncle Robert will be tickled to death next fall, when he sees the boys spurting water from the hydrants, and he will wonder why he went and did it!

—Wm. Dennis, formerly a resident of Charlevoix, and for some time leader of the "boys band," is here again, and employed in Jay Price's barber shop.

—It is a question which subject has been uppermost in the public mind the past winter—water works or pedro. But now pedro takes a back seat.

—We learn with sorrow of the death in Philadelphia lately, of Rev. Father Logan, who has spent several years on Beaver Island. He was a nephew of Rev. Father Gallagher, and a gentleman of fine attainments.

—"Jack" Nicholls arrived home yesterday from Chicago, having completed his junior course in Hahnemann Medical College last Thursday. Jack has grown taller, and already has a professional work about him. He returns to college in September.

—There is a scrap of law that may not be familiar to a great many: "A finder of property is compelled to make diligent enquiry for the owner thereof and to restore the same. If on finding the property he attempts to conceal such fact he may be prosecuted for larceny.

—It is remarkable how soon a person gets down on a newspaper after taking it for years and then having it stopped with several dollars charged up to the said subscriber. They take the other papers thereafter and have nothing good to say of the paper that is stopped. We have several such fellows on our books.

—The question now absorbing the public mind, in connection with the water-works, is, from whence will the supply be taken? There are three sources from which to choose—Lake Michigan, Pine Lake, and a cluster of wells. We shall not discuss the merits of either, but venture the opinion that, with an eye to the future, and the question of pure water, wells will be the most feasible plan. This matter will, no doubt, be thoroughly investigated.

—There is one feature of the result of the vote on water-works, that will be conceded by all, and from which all will reap the benefit, and that is the activity which will result from the construction of the plant the coming summer. It is estimated that between $7,000 and $8,000 will be expended here for labor. This, in addition to the activity that will prevail by reason of railroad construction, the building of depots, etc., will make a lively summer for Charlevoix. We predict the liveliest summer in the history of Charlevoix.

—Baker & Son, of this place, have the agency of the Ohio Spiral Spring buggy, and have one of their new double turning gear buggies on exhibition. This gear is the newest thing in buggies, and a a revelation of new and scientific principles. It takes but one-half the space of other buggies for turning, and it is impossible to overturn it. It is furnished with an improved hooded top, and the spring features are admirable. It is a handsome, light and serviceable vehicle, and will be the favorite wherever introduced.

—Now, this spring of Anno Domini, 1892, is the beginning of a new chapter in the autobiography of Charlevoix, for Charlevoix is writing its own history. Past chapters have not been as bright and sparkling as we would have had them; only now and then sparkling a paragraph that indicated that the hand that wielded the pen was not paralytic. Indications of a firmer hand are now in view and as the future pages of our history are made we foresee in them the work of conscious and animated life. Let us write well.

—Bro. Hilton swears that Moses Bowditch's mule was dragged to the woods and buried, and that he kicked himself out and returned to his owner. If true, the fact was a moral. The party of which the correspondent is a member, is "laying the flattering unction to its soul" that the Republican mule in Michigan is dead and buried, but it will kick itself out and return to the barn yard next fall, with every sinew perfect, and every vocal function in good tone. Beware of the "ides of March," Bro. Hilton. Macbeth's fate comes when "Birnam wood came to high Dunsinane hill." Strange things are happening these days, Bro. Hilton.

CURRENT MARINE NOTES.

Connable & Sons have purchased the interest of Capt. Jepson in the steamer Clara Belle.

Capt. Emery and Engineer Gifford, of the steamer Cummings, arrived Saturday, and are fitting out their boats. The master of the Onekama has not yet been appointed. L. E. Ryerse, of St. Ignace, will sail the Crescent.

Harbor Springs Artesian Well: E. Shay's new engine for his yacht, Aha, arrived Tuesday. It is a triple expansion engine, the first cylinder being high and the other two, low pressure. It is capable of holding 250 lbs. of steam and will not stop on the center.

The propellers, Fannie C. Hart and Eugene Hart, of the celebrated Hart line steamers, will this season make regular trips between Green Bay, Wis., and Mackinac Island, touching at Petoskey. The two captains Hart, owners of the line, command the Fannie and Eugene in person, taking great pride in the command of their boats.

Steamer service at Charlevoix will be greatly increased and improved the coming season—the extending of the route of the City of Charlevoix, doubling the trips of that boat. The Puritan will make two trips per week to the straits, and the Petoskey two trips between Chicago and Little Traverse Bay, as formerly. This makes an average of a boat per day both ways between Chicago and Charlevoix. An effort is being made to secure two Green Bay boats to run here, with good prospects of success.

Sales of vessel property have been recorded at the Milwaukee customs office during the past few days as follows: Schooner Lottie Cooper—Ole Groh and Wm. Lorenz to Eugene Pantzer, of Sheboygan, one third, $1. Schooner Sarlinia—Ole Groh and Wm. Lorenz to Eugene Pantzer, two-eighteenths, $1. Schooner Lydia E. Ramer—Ole Groh and Wm. Lorenz to Eugene Pantzer, two-eighteenths, $1. Schooner Evening Star—Ole Groh to Eugene Pantzer, one-twelfth, $1. Schooner M. Capron—M. Hilty and Chas. Christensen to John A. Nelson, of Milwaukee, and Peter Anderson, of Racine, the whole, $1,800.

This matter of securing a channel of commercial intercourse between Green Bay or the north shore and Charlevoix is worth looking into, and should be brought to the attention of the railroad company by our local authorities. Traverse City saw the point, and a line to Escanaba will open up communication in the spring. Charlevoix is fifty miles nearer the north shore than Traverse City, and has longer seasons of navigation by two months. Capt. Wilbur, who has given this matter considerable thought, sees in such a project profit to all concerned in transportation, and its effect on Charlevoix cannot fail to prove beneficial. We suggest to the Council the advisability of looking the matter up.

Our statement last week that Capt Finnegan was to again sail the Lawrence, was from good authority. He had signed articles for the Lawrence, and the Marine Record stated that fact. He was subsequently released, and accepted the command of the Puritan. Capt. Joe Burke will primarily mate, will be master of the Lawrence, and Tom Baldwin mate. The Lawrence will make one trip per week between Chicago and St. James, touching at all intermediate ports, taking in Petoskey, Harbor Springs and East Jordan, and will be the freight boat of the line, although she will retain her popularity as a passenger steamer, among those who make the lake trip for pleasure, and are not in a hurry. The City of Charlevoix will make two trips a week to the straits. Leaving Chicago at 10 a. m. Wednesdays, and at 8 p. m. Saturdays, arriving here at 10:30 Thursday and 5:30 Sunday; leaving here at 1 p. m. Friday, and again Monday. She will make the run in 21½ hours. Al. Louden, well known here, and last year mate of the Soo City, goes as mate of her.

—What is this we hear about another saloon on lower Bridge street?

—Who will be the next Village Marshal? McLeod says he has a good plenty, thank you.

CURRENT MARINE NOTES.

The steamer Soo City will run this season between St. Joseph and Chicago.

Mike Litney has engaged as engineer of the steamer Friant, for the coming season.

G. C. Gilkes has sold the fishing tug Anspach to A. Dahlmer and Mis-Copp, of Northport.

Capt. Dave Parrish, last season of the steamer Onekama, will next season command the Little Traverse Bay steamer Skater.

The steamer Lawrence began fitting out yesterday. Capt. "Billy" Flanigan comes out in her again, reports to the contrary notwithstanding.

The bridge was swung for the first time this season this morning. The fishing tug Gilkes went down to make an effort to get out, but as we go to press has not succeeded.

Bay Rapids Progress: E. S. Noble secretary of the Iron Co. informs us that he is in correspondence with several parties who are desirous of placing steamboat on the bay with success. A boat to run between Norwood, Northport, Suttons Bay and Old Mission to connect with the C. & W.M. will be put on and close connections made.

Last week Capt. O. E. Wilbur and H. J. McNeill took soundings at the mouth of the river, and found it much more satisfactory than was expected. There is eleven feet of water to Lake Michigan, excepting in one narrow place, where they found but ten feet. Steamers will soon realize that bar, and we will have at least 11 feet of water for next season's business, which is quite satisfactory.

At the ship yards work is booming. Ben. Campbell has six men at work on the steamer Grace Parker and tug Parks. On the other side the schooner Sea Gem shows her barrelling on both sides. She will come out a new vessel. A good force of men is at work on other crafts, and it all emphasizes the fact that a good dry dock would pay in Charlevoix better than at any point in the region.

Information from Manitowoc, Wis., where the steamer City of Charlevoix is being overhauled, states that our consignee will be more than "in it" the coming season. Her new boilers and machinery will be placed more amidships, and she will carry two spars like our Soo City. Her texas will be lengthened, and contain the captain's room. She will again be commanded by Capt. Ira Bishop, and her chief engineer will be J. E. Mason. It is the opinion of those competent to judge that, with her fine model and new and powerful machinery the City of Charlevoix will get to the straits as quick as any of them.

Milwaukee Wisconsin: The outlook for the coarse freighting business on Lake Michigan during the approaching season is perplexingly doubtful. Recently a gentleman interested in the Traverse Bay hardwood trade stated that indications for a decided improvement over past seasons were very bright. In almost the same breath, however, he admitted that the tanner's strike now in progress here would have a bad effect in the trade in bark. As Milwaukee consumes more than one-half of the bark product of the Lake Michigan shores this means a great deal to local carriers. But while everything else may wear an appearance of brightness at east shore points, gloomy reports come from along the west shore and Green Bay.

Capt. H. N. Young, of the new boat for the Traverse Bay line, sends on the following description of her: Commencing on the main deck forward, she will have 33 feet deck space from the stem to the stairway leading to the promenade deck. The boiler-house is 17-4, by 9; fire-room, 5 ft. 4 by 9; engine-room, 7-4 by 9; package-room, 249; cabin, 28-4 by 13; two closets, two wash-rooms; hall between closets; 1 on after end of cabin to stern, 8 feet. On the promenade deck, from stem to pilot house, 15 feet; pilot house, 7-4 by 5-8; texas, 11-4 square, divided into three rooms; from texas to stern, 76 feet of deck. The cabin will be finished in red oak panel-work. The engine will be one of Henry Hoeckley's best. It will be a 20 inch bore, by 22 inch stroke, high pressure, and all latest improvements. Boiler, built by Johnson Bros., 7-6x14, steel, and will carry 130 pounds of steam. No pains or expense have been spared to make her as good as the best and as fast as the fastest. She will be on her route about the middle of May.

The following is a full description of the magnificent cruiser and car ferry being built by the Detroit Dry Dock company to be similar in design to the St. Ignace and which will run on the same route: The new steamer will be one of the most powerful ones ever built with ability to keep passage open at the North pole. She will have a carrying capacity of 60 per cent more than the St. Ignace and 33 per cent more power. Her general dimensions are: 300 feet over all, 52 feet beam, 25 feet molded depth and draft of water 17 feet. She will have a propeller in each end (same as the St. Ignace) driven by separate compound engines, having a total capacity of 4,000 horse power. Four double end boilers will furnish the steam for the main engines and the many auxiliaries, winches, capstans, electric lighting, etc. She will be housed in so as to better protect the cars from heavy weather, with accommodations for officers and crew on upper deck. Her cost is reported to be $325,000.

Correspondence.

To the Editor:

What is the matter with our Prosecuting Attorney? After making the statements he did to Judge Hanscdell, and hearing his reply, why has the Prosecuting Attorney asked for the calling of the grand jury? Does he think himself incompetent to secure testimony and prosecute after indictments are presented? Does he acknowledge that the gang are more clever in spirit-ing witnesses than he is in materializing them?

If the Prosecuting Attorney did not sign the petition for a grand jury why not? I notice none of the county officials signed the petition. Was it because the prosecuting attorney did not? Do they think the grand jury would be useless if indictments were not prosecuted? Are there parties in Charlevoix, Boyne City, and other towns besides East Jordan, who do not want a grand jury? If the prosecuting attorney feels himself incapable to cope with the criminals will he resign and let some one else try it. Has politics anything to do with the absence of certain names from the petition? Is there anyone "near the throne?" Who will enlighten us?

Yours, QUESTION.

A. W. Chew, the Misses Lena Cooper, Kate Haggerty, Maude Dunn, Melissa Willis, Ella Grandy and Lenore Marsac, Hayes teachers, were in attendance at the teachers' examination at Boyne City last Thursday and Friday.

The newspapers report that two families were caught in the late blizzard that visited Oklahoma, and eleven persons were frozen to death. They were out on the open prairie without protection, save what their wagons afforded. Our Hayesites who have the Oklahoma fever should take notice that Oklahoma is not the Garden of Eden.

Traverse City will celebrate St. Patricks' day this year.

R. Connable & Son, the fishmen of this city and Petoskey, have contracted for the construction of twenty-five fish cars.

Harbor Springs will enter the celery arena as there are hundreds of acres of land suitable for the crop thereabouts.

The old settlers' meeting at Elk Rapids, on Tuesday, was a great success. There was a large attendance and a fine time.

B. Titus, of the firm of Carver & Titus, leading insurance men of Traverse City died suddenly last week of heart failure.

Rev Fr. P. J. Deamedt, of St. Mary's Church, Cheboygan, died last week with La grippe. He was 44 years of age, and had resided there for ten years.

The Central House at East Jordan changed proprietors last week. Mr. W. E. Parmeter retiring to make room for Mr. Bonwell of Harbor Springs, formerly from Manton.

Editor Sprague, of the Eagle, is having a lively tilt with the Methodist divine at Traverse City. It all comes about from the un. d. saying that the secular papers of that village do not pay enough attention to religious subjects!

Grand Traverse Herald: The Herald of Feb. 18th, noticed the fact that Capt. Miller, of the Point Betsey life saving station, had taken 400 perch in Crystal lake one day recently. The genial and veracious captain writes us that this is not only true, but that the 400 were caught with one hook and without change of bait. This adds greatly to the interest of the story, especially at a time of the year when fish stories are supposed to be a little out of season.

Cross Village cor. Petoskey Democrat: The LeBlanc brothers, the Beaver Island mail carriers, contrary to the expectations of everyone here reached Beaver Island safely. Paul LeBlanc, accompanied by C. Hissel, another islander, arrived here on last Thursday with the mail, Oliver remaining on the island nursing his frozen hand. The Beaver Islanders have attested their appreciation of the hardships which they have borne and the dangers which they have undergone in carrying the mail from and to the Island by presenting them with $100. At present the ice is perfectly safe and traveling upon it is not attended with much danger, although such a condition is not likely to continue a great while. Paul LeBlanc and Hissel left here Friday, with dogs and sleds, for the island, and will continue to carry the mail in this way the remainder of the winter.

RICH FOR GOVERNOR.

There seems to be very little question that Hon. John T. Rich will be the nominee of the next Republican State Convention for Governor. And we make bold to assert that the event will occur two years behind its time. John T. Rich might have been governor at this present moment, and should have been.

Michigan is safely Republican; it only wants a man who can call out the strength of the party, to overthrow Democracy, and redeem the state. John T. Rich is that man. He has a record of untarnished public service. He is a clean, brainy and honest man. He stepped into public life from the furrow, and after gaining an enviable record in the legislative halls, he went back to the furrow.

There are no spots upon the raiment of Rich but those made by the roll of his farm, and no dirt upon his hands but that which dignifies his manhood.

If we correctly read the signs, this is a Rich year, and a Republican year for Michigan. The party is united, enthusiastic and confident. With Rich the nominee for governor, the victory is already won.

WILLIAM ALDEN SMITH.

Among the leading Republicans of Michigan, there are to-day few more conspicuous figures, and few who have more honestly earned their calling, than William Alden Smith, of Grand Rapids.

He is of Michigan growth, and distinctively the representative of the young Republicans of the state. He has won his way to the front rank in his party by his own energy and ability, and to-day there is not a man of his years in the state who stands nearer to the fountain-head of Michigan Republicanism, or has more friends among the national leaders of the party than he.

As a campaign speaker he ranks among the most effective in the state, and has rendered valuable service as a member of the State Central Committee. His influence in the councils of his party has been recognized in several campaigns.

In the coming State Convention we hope to see his name placed upon the ticket as a delegate-at-large to the National Convention. The young Republican element of the state unquestionably recognizes Mr. Smith as its most capable and most deserving representative, and as an aggressive, statuart and unselfish Republican he is the peer of any in the ranks of his party.

Local News.

The Grand Jury.

Judge Hanscdell has called the Grand Jury for the April term of the Circuit Court for Charlevoix county. Court sits April 12th.

—We are just as proud as we can be!

—C. Y. Cook and wife return home to-day.

—Correspondence and local on our inside pages.

—John M. Ackert went to Detroit Sunday.

—Who said Charlevoix had curvature of the spine!

—Head Schneermann & Guidebeck's new ad in this issue.

—The saloons were closed Monday. Water was good enough for us.

—Bert Mason calls attention this week to bargains in various lines.

—S. M. See is still gaining, and will soon greet his friends on the street.

—Now bore for water—you might strike gas, oil, coal or mineral water.

—The petition for a grand jury has been presented to Judge Hanscdell.

—As sure as you are born, Charlevoix is alive and kicking. Make a note of it.

—W. H. Downer returned from the north yesterday, after a two week's absence.

—Mrs. Will Coulter, of Banks, is here visiting her sister, Mrs. W. A. Smith.

—Will our friends throughout the county send us in lists of Township officers elected?

—McLeod's new No. 2 meat market, at the old Jeffries stand, will be opened next week.

—Don't forget the social to-night at the M. E. Church. Bring your new hymn books.

—A railroad and water-works, both in the same summer, is rather rich for our blood.

—We don't care a ding-dang for anybody. We are on deck, and all hands hold of the lanyard!

—Notice is hereby given that Charlevoix will have no more moss growing around her corners next summer.

—Bro. C. P. Van Ackeu formerly Congregational pastor spent Sunday here and preached Sunday morning.

—We have the new "signs" for printing election tickets in conformity with the new law. Send us your orders.

—Just as soon as you can get to a hydrant, turn the hose on those men who said Charlevoix was a dead town!

—Bro. Hilton says he don't care a cent whether the mule is dead or not. He worked a paragraph in on the subject.

—It looks decidedly as if lake barbers would suffer this year again by reason of the false economy of Congress.

—The pedro club held their "soiree" on Tuesday evening at Odd Fellow's hall, and those present say it was a great event.

—The Elk Rapids Progress last week copied an article from the Sentinel and credit it to the Democrat. Don't do that again Ben.

—Smokers are bragging about that new stickie cigar manufactured by the Charlevoix Cigar factory. It is known as the "C. & W. M."

—A. T. Washburn has a large new advertisement on our eighth page. Mr. Washburn invites your attention to matters of interest to all intelligent buyers.

—About twenty members of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Congregational Church will go to the "Endeavor Rally," at Petoskey Friday.

—We are informed that the Sibley fire engine dropped her tongue and swallowed her end, when the water-works vote was counted Monday night.

—Uncle Robert will be tickled to death next fall, when he sees the boys spiriting water from the hydrants, and he will wonder why he went and did it!

—Wm. Dennis, formerly a resident of Charlevoix, and for some time leader of the "boys band," is here again, and employed in Jay Price's barber shop.

—It is a question which subject has been uppermost in the public mind the past winter—water works or pedro. But now pedro takes a back seat.

—We learn with sorrow of the death in Philadelphia lately, of Rev. Father Logan, who has spent several years on Beaver Island. He was a nephew of Rev. Father Gallagher, and a gentleman of fine attainments.

—"Jack" Nicholls arrived home yesterday from Chicago, having completed his junior course in Hahnemann Medical College last Thursday. Jack has grown taller, and already has a professional look about him. He returns to college in September.

—There is a scrap of law that may not be familiar to a great many: "A finder of property is compelled to make diligent enquiry for the owner thereof &c; I to restore the same. If no finding the property he attempts to conceal such fact he may be prosecuted for larceny.

—It is remarkable how soon a person gets down on a newspaper after taking it for years and then having it stopped with several dollars charged up to the said subscriber. They take the older papers thereafter and have nothing good to say of the paper that is stopped. We have several such fellows on our books.

—The question now absorbing the public mind, in connection with the water-works, is, from whence will the supply be taken? There are three routes from which to choose—Lake Michigan, Pine Lake, and a cluster of wells. We shall not discuss the merits of either, but venture the opinion that, with an eye to the future, and the question of pure water, wells will be the most feasible plan. This matter will, no doubt, be thoroughly investigated.

—There is one feature of the result of the vote on water-works, that will be conceded by all, and from which all will reap the benefit, and that is the activity which will result from the construction of the plant the coming summer. It is estimated that between $7,000 and $8,000 will be expended here for labor. This, in addition to the activity that will prevail by reason of railroad construction, the building of depots, etc., will make a lively summer for Charlevoix. We predict the liveliest summer in the history of Charlevoix.

—Baker & Son, of this place, have the agency of the Ohio Spiral Spring buggy, and have one of their new double turning gear buggies on exhibition. This gear is the newest thing in buggies, and is a revelation of new and scientific principles. It takes but one-half the space of other buggies for turning, and it is impossible to overturn it. It is furnished with an improved hooded top, and the spring features are admirable. It is a handsome, light and serviceable vehicle, and will be the favorite wherever introduced.

—Now, this spring of Anno Domini, 1892, is the beginning of a new chapter in the autobiography of Charlevoix, for Charlevoix is writing its own history. Past chapters have not been as bright and sparkling as we would have had them; only now and then appearing a paragraph that indicated that the hand that wielded the pen was not paralytic. Indications of a firmer hand are apparent, and as the future pages of our history are made we foresee in them the work of conscious and activated life. Let us write well.

—Bro. Hilton swears that Moses Dowdith's mule was dragged to the woods and buried, and that he blessed himself out and returned to his owner. If true, the fact bears a moral. The party of which the correspondent is a member, is "laying the flattering unction to its soul" that the Republican mule in Michigan is dead and buried, but it will kick itself out and return to the barn yard next fall, with every sinew perfect, and every vocal function in good tone. Beware of the "ides of March," Bro. Hilton. Macbeth's fall came when "Birnam wood came to high Dunsinane hill." Strange things are happening these days, Bro. Hilton.

This makes an average of a boat per day both ways between Chicago and Charlevoix. An effort is being made to secure two Green Bay boats to run here, with good prospects of success.

Sales of vessel property have been recorded at the Milwaukee customs office during the past few days as follows: Schooner Lottie Cooper—Ole Groh and Wm. Lorenz to Eugene Pantzer, of Sheboygan, one-third, $1. Schooner Sarplinia—Ole Groh and Wm. Lorenz to Eugene Pantzer, two-eighteenths, $1. Schooner Lydia E. Resser—Ole Groh and Wm. Lorenz to Eugene Pantzer, two-eighteenth, $1. Schooner Evening Star—Ole Groh to Eugene Pantzer, one-twelfth $1. Schooner M. Capron—M. Hilty and Christ. Christgau to John A. Nelson, of Milwaukee, and Peter Anderson, of Racine, the whole, $1,300.

This matter of securing a channel of commercial intercourse between Green Bay or the north shore and Charlevoix is worth looking into, and should be brought to the attention of the railroad company by our local authorities. Traverse City saw the point, and a line to Escanaba will open up communication in the spring. Charlevoix is fifty miles nearer the north shore than Traverse City, and has longer seasons of navigation by two months. Capt. Wilbur, who has given this matter considerable thought, sees in such a project profit to all concerned in transportation, and its effect on Charlevoix cannot fail to prove beneficial. We suggest to the Council the advisability of looking the matter up.

Our statement last week that Capt. Finnegan was to again sail the Lawrence, was from good authority. He had signed articles for the Lawrence, and the Marine Record stated that fact. He was subsequently released, and accepted the command of the Puritan. Capt. Joe Morrow, formerly mate, will be master of the Lawrence, and Tom Baldwin mate. The Lawrence will make one trip per week between Chicago and St. James, stopping at all intermediate ports, taking in Petoskey, Harbor Springs and East Jordan, and will be the freight boat of the line, although she will retain her popularity as a passenger steamer, among those who make the lake trip for pleasure, and are not in a hurry. The City of Charlevoix will make two trips a week to the straits. Leaving Chicago at 10 a. m. Wednesdays, and at 3 p. m. Saturdays, arriving here at 10:30 Thursday and 5:30 Sunday, leaving Soo at 6 p. m. Friday, and at 8 a. m. Monday. She will make the run in 21½ hours. Al. Louden, well known here, and last year mate of the Soo City, goes as mate of her.

—What is this we hear about navigation season on lower Bridge closes?

—Who will be the next Village Marshal? McLeod says he has 5 guns ready, thank you.

DR. TALMAGE'S SERMON.

ELOQUENT DISCOURSE DELIVERED LAST SUNDAY.

Heavenly Congratulations this Morning. The Neareness of the Celestial and the Terrestrial—Joy in Heaven Over the Repenting of the Sinner.

Preached in Iowa.

Dr. Talmage preached last Sunday at Oskaloosa, Iowa. His text was taken from Luke xv. 7: "I tell you that joy in Heaven over one sinner that repent-eth more than over ninety and nine just persons who need no repentance."

A lost sheep! Nothing can be more thoroughly true. I took through the window of the shepherd's house at night. The stables are lighted. The sheep have lost places in our fold against the storm. It has rained all the week, and I put out of it the door and hung it up. I see by the candle light that there are twelve lambs who have come in. The shepherd, flagged now with the long tramp, sits down on a bench, and the wife and children and the children say to him, "Come, now, tell us how you found the poor sheep." "Well," he says, "this morning I went out to the yard to look at the flock. The nearer had I looked over the fence than I saw something wrong. The lame sheep had crept right. Sheep-like, numerous, stupid-eyed, simply gregarious, sheep-like and utterly alone. McDonald, you know we had a hundred. And I wondered which one was gone, and I began again, and I counted, sheep-like, twice, and, sad to say, sheep-like, sheep-like. Well, I whistled to the dogs, and I leaped on the fields and across the bridges, and I tracked the lambs and I tracked the gullies, but no bleating of the poor lost sheep. I said, 'Lost sheep, lost!' The lamb must have fallen into a ditch, or a pack of wolves from the mountains must have torn it to pieces and sucked its life out. But I could not give it up. You see it was a pet lamb. It was that one with the black spot on the right shoulder that used to come and lick my hand as I crossed the field, and so now I could not give it up. So I went on and on and I found it at last. I found it down in a dark and lonely place. What! Not a sheep? Yes, I found a sheep. It was a sheep that had fallen down and had broken its leg. I found it in the ditch and stooped down to lift the poor sheep, and I took my cane and laid it on

Last week Bishop John M. Walden of the Methodist church took the thirty-third degree in Masonry at the Consistory in Cincinnati.

In the Democratic national convention 597 votes will be wanted, and wanted badly. When we consider that they may be wanted by 597 candidates the possibility of a hot time is at once apparent.

The old tree trade theory "you can not sell unless you buy", is thoroughly disproved by the statistics of our foreign trade under the McKinley law. Take last January. In the month we bought dutiable goods of foreigners to the amount of only $62,720,000, on the other hand we sold the foreigners merchandise worth $100,138,000.

According to reports from Washington ex-Speaker Reed as a cur is a rank numbers as compared with Speaker Crisp. Last week he violated one of the cardinal principles of parliamentary law by insisting on proceeding with business without reading, the journal of the previous day. His rulings is denounced by many of the leading Democrats in the house.

The power, prestige and prosperity of our glorious nation, which to day compel the astonishment and challenge the admiration of the world, are but the crystallized and materialized principles of the Republican party. Whatever may be said to the contrary the country has entirely outrun the theories and policies of the Democratic party. In principle that party is moribund, if not dead.

The new tax law passed by the last democratic legislature is causing much trouble and extra expense in nearly every county in the state. The auditor general reports that only 25 of the 84 counties of the state have complied with the law as to the filing of quarterly reports, and that not a single report has yet been filed as required by the new law. The auditor general says that another grievous effect of the new tax law will be to destroy the reliability of titles to real estate, and to greatly increase the amount of delinquent taxes.

The democrats last year had eight of the sixteen supervisors of elections in Wyoming county. The election of superiors for the present year has resulted in giving the Republicans twelve of the sixteen members of the board. The number of counties in which Republicans will have a majority of the members of the supervisor boards this year will be nearly four times greater that the number controlled by the democrats. There will be no such democratic fraud and chicanery this fall as there was last—New York Press.

Free trade England is menaced with a strike of nearly half a million miners against a proposed reduction of wages. The wages paid now are equal only to a bare subsistance, and a reduction would mean not certain ment of luxuries but less of the necessaries of life. The strike means wide spread suffering, not for the miners alone,but for the poor in general. Owing to the increase in the price of wool, while a large number of iron workers will also be thrown out of employment. The condition of affairs in England is not calculated to strengthen the arguments for free trade in America.

Northern Michigan News.

East Jordan has another brick yard.

Game Warden Hilton has been at East Jordan terrifying the natives who persist in catching trout through the ice.

Rev. Geo. W. Wood has commenced the publication of a monthly journal at Boyne City, which he has named the Dustpan. It is a 4 page paper devoted chiefly to religon and the single tax.

Ed. Bedell of Bellaire, was fishing for alligator pike the other day, and suddenly found he had a job on hand. He finally landed his prize out and laid on him on the ice. It was a munka lounge weighing 21½ pounds.

Charles Lowell, an insane patient of the Traverse City Asylum, escaped a few days since. He was subsequently picked up near Big Rapids in a terrible condition and conveyed to a hospital. His feet are so badly frozen that amputation will probably be necessary.

We copy the following verbatim from the Grand Rapids Democrat: A new danger at the seductive church social has been discovered. Twin Moss, an eleven-year-old Petoskey girl stumbled in the church privy and plunged her arm into a kettle of boiling candy. The injury may permanently cripple her.

D. F. Howard, a Genesee county pioneer and a prominent member of Grand Traverse Grange, dropped dead last week at his home in the suburbs of Traverse City. He was recovering from an attack of grip.

A sensational story comes from the "Soo." It is reported that a gang of charcoal burners took a woman from a notorious resort and shut her up in a hot coal smoking charcoal kiln, where she smothered to death. They were drunk.

Capt. Roddy, Jr., of Beaver Island, is seriously ill at the Globe Hotel, Harbor Springs, and is being treated by Dr. Calkins, of Petoskey. The young man drove over from the Islands, being forced to make a long detour, and caught cold, which was followed by an attack of the grippe.

George Delmar, hailing logs near East Jordan, was run over by a load of logs and instantly killed. On a down grade the horses fell. Delmar unhitched them, and as they sprang to their feet the load started before Delmar could get out of the way. He was 28 years of age and left a widow and one small child.

The North Michigan School Master's Club meets at Cadillac, Mich., March 28, 29 and 30. This meeting promises to be the best in the history of the club. The hotels make a special rate of one dollar per day where two persons occupy the same room. Railroads make a rate of one and one third fare for round trip where ten or more leave the same station.

Manistee parties have been at Frankfort trying to secure a suitable site for a drydock and shipyard. They are now negotiating for the site east of the government property on the south shore of the harbor, and expect to construct one of the largest and most complete drydocks on this shore. The steamer Osceola last week delivered 35 car-loads of freight there.

Boyne Citizen: Hose and Everett of Petoskey, have purchased the Capt Jepson store building and residence on Main St. The same parties have also purchased 80 acres directly east of the village which takes in the little lake through which Boyne river flows and known as the Norton property. The same parties are also negotiating for Calamity Hall and Gilson brick block, so we are informed.

The Herald says Capt. "Tip" Miller, of Point Betsey is a liar. The recklessness of the editor is due to the statement of Capt. Miller that he caught 60 perch without changing his bait. Knowing Tip as we do, we will accept his story as true, for two reasons. He is a truthful man, and, even did we doubt the statement, we would be backward about calling him a liar, even if he is 100 miles from us. Tip will take a lay-off and go around among some of the editors who have been questioning his veracity.

On Thursday last, Michel Zerac, well known in Charlevoix, met with a serious loss. He was crossing Torch Lake with a team, behind which were two heavy pairs of logging sleighs, and a light pair, which he was to return home with. When near the west shore the team broke through, and all went to the bottom, Mr. Zerac just escaping with his life. He could see them in twenty feet of water struggling to free themselves. The team was valued at $350, the total loss being nearly $500.

Bellaire Breeze: Last week Alvah Coulter entered a complaint against Charles Turner and Sally Turner, charging them with maintaining a house of ill-fame near Central Lake, on premises belonging to Coulter's father, and which they had recently rented. The examination, which was held before Justice Kibby, lasted three day, and resulted in their being held to answer to the circuit court in bonds of one hundred dollars. The bonds were furnished by Philip Eckhardt, C. W. Richmond and W. H. Huston.

The village of Mackinac Island is about to indulge in the luxury of two presidents. Wm. P. Preston, the boss of Mackinac county Democracy was president. The charter calls for an election of officers on the first Tuesday in March. The officials failed to give the proper notice, but Monday of last week the citizens irrespective of party put in nomination a ticket and Tuesday proceeded to elect it without asking Boss Preston's permission. He kicked and proposes to hold over. M. C. Bailey was elected, and qualified the next day.

An ingenious writer, quite famous in his time says of the quotation, TRUTH. "Truth crushed to earth will rise again." It is very good for Truth, but when Truth has goods to sell, the market may have passed before Truth will materialize, therefore Truth must not be crushed; must be sustained. In other words, the water must not be permitted to pass the mill before it grinds. We know that if you accept advertisements X CUM GRANO SALE you are pardonable. It is for the reason that X Truth is its struggle for a hearing is so hardly pressed by every X thing else but Truth, that those who have truths to tell must urge X them boldly and persistently. X Fair dealing, conscientious treatment of patrons, and earnest solicitation, for their benefit, will X tell in the long run, and we are handling the Detroit, Lansing & Northern and Chicago & West Michigan railroads find that it not only pays us to pursue such methods, and the satisfaction derived therefrom makes our labors a delight that sheds a radiance in which our patrons participate to their benefit. It is not to be expected that we can be as expert in mercantile or manufacturing pursuits as those who devote their time to rush things. You and we go by such standards. But to railroading we devote our lives and we should be away up; in fact, judging by our patronage, we think we are. Therefore we go on in the work of taking good care of those who go to Detroit or Chicago or Traverse City by our lines knowing full well that upon such depends our retaining what we have and getting more.

Try the D. L. & N. or C. & W. M. on your next trip, if you have not heretofore, and if you have, why then try them again. They are always growing better, for in this, as in other pursuits, if we stand still, we, by comparison, get behind, for "the world do move."

SOCIALIST UPRISING.

THE GERMAN CAPITAL GREATLY EXCITED.

Thinning the Anti-Option Bill Talmage's Tabernacle in the Strong Hands—End of a Noted Libel suit—Killed the Daughter to Punishment.

The Lawmakers.

The time of the lawmakers is entirely occupied, on 25th, by consideration of the anti-option bill and the Sherman bill. This session has seen much work, although the attention of the Senate has a little by the Senate, which, in the report of the railroad representatives called for by Mr. Sherman's resolution was censured and referred to the Committee on Agriculture. The Senate also passed a resolution calling on the Secretary of the Treasury for copies of reciprocal agreements under the tariff act, was taken up by the Senate and moved the following amendment: And that the Secretary of State shall inform the President whether any steps have been taken by the representatives of the United States at Brussels looking with Mexico, and if so what has been done and with what result. Also, that the Secretary shall inform the President whether any steps have been taken for the purpose of opening negotiations, or have been contemplated, which has been the cause of Jamieson's visit to Brussels.

I Go for a Duck.

THE the agony of disappointed hopeless, ing with clamoring voices among the masses of the German empire was exemplified in Berlin Thursday afternoon, when a body of 3,000 or 4,000 unemployed workingmen met by prearranged appointment in a public square and passed a series of inflammatory resolutions demanding the overthrow of the present system of government and the substitution of a system of workingmen's Socialism, the nationalization of capital, and calling upon the government to take steps to "protect the interests of the working classes." The news of this full gathering of the anarchists, and the mere order of the authorities prohibiting such gatherings spread with electrical rapidity throughout the city. The result was that the Berlin Bourse was closed, and to take advantage of the excited manoeuvered in the wonderful Bourse, and the regular principal work put under lock and key.

The Anti-Option Bills.

THE anti-option bills of Washburn and Hatch will probably be reported about the middle of next month, says a Washington correspondent. The Senate bill will, as now, be amended so as to make it applicable to "futures." It is said that it has no promises the grain dealers, and it would certainly kill the bill, although it would not see anything in the bill as originally introduced to prevent gambling. As the grain dealers then stand differ into, however, it would be a mistake a chance about which there will not be the slightest shadow of doubt. All he wants, he says, is to stop gambling, and he will be delighted to have dealer in futures need have no cause for fear. HIS RIDE FOR LIBERTY.

BOLD ATTEMPT AT TRAIN ROBBERY IN NEW YORK.

In Jesse James Style.

The shooting of an express messenger on a Central Hudson train, the riding of a masked robber, the flight of the robber on the engine of another train, from which he drives the engine at the point of a revolver, a running fight from the engine for miles followed by another engine filled with railway men, and the final capture of the desperado by a sheriff's posse in a swamp, after a wild pursuit across the country, are some of the sensational features in the most desperate attempt at train robbery in the history of the Central Hudson Railway, and which cost in its wake as an exhibition of coolness and nerve the famous exploits of the Jesse James band or other outlaws of Western fame.

Says a Rochester, N. Y., telegram: Train No. 31 on the Central Hudson is known as the American Express Company's special. It runs every day in the year between New York and Buffalo, and carries only goods and property shipped by that company. The train leaves New York at 8 o'clock each evening and is due to this city at 8 o'clock morning. Nearly all the cars are the regular vestibule express cars, and the regular vestibule express car and in it is used the safe belonging to the United States Express Company. Western banks, as well as the money brokers of Rochester, ship their money by express from New York and the East.

Daniel T. McInerney was in charge of the express car on the night of the 23rd and two men, who had him with the muzzle of a revolver pointed at his head, ordered him to stop the train. He complied with the demand, placing them in a vestibule, and then went back to the car conductor, who was in the coach with the passengers, and told him that he had shot a man and very fatally. It was thought that he had killed a man, and something was wrong on the express train.

Going out on the platform of the car the conductor saw the bandits through the hole which the bullet had made in the door of the express car, and a man whose face below the eyes was concealed by a red handkerchief. The messenger he could just see, and he went back to the coach and told the passengers of the situation. The three stood guard over them, while the conductor had a lantern along the sides of the express car. Suddenly a form appeared at the side door of the express car. Revolver bullets whistled past their ears, and they thought they heard commanding them to signal the engineer to go on or kill the men in pursuit of the express car. The conductor was ordered to go back and tell the men to jump off, run back to Dublin, and telegraph ahead to have the robbers that they had a train robber on board.

This was done and the express kept ahead the engineer to go ahead at full speed, and the train was run through out date jump and would be captured at Dublin, a station, however, the following by the parcelles inspectors, and, when they would be brought back to the usual executive proceedings. If caught on the spot, they would be shot.

THE White Star steamship Majestic, which left Liverpool for New York, having made a remarkable run in point of time, the distance covered, the distance covered, the distance covered, the Majestic time was five days eighteen hours and eight minutes, and distance covered 2,775 miles. The time of the passage last completed the run of the Majestic, which covered 2,775 miles, and distance covered 2,775 miles.

THE Mexican Central for the first three months of 1891, 2,192,096 pounds of silver lead ore was exported to the United States from the State of Sonora, Mex. The production of gold in Mexico has increased from $1,100,000 during the fiscal year 1890-91, to $1,150,000 during the fiscal year 1891-92. During the same period the silver output has increased from $4,120,000 to $4,600,000. Since 1877 the gold production of Mexico aggregate $12,000,000 and the silver production $48,545,000.

R. G. DUN & CO.'S Weekly Trade Review says:

The business situation is not as satisfactory as it should be, considering the great and general failures in conducting of business and merchandise continues, there is nothing demand and much expensive to less. A further decline in cotton blight of the cotton, and the southern, rails and the speculative stocks, attributed to the Reading failure, and the Chicago and Northwestern, and the great trouble in wheat and disposition to restrict exports. Nevertheless, the fact that exports of wheat have been doubtedly, and for the last week or two greatly, and have been only 89,000 bushels from Atlantic ports, and 1,000,000 bushels from Pacific ports, and the exports of flour have fallen the price by cents during the week, are not to be ignored. 87,000 bushels of advance from any other which can be made, and the fall in price of the change has been nearly half a cent, and the decline, the decline, that has declined half a cent with large exports, but in a region. Pork products, lard, and meat, have substantially not changed, and oil is 1½ cents higher on the decline in production. The fall in price of wheat during the past week has been the week than last week, but exports 20 per cent greater.

INSTRUCTED FOR HILL.

NEW YORK'S DELEGATION IS SOLID FOR DAVID.

The Albany Convention Unites the Democratic Sentiment of the Senator's Name for the Presidency and Adopts the Full Hotel-Auditorium Ticket.

York State will Vote as One Man.

New York's solid vote will be cast on the first ballot at the National Democratic convention for Senator Hill, and there will not be one delegate of the twenty-two to follow the instructions of Tammany Hall in 1884 and pledge to accept the use to which this name is put in the convention. The Albany convention which adopted the delegates to "present" the name of David B. Hill, and that means that they must vote for Hill at least one ballot, or as much longer as the majority of seventy-two delegates say, for the Senator is the unit rule governs. Hill is the choice, not of Tammany, Hill and Tammany are at the parting of the ways, and Tammany has nothing to offer the Senator. Hill's present strength is offered him by Democrats who are sick of the Tammany rule, and who are sick of the Tammany rule, and who are sick of the Tammany rule, and

SOCIALIST UPRISING,

Thwarting the Anti-Option Bills Talked of—Talmadge's Sermon to the Saints—End of a Noted Liar Sold—Killed Her Daughter by Punishment.

The Lawmakers.

The time of the House was entirely consumed, the 19th, in such matters as the Utah-Stewart election case from Idaho. This question was discussed in advance and gled the attention of the Senate for a while. In the Senate, when the report on the rainfall experiments called for by the Sherman act of last session was laid before the Senate by the chairman of the committee on Agriculture, Mr. Hale's resolution of June 18, calling on the Secretary of the Treasury for copies of the report of agreements under the law tariff bills, which have been sent to the Senate, was followed by a long discussion. Mr. Hale's resolution was finally adopted, the Senate wishing to know what steps have taken by the authorities to negotiate a reciprocal commercial treaty with Mexico—and if so, what has been done and with what result—and, that the information called for, if not already in, or expected to have been transmitted to Congress, be communicated to the Senate if not inconsistent with the public interest. Debate was in progress when adjournment was had.

A Big Suit in Seda.

That the spirit of discontent is spreading, with alarming force among the masses of the German empire was exemplified in Berlin Thursday afternoon, when a body of 3,000 or 4,000 unemployed workingmen met in a preconcerted arrangement, in a public square and passed a series of inflammatory resolutions denouncing their employers and the system of government which established the latter towards the workingmen beneath the iron heel of capital, and calling upon the government to take steps to protect the interests of the working classes. The news of this bold gathering in defiance of the usual order of the authorities prohibiting such gatherings spread like wildfire throughout the city. The result was that the socialist agitators were induced to take advantage of the excited unemployed men to make speeches from the balcony of the Imperial Hotel. The police dispersed the crowd, and after taking from eighty to fifty prisoners, seemed content to let the agitators have the stage. The story of seventy wounded persons who remained on the field of battle were attributed to a neighboring hospital, and the regular prisoners were put under lock and key.

The Anti-Option Bills.

The anti-option bills of Washburn and Hatch will probably be reported about the middle of next month, says the Washington correspondent. The Senate bill will be reported with the amendment to permit of legitimate dealing in futures. For such bills to be produced the grain dealers, and he would not doubt, the cotton dealers, he could not see anything in the bill so seriously interrupted as to prevent such dealing. As the grain dealers thought differently, however, he would submit, before a change should be made, to the slightest ambiguity of phrase. All he asked was that the bill go along, and in his mind no legitimate force would be found to have cause for fear. Chairman Hatch, when asked if he would, as reported, advocate the substitution of the Washburn bill, answered, for his own part, that when he argued so much opposition among the practical grain dealers of the world, he pitied that he did not know. The probabilities are that he will be.

The Gray Libel Suit.

JUDGE PARSONS, of Pittsburg, passed sentence in the Gray libel case as follows: That the Post Publishing Company pay $500 to the commonwealth, A. S. Bar $50 to the commonwealth, and James Mills $20 to the commonwealth. Judge Porter stated that he made a mistake in his judicial action that it was done during a heat of campaign, and was due to negligence rather than intent.

R. G. DUN & Co.'s Weekly Trade Review says:

The business situation is not so satisfactory as it should be, or as it has been. While the gradual increase in distribution of merchandise continues, manufacturers are in a fluctuating demand and much depression to iron. A further decline in cotton brights prices of cotton in the Southern trade, and the speculative mania, attributed to the Chicago pork pit, has caused a decrease in the demand for cotton goods, and results in wheat and livestock in central and Western markets, notwithstanding the fact that exports of wheat have been doubledating, and for the days of the present week have been nearly 800,000 bushels from Atlantic ports, and the receipts of livestock have been so large at Chicago has lifted the price 65c cents during the week, and yesterday the receipts were 27,000 head, whereas from any which can be expected to be marketed. In a few weeks Europe has been heavy demands for stocks of provisions, and the Chicago pork pit has declined half a cent with large exposure but large receipts. Pork products, cotton, and coffee are substantially unchanged, and oil is 1½ cents higher on Pennsylvania crude. Cotton is a shade higher, producers being 12 cent dollar for the week that ended, that exports 50 bales cent greater.

HIS RIDE FOR LIBERTY.

BOLD ATTEMPT AT TRAIN ROBBERY IN NEW YORK.

In Jesse James Style.

The shooting of an express messenger on a Central Hudson train, the robbing of a valuable safe, the flight of the robber with the booty, the pursuit by a posse of citizens, followed by another chase, and another running fight from the engine cab on a locomotive, followed by another fight with railway men, and the final capture of the desperado by a shotgun posse in a swamp, after a wild pursuit across the country, are some of the sensational features in the most desperate attempt at train robbery in the history of the Central Hudson Railway, and which east in the shade as an exhibition of coolness and nerve the famous exploits of the Jesse James band or other outlaws of Western fame.

Says a Rochester, N. Y., telegram: Train No. 31 on the Central-Hudson is known as the American Express Company's special. It runs every day in the year between New York and Buffalo and carries only goods and property shipped by that company. The train leaves New York at 9 o'clock each evening and is due in this city at 7:30 in the morning. Nearly all the cars are run through without being broken, as the most valuable express matter, the car is known as the "money" car has to be sent the specific from the United States Treasury for Western banks, as well as the money in process of exchange between the banks of New York and the West.

Daniel T. McInerney was in charge of the money car on the trip Saturday night. He was alone in charge of eight cars and one day coach for the accommodation of the express company's employes, who, with the exception of a conductor, who was in the coach with the express messenger, had left the train at whistle sound very faintly. It was supposed at the time that it was only something was wrong on the engine.

Going out on the platform of the car, McInerney was shot twice through the hole which the bell cord passes through, and fell to the floor as a man whose face below the eyes was covered with a black handkerchief and a ranger he could not see, and he would not see, had his revolver in his hand and two traltmen. The three stood leaning over the dead express messenger and talking in low tones, when he recovered his senses enough to open his eyes and see the two men in the car. He admitted he was the man who attempted the robbery to Chief of Detectives Hayden of this city. He believed he had a sandwich-wrapped Oliver Cattle Percy who robbed Express Messenger Ben Ward of Utica last fall. The story of the attempted robbery and the chase of Lyons, is this.

The express messenger will not talk. Cross boarded the train when it pulled out of Syracuse and entered one of the cars of the express. He was provided with a hooded cape. Footwear, and in the slight curtsey of the door on one side of the car he let himself down onto the other, and reeling his toes on the ledge that runs across the car, he lay in the glass of the side door and saw the express messenger in front of one of the safes, which was open, making up his bills. He stealed the door, and as his revolver, covered the messenger, and ordered him to hand up the bills.

Instead of doing so McInerney reached for the signal cord with one hand and for his revolver with the other. A bullet smashed the hand, but not before the signal had been given that caused the conductor, Thos. McDermey fired on the robber and put a bullet through his coat. Then the robber shot the messenger twice—once in the right leg and once in the left leg. He climbed into the car and a desperate struggle took place which did not end until the train was stopped for the first time, near Weedsport. It is evident that the robber had climbed on top of the cars and remained there until the stop at Lyons. So far as can be learned the robber escaped absolutely nothing.

NEGRO ROASTED ALIVE.

Horrible Punishment Meted Out to An Alleged Rapist.

Five thousand people Wood on the fire that blazed this afternoon, says a dispatch from Texarkana, Ark., and with such fiend-like glee that the burning of City, wakened Wattie Ed City, a negro, who was tortured to death for criminally assaulting Mrs. Henry Jewell last Saturday. Mrs. Jewell is the young wife of a respectable farmer living two miles south of town, and the sensational feature in the most desperate attempt at train robbery in the history of the Central Hudson Railway, and which east in the shade as an exhibition of coolness and nerve the famous exploits of the Jesse James band or other outlaws of Western fame.

NEW YORK'S DELEGATION IS SOLID FOR DAVID.

The Albany Convention Orders the Five Members of the Senatorial Name for the Presidency and Adopts the Unit Ballots with Hill Name.

York State Convention.

New York's solid vote will be cast on the first ballot at the National Democratic Convention for Senator Hill, and there will not be one delegate of the seventy-two in the delegation to "present" the name of David B. Hill, and that means that they must vote for Hill at least one ballot, and as much longer as the majority of seventy-two delegates say, for the Senator from Deadwood, Dakota. The convention was for Tammany, Hill and tariff reform, and it applauded each of them. Everything was done with a rush and a roar, and the Tammany delegation carried the day. Not a speech was made in favor of Cleveland or Governor Boyle, Permanent Chairman Sickles and Senator Gorman, who had not been prepared in advance, substituted for Hill, and so

WATER-WORKS.

That Is What the People Have Decided They Will Have.

There are no flies or bugs on Charlevoix!

Charlevoix is alive, to her interests, and will have first-class system of water-works.

That is the way the ballots read Monday, when 151 were counted for the project, to 68 against—more than two to one.

In our opinion Charlevoix did itself credit in thus placing itself on record for a future policy of aggressive public spirit.

The amount voted—$25,000—will give us a plant of which we may be proud, and we are confident that time will justify the decision.

The new council, upon which will devolve the responsibility of carrying out the provisions of the vote, has a task before it of no uncommon magnitude,—a task requiring prudent and wise administration. They will be harassed by diverse public opinion, as to methods, and, possibly fine friction even in the council room.

But it is composed of honest men, whom we are confident will do the proper thing, as, after careful investigation, it appears to them. They should not be hampered by unjust criticism, or embarrassed by hasty judgment. Now boys, spread yourselves.

—The Chicago Resort people favored water works, although they have a system of their own. H. V. Bilesburg is another of that kind.

—John Smallegan has bought out Wilkinson's Atwood store, and will continue the business. He has also bought Dan Flanagin's hardware store building, and will move it to the main store, as an addition.

—These are the good-by trips on the Petoskey road.

—Last Wednesday the tug Gilen went out and set a gang of nets, but owing to the cold and stormy weather they are out yet.

—The SENTINEL sets up this week, at home, over eight columns of matter. Make a note of it. Is there another paper in Charlevoix county that does as well?

—Detroit school authorities last week went to Chicago to inspect the Smead and Hess systems of heating and ventilating. The report favors the former. In many contests between the two since the Hess system was put in here, the Smead folks have won in all but three, against odds in price.

Personal Notes.

C. E. Hinds and W. L. French were in town last Thursday.

Joe Shores is down from Charlevoix and is getting over his injury much sooner than was expected.

Will Cowen is going to try and meet his brother in Grand Rapids, March 31st. His brother is scenic painter and stage carpenter of the Niobe Theatrical Co.

G. V. Nash has sold his piano to W. H. Franklin of Charlevoix.

Nash will put a new piano and trimmer in the mill this spring.

The young folks enjoyed themselves with a nice little dance party at N. A. Shores last Saturday evening.

D. G. Hartlett's family have removed to Charlevoix, and Adolph Superaw has moved into his house.

A caucus for the purpose of nominating township officers is called for Wednesday evening, Mar. 23rd.

A surprise party at Frank Richardson's Monday evening in honor of Miss Isabel Richardson. Everybody went and had a sweet time pulling molasses candy.

"Uncle Gene" and "aunt Olive" Spaulding also celebrated their wedding anniversary last Saturday evening with a surprise party, all the old people turned out and wished them many happy returns of the day.

Frank Richardson received word from Lowell, Mass., that his mother and sister were coming here in the spring, so Miss Ina Richardson has postponed her visit to Lowell.

The school exhibition was postponed last week, but will take place this week Friday night.

At the close of the revival meetings last Sunday, five united with the M. E. Church on probation.

As to Your Clothing

There is a new Clothing Store in town, and I am glad of it. I am aware that a good many were dissatisfied, thinking I had it all my own way, and was overcharging for my goods. I have always tried to please my customers, and to do so I have been adding to my stock until I have the largest stock of Clothing and Furnishing Goods that I have ever had in my store. All I ask is for you to give me a show, and don't forget to look over my stock before buying, and if I don't give you prices and goods to down the world, I won't expect your trade.

HORRIBLE DISASTER.

East Jordan Suffers a Terrible Loss of Life and Property.

The East Jordan Lumber Co's Mill Goes Up Blown Up.

The most distressing catastrophe of its kind in the history of Northern Michigan, and one of the most horrible in the annals of the state, occurred at East Jordan Monday.

At seven-thirty a.m., of that day the four boilers of the East Jordan Lumber Co's No. 2 mill, known as the "big red mill," just north of the village, on the arm, blew up, totally demolishing the mill, killing 7 persons, and seriously injuring others. The killed are as follows:

ALBERT COOK, married.
EMANUEL HURT, married.
JOHN BROWN, single.
WM. BEACH, single.
SIMON CARNEY, single.
ANZIE CRISTY, single.
PETER SHELDON, single.

Christy was the only one of the seven not killed instantly. He was horribly mutilated and lived three hours in terrible agony.

Bodies were torn asunder, and mangled horribly—one man's leg being some distance from his dead body, another had a bolt driven through his head, while another had his face entirely carried away.

Seriously injured: Chas. Bowen, Geo. Smith, Sandy Reinhart and John Ringold. Several others were more or less injured.

Reinhart had one leg broken in two places, and was horribly scalded about his face and body. Ringold had both eyes blown out, and is in danger of dying. The wife of Cook who was killed, is in a delicate condition of health, and fears for her life are entertained. There were several miraculous escapes. One man driving a horse and cart escaped injury, while the entire outfit was crushed beneath the falling smoke-stack.

The mill had been started at the usual time, but the steam had run down, and all hands were about the mill waiting for steam, many of them about the boiler and engine room, as the morning was cold. The mill had just started when the explosion took place with terrific force.

Fragments of the boilers were thrown for a quarter of a mile in all directions, and bricks were picked up in the Wilson Hoyt Co's yard across the Arm. The ruin of the mill was most complete. Jas. Potter, the engineer, had left the mill nearly an hour before, leaving the engine room in charge of the fireman, Ringold. The explosion was heard for miles, and shook the houses on the South Arm side.

A coroners jury was immediately impanelled, consisting of D. C. Loveday, S. G. Isaman, W. L. French, J. E. Chew, Anton Walraad and Wm. H. Healey. The investigation was brought before Dr. Foster, coroner, Prosecuting Attorney Burnham appearing for the people and E. N. Clink for the company, and a determination is expressed to ascertain the true cause of the disaster.

The greatest excitement prevailed throughout the town, and business was practically suspended, while the people were plunged into the deepest sorrow and consternation.

The mill has a history of adverse circumstances since its erection in 1885. It was built by Martin & Wooden, of Vermontville, Mich., Charlevoix competing with East Jordan for its location. It failed to pay its owners, and it was sold to Stoepel Brothers, of Detroit, and it finally was transferred to a corporation known as the Stoepel Lumber Co., swamping one or more men, and was finally sold at a receivers sale, to the East Jordan Lumber Co. for $26,000, and was being operated by them at the time of its destruction.

The cause of the explosion is yet unknown, but the reports are, first that the boilers were unfit for use; second that water was low and steam too high. Jos. Hyland, of this place, was at East Jordan at the time of the disaster, having just finished putting in a hand-hole plate on these boilers. At the time of our going to press the evidence brought out at the inquest clearly proves the cause to have been low water. At the time of the explosion water had been turned into the boilers. No evidence was given to prove their weakness.

Dr. Lefevre was telephoned for to assist in caring for the wounded, and a large number of our people went to the scene of the wreck.

—Postmaster Berdan has been granted a pension of $12 per month with $147 up to date, and he smiles as he hands you out your mail.

—There has been a great deal said and written about the lawlessness of Beaver Island people, but they never had a grand jury empaneled there.

—Mr. Guisbeck, of the dry goods firm of S. & G., with his family, left last week for Hancock, upper peninsula, where they have leased a hotel.

—Look well to the election of your postmaster. The question of best results with highway money is a vital one. Good roads are our sinews of commerce.

—The farm house of Robert Price of Eveline, was destroyed by fire, with all its contents, and $100 of school district money, Thursday night. No insurance.

—Mel. Livingston and Will Newman left this morning for Grand Rapids, where they will undertake to pass examination for the railway mail service.

—The council are already in receipt of several communications from capitalists wanting to bid on our water-works bonds, and from water-works people wanting to enter the lists for the work.

—The Noble House (formerly the Ingleside) has a card in this issue. Mr. and Mrs. Noble are well known to Charlevoix people, and that they will make the house popular there is no doubt.

—John O'Neill will have four new gangs, or 22 miles of new nets to add to his fishing outfit this spring. The tug Minnie Warren has had her boiler thoroughly overhauled, and has received a new shaft and wheel.

—The Charlevoix schools took up its penny collection for the educational exhibit at the worlds fair, one day last week, and $5.71 will go to swell the amount raised by the Michigan pupils. The names of the pupils will be enrolled and bound for the exhibit.

—Last fall a sail boat came ashore just north of here, and the item was published in these columns. Last week Postmaster Berdan received a letter from A. Anderson, of North Manitou Island, stating that his two sons, Gus and Charlie, left there last fall in a boat, and had not been heard from since, and asked for a description of the boat.

—Guy S. Williams, son of Nelson Williams, died at their home on Main street, Saturday night, of pneumonia, aged 18. His loss is a sad affliction to his widowed father, and two sisters, Miss Hattie Williams, of Lansing, and Miss Carrie Williams, a teacher in the Ironton school. He was an only son and brother, and was a quiet and industious young man, of good habits.

—A calamity such as that which befel East Jordan Monday, calls out the spontaneous sympathy of all. Charlevoix knows what it means. The Champlain disaster is still fresh in our minds. Our neighbors at East Jordan are assured of the deepest sympathy of this community, not only for the great loss of life, but the commercial damage it entails upon a wide-awake and enterprising town. That East Jordan may speedily recover from the terrible blow, is our earnest desire.

—The superintendent of public instruction called the attention of Attorney General Ellis to the provisions concerning school taxes in sections 41 and 43 of act 200, public acts of 1891, and gets this truly comforting decision: "The delinquent school may be made good from the state and county tax before the latter are turned over to the county treasurer." This virtually does away with delinquent school taxes, and no more schools need be closed for lack of funds if there are any county or state taxes collected. The schools have the inside track. This will be cheering news to many of our northern school districts.

—The Democrat, under a double head, publishes the report that the alleged Boyne City railroad project is to take in East Jordan en route, which it correctly assumes would be equivalent to another railroad for Charlevoix. We would remind our brother that railroad surveys are useful in many ways besides building railroads. That same survey was made once before by H. S. Beardslee, "by orders of the G. R. & I. R. R. Co. It was a most excellent piece of strategy. The annual meeting of the company occurred some time ago, and nothing can be learned regarding the Boyne City scheme. But we sincerely hope that it may be true. The more railroads that touch Pine Lake, the better for everybody.

—Mr. Loraine, late of Minnesota, but now of East Jordan, where he conducts an alleged newspaper, repeats the foolish story about the SENTINEL accepting bribes in political campaigns. The gang from which he gathered this lie is long since dead and buried, but we offer the following proposition: If Mr. Loraine will furnish the statement in writing of any reputable person, or produce evidence of the truth of the charge the SENTINEL will pay $50 to any charitable object he may name. And we assert that any person who says that one dollar ever crossed our palm for such a purpose is a liar and a slanderer. God pity the man whose reputation depends upon the word of the gang that has infested East Jordan.

Republican The Rising Everywhere—Circulation and Business The Immense Advertisements—Money in Disappear The Case of an Idahoan—Brief Political Notes.

Mills' Policy a Road to Ruin.

A few days ago the St. Louis Republic published a long interview with Mills, of Texas, on all sorts of the many strange things he said was his.

A reduction of the tariff to 25 per cent. would not reduce revenue, but would so increase imports that the revenue would be greater than now. Sugar would be so cheap that the consumption would be increased, and the revenue would be increased. Wool would be cheaper, and the consumption would be increased, and the revenue would be increased. Free wool would make a great industry in Texas. Sugar would be cheaper, and the consumption would be increased, and the revenue would be increased. Free sugar would make a great industry in Louisiana. Free lumber would be cheaper, and the consumption would be increased, and the revenue would be increased. Free coal would be cheaper, and the consumption would be increased, and the revenue would be increased. Free salt would be cheaper, and the consumption would be increased, and the revenue would be increased. Free iron would be cheaper, and the consumption would be increased, and the revenue would be increased. Free steel would be cheaper, and the consumption would be increased, and the revenue would be increased. Free tin would be cheaper, and the consumption would be increased, and the revenue would be increased. Free tin would make a great industry in Pennsylvania. Free tin would make a great industry in Ohio. Free tin would make a great industry in Indiana. Free tin would make a great industry in Illinois. Free tin would make a great industry in Dakota. Free tin would make a great industry in Idaho. Free tin would make a great industry in Oregon. Free tin would make a great industry in California. Free tin would make a great industry in Nevada. Free tin would make a great industry in Arizona. Free tin would make a great industry in Alaska. Free tin would make a great industry in Utah. Free tin would make a great industry in Wyoming. CHARLEVOIX, MAR. 23, 1892.

Eleventh Ohio, Republican Convention.

A convention of the Republicans of the Eleventh Congressional District of Michigan, will be held at Bellaire, in said district, on Tuesday, April 12th, A. D. 1892, at one o'clock, p. m., for the purpose of selecting a candidate for Congressman to be voted for at the ensuing National Convention to be held at Minneapolis, June 7th, 1892, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before it. The several counties will be entitled to the following number of delegates:

Charlevoix	1	Oceola	2
Antrim	2	Clare	2
Grand Traverse	2	Mecosta	2
Kalkaska	1	Isabella	2
Missaukee	2	Montcalm	2
Wexford	2	Gratiot	2

By authority of Rep. State Central Com.

GEO. P. STORY, Chm.

Harrison The Man.

Without question Michigan will send to Minneapolis an Alger delegation, who will stand by their candidate as long as there is a fighting chance.

Alger has avowed himself a candidate, and will undoubtedly gain some strength outside of Michigan. But his only chance for his nomination exists in the possibility of a combination upon the "favorite son," against Harrison.

But Benjamin Harrison should be the nominee of the party. He has given the country a safe and honest administration. He is a statesman of the broad and patriotic type, and can win on his record.

He has given the country satisfactory results of a policy of firm and consistent Republican doctrine, and National dignity, and inaugurated a system of commercial reciprocity that is but the beginning of an era of prosperity, if carried out.

His administration needs no apology or defense.

* * *

The Free Traders insist that the tariff fosters trusts and combines, and yet, with anthracite coal on the free list, it is controlled by the most heartless combine in existence.

* * *

Sullivan and Corbett have signed for a fight in New Orleans in September. We don't believe in prize fights, but we sincerely hope that Corbett will smash that man Sullivan so badly that the big brute will not know himself in a glass.

* * *

The Democrats now say that they do not object to the constitutionality of Speaker Reed's quorum ruling, but to his abuse of that right. The atmosphere is clearing. The Democrats are getting ready to indorse Mr. Reed by following his example, without saying so.—Inter Ocean.

* * *

The Prohibitionists of Maryland have adopted as their emblem a portrait of Washington, surrounded by the stars and stripes. The appropriateness of the selection fails to make itself apparent. The Father of his Country was fond of "a little wine for the stomach's sake," and were he alive today would not feel at all flattered if he were classed as a Prohibitionist.

* * *

Ex-President Cleveland thinks the Democratic party would surely win the coming presidential election if it were true to itself and true to principles, and if it fulfilled its pledges to the people. This is equivalent to saying that the Democrats have little or no chance. When was the Democratic party ever true to anything but the spoils principles? And when has it ever fulfilled a pledge to the people? Mr. Cleveland knows whereof he speaks, because his administration wasn't true to the Mugwump contingent of the Democratic party.

Detroit Times: Prohibition is a political issue, pure and simple. We do not mean in theory, but in actual practice. Prohibition has nothing whatever to do, practically, with the suppression or the curtailment of the liquor traffic. If any respectable body of citizens in the state of Michigan shall ever turn their attention to the execution of existing temperance laws this state will become at once transformed into a better temperance community than is Maine or Kansas. But Michigan Prohibitionists will not do this. Prohibitionists are never willing to do real work. They know as well as other citizens know that the execution of law is the main bront of all practical legislation, and this is the very part of the work which they shirk. Prohibitionists love to talk; they love to save the world from their talk; they love to hear themselves talk; they love the work of making wordy resolutions; they love to legislate, because the act only involves a debate and a vote. They profess to think that laws execute themselves, when they know better. Prohibitionists know that Michigan already has the best temperance code in the civilized world, and Prohibitionists know that every citizen in the state is as good a policeman as any man on the force for the purpose of making complaints and entering testimony against lawbreakers. Prohibitionists know that there is scarcely a four-square block within the five limits of this city in which does not exist the illegal traffic of liquor. Prohibitionists know where these places are, and they do not know they can get infallible pointers by calling at this or any other newspaper office. Yet the Prohibitionists are still keeping up their conventions, for what purpose only those can guess who are familiar both with the ways of politicians and of persons of great moral ideas.

The lawlessness in the vicinity of East Jordan, which has been the subject of considerable newspaper comment during the past few months, was made an issue in the spring election. The campaign waxed hot, and the clergymen even urging from the pulpit that the anti-saloon ticket be supported. The result was a defeat for whisky, the majorities ranging from 8 to 30, and the victory was enthusiastically celebrated with bonfires and band music.

SUCCESS.

Separate from the many holding great possessions, those who by inheritance or alliance have had possessions thrust upon them and having done this, it will most likely be found that those remaining will impress you with the fact that the winning qualities of the successful are about the same in all. These latter are the thinkers—the workers, the leaders; and it is safe to say that they are worth to the rest of us, more than is indicated by the accumulations which represent the pecuniary reward of their services. They have anticipated the condition of the fore to come, and put name in shape—with the result that they are the winners. Illustrations? Why, they are all around us. In every reputable business concern there certainly is something of this character, or it would be sans reputation. Now for instance, the D., L. & N. Railroad; yes, and the West Michigan;—something distinctive about them, hard to say just what, but the proof of their passenger perfection is in their patronage. Of course in all communities there are those who once attarted toward a certain thing and then properly treated become adherents, and perhaps prejudiced in favor of this or that party, but they are not of sufficient numbers for a railroad to depend on. Besides, the railroad lives on forever. They die in time, and it is a physical impossibility to enforce upon their heirs, their prejudices, with other savings.

No; there's only one course toward the end desired, and that is to keep up with the procession; find out what the people want, and give it to them, and where they lag in coming forward to get it, go and meet them. That's our theory and we don't mind confiding it to you. If you think it a proper notion on our part, kindly encourage us. It is your benefit to do. You can do so by using our lines when you go to Chicago, Detroit or Traverse City or Saginaw.

MEMORIES

The Scribe Happens Reminiscences of the Fair Premises and Environs.

In the autumn of 1868, before the scribe ever saw Charlevoix, he was one of a party who "footed it" from pre-historic Antrim City to the waters of South Arm on a pleasure expedition. The scribe was then residing in a branch of Antrim City, for purposes of health and courtship. The climate and surroundings favored both. Antrim City—

* * *

A word about Antrim City. It has long since ceased to be. It is now but a memory. Once it had a postoffice; but now—alas! The spot where Antrim City stood is about three miles south of Norwood, and directly west of where Atwood now sits in its glory. Atwood was yet to be—it was then back in the country, and known to us metropolitan people as "the state road." Antrim City was at the mouth of "Deer Creek," upon which was located a small mill and below this the fishing establishment of W. L. Sigler and the store and postoffice, under the management of Mr. Sickles. On the hill above was the City residence. This constituted Antrim City. Now only the Sigler battery remains. Babylon is fallen.

* * *

But we revert to the memory of the South Arm expedition. The scribe remembers reaching the Arm at a point a mile above the head, and entering a small log store upon the shore. A motley assortment of merchandise occupied the store room, and in charge was a character who afterward figured in the early history of Charlevoix. A tall, gaunt, cold-featured man, gruff and repellant, stiff and unbending by nature, and suffer by reason of his tight skin collar and generous cod-fashioned neckerchief — William Laister; an Englishman by birth, a pessimist and a recluse; a man who loved nothing of human form, and hated—even himself. A mysterious, impenetrable state, with few bad habits and no good ones.

The scribe went but not in Charlevoix the spring of 1869, and the same year William Laister moved his business to Charlevoix. Possessed of means, he built a store on Round on the present site of Green's dock. (The same building now occupied by Richards' saloon.) On Bridge street, where the Bank of Charlevoix now stands, was what he called his residence. Laister was a ship-carpenter, or, as he was pleased to call himself, a "marine architect," and during the season of 1870 he built the small schooner "Alice," the model of which resembled the make-up of her builder, and stood on as much "scranky." As a merchant, Laister was a sui generis. There probably never was his counterpart in that pursuit. He had but one mood—a mood that fluctuated between the maximum and the minimum of moroseness. In periods of comparative decency, he were exhibited by getting a few of us about him, decoying a bow of punch, and accompanying his unmusical voice with a still more unmusical fiddle.

* * *

Disbelief and dyspepsia were his chief characteristics. He believed in nothing, and yet nothing. His creed said that "it took a man all his life to get the foolish notions out of his head that his mother put in." Solitude was his society, and selfishness the warp and woof of his being. Crusty and discourteous, yet he was a "store-keeper." Major Green relates how he once went with a pan to Laister's store for ten pounds of flour. "Why in hell don't you buy a barrel?" was the greeting of the merchant to the customer. If he had a virtue it was his invariable refusal to sell whiskey as a beverage. The bottle must be accompanied by a doctor's order, or contain a quantity of camphor-gum. But the shrewdness of Gus Munson, of Eveline, was too much for him; although it was said that Uncle Philo Beers was at the bottom of the scheme. Gus put a handful of rock-candy in the bottle, and rubbed the nose with the odiferous drug. Laister smelled of the bottle and filled it, and Gus had a good time. But as long as Laister lived thereafter, he would not sell tins even the necessaries of life. The scribe was one who at times spoken, proved an unpolitable investment, and he was over-sensitive on that subject. Rev. Geo. W. Wood once asked him how the vessel was paying him. "None of your ——— business," was his reply; and the minister never interrupted Wm. Laister again.

* * *

Mr. Laister, when in his sociable mood, would spend his evenings visiting with Philo Beers, at the postoffice. Bridge street was then full of large stumps, and Laister, in his night trips to and fro, would stumble over them. Swearing would not remove these obstacles in his pathway; and so he adopted a plan that gave him protection from further disaster. He hewed the north and south sides of the stumps and painted them white. The following spring Major Green was elected pathmaster, and the stumps were removed, much to the satisfaction of the old man. On one occasion the old merchant painted a list of articles of merchandise upon a board, as a sign. One of the articles enumerated was "rad." The first letter of the word did not suit his taste. "That's a 'tell of a h'ell!" exclaimed the disgusted artist.

* * *

He possessed a sub-lessee, and occasionally made trips along the shore. On a certain trip to Northport he had a woman as a passenger. The weather became rough, and the lady became frightened. In reply to her frantic questionings he answered: "Talk to God, madam; talk to God!"

* * *

In the early days of barber agitation, Laister scoffed at every project looking toward that much-desired improvement. He predicted that not a person in Charlevoix would live long enough to see over six feet of water into Round Lake. When plans were being perfected for the protection of the channel, Laister advocated the building of cribs five feet wide. He had no faith in the future, either in this life or the next.

* * *

One winter day in 1872, William Laister became weary of this world, sick of life, and, locking all his doors, and standing before a mirror, placed a big navy revolver to his head and blew out his brains. The scribe was one of the first to see him, with his head under the stove, the chair between his legs, and the pistol by his side. He died as he had lived, alone and unhappy. Yet his neighbors gave him a Christian burial, and the first grave dug in the Charlevoix cemetery received the mortal remains of William Laister. His estate, which included property in Chicago, was administered by Major Green, and amounted to $25,000, all of which he willed to a friend in Chicago, named Peacock.

* * *

Petoskey Democrat: We have reliable information to the effect that the G. R. & I. R. R. is surveying a branch line from Macedonia down the valley of the Bear river to East Jordan. It is also proposed to extend the line from East Jordan to Ironton. We are uninformed as to whether the line will strike the main line again at Clarion by the way of Boyne City, or whether it will go down from Ironton to Charlevoix.

Congressional.

In the Senate, on the 20th, the debate on the Idaho contested election case was closed and the vote taken on the question of the minority resolutions in favor of the Republican contestee, Mr. Dubois. The vote was then taken on the majority resolutions affirming the right of Mr. Dubois to retain his seat, and it was decided in the affirmative—yeas, 34, nays 17. The pure food bill was then taken up, but after a few minutes' talk it was laid aside for the consideration of the District of Columbia appropriation bill, also the Bill allowing railroad companies to form special rates to commercial travelers. Mr. Gallinger's amendment to the anti-option bill was a strong discussion in the Senate on the question of the constitutionality of the measure, which finally was decided in the affirmative. In speaking of the bill, referred to the action of the minority members (Senator Vallee) as an obstructive rail road affair, which the Senate was forced called to order by Mr. Hoar, of Massachusetts. The bill will come up on the calendar for further consideration.

Charged with Murder.

DR. HENRY MARTYN SCHUYLER, son of the old and beloved ex-pastor of the Congregational church, Chicago, is charged with the murder of his mother-in-law, Mrs. F. H. Dunton, says a Chicago dispatch. It is alleged that the crime was committed at the Dunton home, 22 Adams street, on the morning of Saturday, Feb. 21. Dr. Schuyler was quickly taken into custody. Mrs. Dunton, age 70, was found at her residence, 22 Adams street, with her throat cut. The wound was from a razor, which was found in the hand of the murdered woman. The alleged motive for the crime was a quarrel between the mother-in-law and her daughter, Mrs. Schuyler, who was confined to his bed. The news of his arrest was not made public until the following afternoon, when captain of the detectives and friends went before Judge Scales, of the County Court, and Dr. Herman Schuyler, a brother, represented that the accused was insane. They asked that he be taken from the custody of the police and placed in the Detention Hospital. By order of the Court, the request was granted. The brother is at the hospital guarded in a crazy mass.

Twenty Thousand Gone.

Wednesday night the national bank at Coldwater, Mich., was robbed. The safe was blown open and another in cash taken, also a private deposit of $40,000. Burglars had a blasting powder bottle. Ten thousand dollars reward is offered for the capture of the robbers. The job was the boldest and most complete piece of work of the kind ever perpetrated in Western Michigan, and was undoubtedly the work of experts. They blew open every safeand vault in the bank and all, and took every bit of cash, including bills, silver, and gunnies they could find. The robbery has cause a great sensation here, and the bank is looked upon by hundreds of men in the morning. The vaults and safes were completely wrecked, and there is no clew to the robbers.

THE late Mrs. William P. Wisnach, of Philadelphia, bequeathed from $1,000 to $2,000 to every known charitable institution in that city; her art collection, worth $1,000,000, goes to the city of Philadelphia. Her whole estate was worth $5,000,000.

ALL efforts to form a lumber trust have failed, and it is quite likely the mills will run as heretofore cut the low logs. At a meeting of lumbermen recently held in Williamsport, Pa., fifty-nine individuals and firms, controlling two-thirds of the entire output of hemlock, agreed to advance the schedule all around, but before the meeting closed a further fight caused the association to fall through.

MRS. C. K. AYERS, one of the most highly connected families in Indianapolis night shot her husband in the lungs. Mrs. Ayers begins suit for divorce against her husband, some months ago, and, pending the suit, obtained an injunction preventing the husband from visiting their home. The Supreme Court has decided the murder, questioning his home to remove a part of his personal effects, when Mrs. Ayers met him on the door-step and before he could prevent her he pulled a six-shooter revolver and fired five shots into his breast. His wife was at once locked up, but refuses to make any statement.

THE Federal Grand Jury, at Boston, has indicted all of the officers and directors of the Cattle Feeding and Distilling Company, better known as the Whisky Trust, for violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, and United States District Attorney Hornblower acquiries are serving the warrants for the arrest of the indicted men. WESTERN.

THE Western Farm Mortgage Trust Company, of Denver, Colorado, has filed in the United States Circuit Court a petition in bankruptcy. The liabilities are $2,500,000, of which it is alleged two-fifths is paid for the stock of the company, and the surrender of an equal amount of the bonds, taken from unsuspecting people by the company, Lawrence, Kansas, and the sale of the company assets to pay $2,962,072.26.

THE Indiana State women's prison and reform school for girls, near Indianapolis, burned Tuesday morning. Nothing was entirely destroyed. The loss will be considerable, estimated at $5,000. Thompson, Mary Stevens, and Lizzie Kinsley, the girls who escaped, are not having formed a conspiracy to fire themselves in this way, if possible, by creating a stampede. The details was carefully worked out over the city.

AFTER serving twenty years of a life sentence for murder, Ephraim Ferguson, Mary John Maher may now be released, it is alleged, he had taken his life in the crime of murdering his young wife, for which he was convicted.

REPRESENTATIVE HAWKINS, who represents the Coal Creek region in the Legislature, has just returned to Chattanooga from the mining districts. He says he saw at least 500 men, many of whom are armed. He says one can walk for any time at Virgin and four stray cheers and volleys being fired. The miners say that if one of their number is killed by the soldiers they will rally several hundred strong and disembowel all the soldiers and convicts. Mr. Hawkins says the situation is deplorable, and he does not believe that there will be any peace until a compromise of some sort is made.

WASHINGTON.

THE illness of Congressman Springer is regarded as serious.

THE McKinley act was declared constitutional and Speaker Reed's rulings upheld by the United States Supreme Court. The court split on the tariff opinion, which was rendered by Justice Harlan. The cases on which the decisions were based were those of Marshall Field of Chicago, and of New York merchants, who protested against the payment of duties on certain woolen goods and other importations on the ground that the McKinley bill was not a legal and constitutional enactment by reason of the omission from the enrolled bill of the tariff reduction clause, agreed to in conference and contained in the bill when it passed both houses. The court also holds that the omission was a mere clerical error and that the bill was constitutional. It was also contended that the reciprocity section was unconstitutional because it delegated legislative powers to the President. Chief Justice Fuller and Justice Lamar dissented from the opinion of the court. The Supreme court also decided that the contest between Senator Chandler of New Hampshire, and Governor Tilton of the same state, should be dismissed, the Senate having adjourned before the case could be argued. Senator Chandler's term of office expires March 3, and the case was dismissed because it was deemed a waste of time to hear the case at this late date.

CROSSED THE RIVER TOGETHER

Death of Two Estimable Old Ladies Last Friday Night.

Last Friday night, or in the early hours of the morning, Mrs. Catherine Kanagy, died at her residence in this village, of grippe, aggravated by asthma. Mrs. Kanagy was born in York, Pa, and was 72 years of age. Besides her venerable husband, Rev. J. J. Kanagy, she leaves eight children—William and Alice Kanagy of this place, Dr. L. M. Kanagy, of Atwood; D. A., and A. L., of Chicago; Geo. D. and Isaiah J., of Joliet, Ill., and Mrs. A. W. Johnson, of Elburn, Ill., the loyal devotion of whom to their aged parents, has been a subject of comment among all who have known this large and interesting family—a continued tribute of affection to a loving wife and mother. Her death rounded out a long life of christian devotion. Her funeral was held from the family residence Tuesday afternoon, Rev. Mr. Macpherson officiating. The funeral was largely attended.

Mrs. Caroline Preston died suddenly at the home of her daughter, Mrs. S. M. See, on Friday night. She had been suffering from neuralgia in her side but seemed to be improving, until, at nine o'clock that evening, she suddenly became worse, and soon died. Mrs. Preston was 84 years of age. She leaves three children besides Mrs. See—Cordelia and Edward of this place, and Mrs. Alonzo Tisdale of Vittoria, Ont. Mrs. Preston was a widow, her husband having been drowned between here and Beaver Island many years ago. She was a sister of Orson Campbell. Her funeral occurred Sunday. Mrs. Preston was a kindly and worthy old lady, respected by all who knew her. She lost two sons in the late war, in recognition of which, Baxter Post, G. A. R., attended the funeral in a body, also a delegation of the W. R. C. She was a member of the M. E. church, and the brief sermon of Rev. Mr. Barnes was touching and appropriate.

As to Your Clothing

There is a new Clothing Store in town, and I am glad of it. I am aware that a good many were dissatisfied, thinking I had it all my own way, and was overcharging for my goods. I have always tried to please my customers, and to do so I have been adding to my stock until I have the largest stock of Clothing and Furnishing Goods that I have ever had in my store. All I ask is for you to give me a show, and don't forget to look over my stock before buying, and if I don't give you prices and goods to down the world, I won't expect your trade.

—We are gratified in being able to announce that Dr. L. M. Kanagy, of Atwood, has decided to remove here for the practice of his profession, and to this end has leased the "Sherwood house" for a residence, and an office in the Green block.

—There seems to be but one opinion among Republicans, regarding the next nominee for County Clerk and that is that Dr. Kerns should succeed himself. He has attended strictly to the duties of the office, and discharged them with ability. He deserves re-election, and will get it.

—At the council meeting Friday evening, Trustees Hampton and See were appointed a committee to investigate the question of an artesian well for water supply. The bonds for saloons were fixed at $4,000; druggists, $2,000; treasurer, $500; clerk, $500; street commissioner, $500; marshall, $3,000; constable, $100.

—The Northern Michigan Seed Co., have a new advertisement in this issue. The company have established supply depots at East Jordan, Elk north, Atwood, Torch Lake, Elk Rapids and Williamsburg, where a supply of seeds and agricultural implements will be kept. Mr. Quincy Thacker, the outside manager, proposes to push the business through out the entire region.

—On Saturday, S. M. See, through the Moore & Nettleton agency, sold his residence, on the corner of Bridge and Antrim streets, to Sims Baker, who takes possession June 1st. Mr. See's health is such that a change is deemed necessary, and he will, as soon as able, go to Oregon, possibly to remain—a determination that will cause much sincere regret in Charlevoix, where Mr. See has so long been a respected and useful citizen.

—Joe SENTINEL has never been given to making up tickets, or advising its party in the matter of selecting candidates, but it ventures a word on its own responsibility regarding a worthy and deserving citizen, a man who has never been and is not now an office-seeker; a resident of Eveline, a township that has never had an elective county office—Robert A. Miller, of Ironton. A level-headed, capable, honest man, a pioneer of the county, and known throughout its limits as an irreproachable citizen. The next Republican county convention will do a worthy act if it nominates Mr. Miller for sheriff. There is not a better Republican alive than he, and no man in the county would discharge the duties of that office with greater fidelity or ability.

—Sunday evening last, at the M. E. church, was the occasion of a very largely attended union meeting in the interest of local temperance matters. The principal address of the evening was by Rev. G. S. Barnes on the question: "Shall we license saloons in Charlevoix this year?" Hon. Messrs. Macpherson, Haynes and Kanagy spoke briefly and forcibly. The substance of the arguments were that public sentiment should be brought to bear upon the council against the issuing of any licenses, and pastor Barnes fortified his arguments with a reading of the law giving village councils the right to suppress saloons by refusing to grant licenses. We have always lacked faith in the efficacy of the ordinary temperance lecture and temperance meeting, and that pastor Haynes shares this lack of faith is evidenced by his words: "Let us shut up and do something!" Talk is cheap, and temperance people should remember that the restrictive provisions of the present law are within their power to enforce; that if enforced the chief evils which are made the subjects of these periodical agitations can be abated. We are told that a committee of the ladies, God bless them, are to wait upon the council Friday evening and protest against the granting of licenses. We have nothing to say concerning the wisdom of this move. Even among those who have the subject most deeply at heart, opinions differ. But should the petition of the ladies be denied there is a field for work for the men, where deeds are more effective than words. In short, there should be less chin-music and more wood sawed. We believe that a rigid enforcement of existing laws would reduce the evils of intemperance to a minimum, and we believe they should be enforced. Let the council make up the issue of the bond.

Railroad Notes.

The laying of steel begins again this week, north of Central Lake, and will be pushed rapidly forward. Mr. Fox, the contractor's manager here, says thirty days will cover the distance to Charlevoix.

The steel gang will be followed closely by the ballasters. Six locomotives, two of very heavy pattern leased from another road, will be placed between Traverse City and here in hauling gravel, and an army of men will cover the grade. There is very little doubt that July 1st will see regular train service here.

"No. 105" will soon be at work on the north end, and have that section completed by the time the bridge is ready to swing.

Burns & Cameron have the work on the Charlevoix freight house well under way.

The Union Caucus.

As we understand it, the Monday night caucus was called by the joint township committees. F. J. Meech called the caucus to order and was elected its chairman. Now, in view of the fact that a number of those who actively participated in the union caucus held a second caucus at Mr. Kane's office last evening, we desire to be enlightened on a few points.

Were not both parties largely represented at the union caucus?

Was not the caucus harmonious?

Is there any question raised as to the legality or regularity of the votes cast?

Was not the vote for Cooper—98 out of 135—sufficiently large?

What was the matter with the union caucus?

We are not discussing candidates, but want to know what use there is for union caucuses?

We have an idea that we have seen the last of them.

The East Jordan Explosion.

The funeral of six of the East Jordan boiler explosion were held Wednesday, that of Amos Christy taking place on Friday. Business was presumptatily suspended, and the town was dressed with emblems of mourning.

The inquest began its labor Tuesday, and continued until Friday evening, when it was adjourned to today. The evidence is all in and the adjournment was taken to deliberate. The weight of evidence favors the theory of low water and high steam, and the mill owners will undoubtedly be cleared from blame, so far as the theory of weak boilers is concerned.

The report that Ringold's eyes were blown out, is incorrect, although permanently injured, his eyesight will be saved. The recovery of Sandy Reinhart is yet considered doubtful.

It Is the Grand Rapids Herald, Tip, That Called You a Liar.

PAYSONT, ILLS., March 29, 1892.

To the Editor:

I notice in your paper of the 16th that the Herald man calls me a liar, although I had given him a true account of my catching the fish, and had also given him the best of reference as to my veracity. Had he inserted the reference I gave him the readers of his paper could not have doubted my veracity, especially of his own political affiliation, for some men take his paper as I take the bible, as the rule and guide of my faith. I don't think any of my old friends will believe the Herald's assertion, for they know I would not lie when the truth would answer.

Truly yours,

—A dispatch published in the city states that Geo. E. Hardeen, president of the Bardeer, Tappe Co., is offering fifty cents each to all the ladies of Otsego who give him a kiss, the funds going to the library association. At last reports the funds were rolling in rapidly, and the only thing that saves the company from bankruptcy is the provision that Mr. Bardeen shrewdly made that each lady should only have one kiss, or at least should only be paid for the first.

A Pair of Jacks.

By Lulu Jansen.

CHAPTER I.

"We'll, leave I say," exclaimed Jack Beverly as he stood on the platform of a suburban commuting train, "I suppose that in the village through the trees yonder I wonder what sort of hotel I'll find there. First rate, Frank says. But I know just how far his judgment goes. However, the scenery is promising, and I dare say I can stand a few weeks of this. So far so good. Now to some about my trunk and thermos."

"Hello! whose is my trunk?"

This the question as his line the speaker moved down the narrow platform without considering the hastier object he sought.

A dozen heads of black leather, bearing the initials but no further remembrance to his prepossessing, was the object of his quest.

"Hello! whose is my trunk?"

Again the question, but this time he threw some light on the subject.

"Your trunk, sir," repeated the newcomer, smiling in the pleasant way he claimed, "don't that it, sir?"

"That thing?" Jack pointed under an ungainly object grinning toward the small corner of the platform. "Well, I guess it resemble that in the least. They have failed to put in off everything and made it into a grossly inconvenienced."

"I am very sorry, sir, I mistake in checking it, I suppose."

"Mistake, nothing. I bought my ticket for Weston, and I mean to."

"Ah, Weston! Why, you said, with a smile of intelligence, "this is south Weston. Weston is north Weston."

Jack looked slightly bewildered.

"South Weston! Why, I mean, I prefered tower, I don't understand."

"No, sir, you made a mistake. Two names much alike. Very common. Happens to me. What name, sir?"

"Name! the my name—Beverly, but what a question. There's no necessity send for the thing. I'll take the next train for Weston."

"If you are Mr. Beverly, sir, you don't need to do a thing."

Jack turned with a decided start to see the elegant master scolding handsel's by a school stock man who had evidently mistaken his name.

"The story I'm tale, sir, is that your trunk is sent to Weston in one of the two wagons. The carriage is right letter. If you'll follow me."

An exclamation of surprise passed over the man a somewhat shrill tone.

"Mr. Millard's, sir," he answered. "your trunk is sent to Mr. Millard's. I'm if I could this morning. The old gentleman and Miss Mary Millard expected you."

"The deuce they do," muttered Jack under his breath. "Millard! Millard! Ah, the name of Frank's chaperon. Ridiculous and my luxury to Frank's dare say. Peculiar, though. I declare, I wonder if this fellow is playing game.

"Look here," he added aloud, "arrangements are not to my liking. I'm not expecting to be—"

CHARLEVOIX, MAR. 30, 1892.

Eleventh Hist. Republican Convention.

A convention of the Republicans of the Eleventh Congressional District of Michigan, will be held at Bend City in said district, on Tuesday, April 19th, A. D. 1892, at one o'clock, p. m., for the purpose of nominating two delegates and two alternates to the Republican National Convention to be held at Minneapolis, June 7th, 1892, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before it. The several counties will be entitled to the following number of delegates:

Charlevoix	4	Otsego	5
Antrim	5	Clare	7
Grand Traverse	7	Mecosta	7
Kalkaska	2	Isabella	7
Missaukee	2	Mecosta	12
Roscommon	2	Gratiot	11

By authority of Rep. State Central Com.

DAN'L P. GRIGGS,
Chairman.

Grover is quietly permitting the nomination for the solemn office of president to seek him. The procession is not headed by a hearse, but it will be in November.

A recent interview reports ex-Gov. Hill as saying: "I do not think that I like being a Senator. I do not find my time well filled in." Well, his predecessor, Senator Evarts, managed to keep himself employed.

When the state fish commissioners have completed the present task of delivering fish to the different parts of the state, Michigan waters will contain 24,000,000 more young brook trout and 280,000 more German trout than heretofore.

The Supreme Court has handed down a decision sustaining the Mortgage Tax Law of 1890. The opinion was written by Justice Montgomery, Justice Morse and McGrath, concurring, and Justice Long and Justice Grant dissenting.

Money is the life-blood of commerce. Free trade would deplete and weaken the commercial body politic as bleeding depletes the body physical. Protection keeps our money at home, and so nourishes and strengthens our material health and prosperity.

Free wool and its concomitants may cheapen the imported fabrics of the rich man's garments a little, but it will not benefit the masses of our people in the least, while it will destroy our wool industries, rob our labor of employment, and take millions of money out of our country.

President Harrison is still engaged in a diplomatic controversy with the British government over Canadian encroachments on American sealing grounds, and his last note to Lord Salisbury, plainly states that American interests in Behring sea will be protected at all hazards. Of course there will be no war, but the dispute is warm, and there is a great deal of war talk. Mr. Harrison again demonstrates the fact that he has backbone.

Suppose, for the sake of argument, that "the tariff is a tax." What does it amount to in the economies of the laborer in comparison with the reduction by free trade of his wages to the foreign standard, or the loss of his employment and wages by filling our markets with alleged "cheap" foreign manufactures? He would surely be immensely the loser. But all experience shows that the tariff for protection is not a tax in the long run. It is the tariff revenue that is a tax.

The Republican editors of this state, if the caucus is correct, incline more strongly to Harrison than to Gen. Alger. This is a rather singular state of affairs. Four years ago they were with one close as the Michigan candidate. Has the general really lost his grip in Michigan or are the people weary of hero worship? We see in this very portentous expression of sentiment the tendency to throw aside the spaid of wealthy men who have dominated Republicanism in Michigan for more than a decade and, incidentally, have wrecked the party.

In conversation with a Michigan man, Mr. E. B. Sayles, he said to me that few persons were aware that three years before General Phil Sheridan's death he was persuaded by Gen. R. A. Alger to be examined for $50,000 life insurance policy. "Sheridan had been married," said he, "and had a child, and declared he could not pay the premiums. General Alger said he could arrange the first three years with the company, as they liked to use the names of prominent persons to advertise their benefits. Then he quietly went around to the Company's office and paid the premiums for those years himself. That made the policy good for $50,000 for that period, and good for something, on the basis of the three year's premiums, even if Sheridan never paid any more. Sheridan died before the three years were up and his widow got the money.—Sun. Jhon in the New York Press.

Northern Michigan News.

Benzonia College had a narrow escape from fire last week.

Cheboygan mills will turn out 600,000 shingles per day this summer.

The East Jordan Episcopal church has a new bell, weighing 640 pounds.

The Elk Rapids iron furnace is utilizing twelve car-loads of ore per day.

Traverse City has had a mass meeting to aid the Russian famine relief fund.

Boise & Carmichael, of Bay Springs, expect to start their new mill the first week in April.

The Ellsworth sink-hole engulfed several cows and horses. They were rescued with difficulty.

Benzonia college announcement naively says: "No saloon within nine miles, but there are good moral surroundings."

Brown, the alleged slayer of E. H. Husted, of Petoskey, in jail at Harbor Springs, has become insane, and one night last week attempted to kill himself.

The Republicans of Elk Rapids have nominated a straight-out Republican ticket, with Archie Dougherty for supervisor. The Democrats have nominated Representative Landon.

The directors of the Northern Michigan Fair Ground Association, of Petoskey, have decided to hold the third annual fair of the association Sept. 13, 14, 15 and 16. There will probably be racing July 4th.

Frank C. Ives, who formerly was a member of the Petoskey base ball club, beat Jacob Shaefer, the "wizard" of billiards, in a contest for the championship, at Chicago lately, and now he is going to play Slosson, the other big ball puncher.

Two car-loads of laborers arrived in Grand Rapids one day last week, en route for the C. & W. M. northern extension. They were nearly starved and scantily clothed. Charitably inclined people aided them, and they left for their destination.

Capt. Neil Gallagher fear that the LaBlanc brothers, the Beaver Island land carriers, whose perils on the fields are familiar to our readers, have finally lost their lives. They came over with him two weeks ago and returned with the mail, promising to come back with him immediately. As they have not been heard from it is more than probable that they have perished on the lake.

At the recent Traverse City business men's banquet, Judge Hamadell gave an argument that salt extra under Traverse City, and at the close of his speech great enthusiasm was manifested. A large amount in subscriptions, ranging from $100 to $1,000, was raised, and Judge Hamadell was appointed chairman of a committee to push the work of prospecting. Traverse City men are wide awake, and furnish an example for some of the other towns in Northern Michigan to follow.

Wednesday morning, Mrs. Tobias Illingsen, of Petoskey, was attacked while alone in the house by a man who entered and seized her by the shoulders. She broke away from him and attacked him with the poker, but he overpowered her and bound her hands together with a handkerchief. At the most critical moment the family got overturned a crock in the kitchen. At this the rascal became frightened and fled through the front door, and a moment later Mr. Illingsen entered and found his wife bound and in a fainting condition. There is no clue to the perpetrator of the outrage.

One of the worst sink-holes ever encountered by railroad builders in Michigan is the famous Ellsworth affair. It has proved a puzzler for the builders. As a customary when soft spots are encountered, an attempt was made to fill the hole up, and a large amount of earth and filling was dumped into it. At night the ground would apparently be sound and level, but on each succeeding morning the filling had sunk down and the hole appeared to be as large as ever. Soundings in the lake is that vicinity show no decrease in its depth, and where all the filling goes to is proving a source of much speculation. Over 2,000 yards of filling have been loaded into the place and still the work goes on. One day last week the ground suddenly sank again, and carried with it a mile track with four or five flat cars and two of the laborers who were unloading them. The lake water rushed in and made a miniature lake of the spot from which the men were with difficulty rescued. It has been a bonanza for Ellsworth, which has profited greatly by the large amount of work done there. But the contractors say it will be all right when the construction train gets there.

SUCCESS,

Separate from the many holding great possessions, those who by inheritance or alliance have had possessions thrust upon them and having done this, it will most likely be found that those remaining will impress you with the fact that the winning qualities of the successful are about the same in all. These latter are the thinkers—the workers, the leaders; and it is safe to say that they are worth to the rest of us, more than is indicated by the accumulations which represent the pecuniary reward of their services. They have anticipated the conditions of the to-come, and put some in shape—with the result that they are the winners. Illustrations? Why, they are all around us. In every reputable business concern there certainly is something of this character, or it would be sans reputation. Now for instance, the D., L. & N. Railroad; yes, and the West Michigan;—something distinctive about them, hard to say just what, but the proof of their passenger perfection is in their patronage. Of course in all communities there are those who once attracted toward a certain thing and then properly treated become adherents, and perhaps prejudiced in favor of this or that party, but they are not of sufficient numbers for a railroad to depend on. Besides, the railroad lives on forever. They die in time, and it is a physical impossibility to enforce upon their heirs, their prejudices, with other savings. No; there's only one course toward the end desired, and that is to keep up with the procession; find out what the people want, and give it to them, and where they lag in coming forward to get it, go and meet them. That's our theory and we don't mind confiding it to you. If you think it a proper notion on our part, kindly encourage us. It is your benefit so to do. You can do so by using our lines when you go to Chicago, Detroit or Traverse City or Saginaw.

As is usually the case in most everything else, England has to do the press of that country has made a great bluster about the Behring Sea question. Now and then one may be found who fears a war with Great Britain, but war or no war, Uncle Sam is going to continue the business of protecting his interest at the old stand will John Bull can please himself as to the outcome.

MEMORIES.

The Series Revives Recollections of the Past—Persons and Events.

In jutting down these reminiscences of persons and events, the scribe's memory is sharpened by what it feels upon, and as he passes along, either figures rise before him, as if in silent protest against his too rapid passage. Again the scribe goes back in memory to his younger days, when a journeyman printer in the office of the Herald, in Traverse City, the fall and winter of 1868.

* * *

The project of starting a paper at Charlevoix had been perfected, and the scribe was waiting for the rigors of winter to pass before starting out on his northern journey. One day an old man entered the office and introduced himself as Wm. Slauson, county surveyor of Grand Traverse county. A little, dried up old man, fully seventy years old, with a voice about like Tim Sullivan's, and possessing about the same celerity of motion; quite ordinarily clad, and decripit of gait. He had learned of the scribe's intention to civilize the more northern portion of the Grand Traverse region, and revealed to him the fact that he had but recently platted the new village of Charlevoix, and would, if furnished with table-rooms, make for him a plat of the same. His kind offer was accepted, and after several days labor he presented the scribe with the first plat of this village ever made, except, perhaps, the one furnished the proprietor, Hon. John S. Dixon, at the time the work was done.

That early February journey north, in 1869, in the Traverse City stage, of which Nelson Ainslie was proprietor and pusher, was uneventful, but still fresh in memory. A tarry at Antrim and the "state road;"—here again memory is quickened, and we see Richard Knight's big house, and across the road the little blacksmith shop, where oxen were shod and sleighs ironed by the sinewy right Englishman who since has represented his district in the Legislature, and yet lives, an honored citizen. The Banks farmers of to-day were then "homesteaders," or squatters on railroad land. "Old Sol. Pearl" dispensed justice, joined in wedlock, and on one occasion, granted a divorce, on the principle that "the power that made could unmake."

* * *

All along that portion of Banks, where now the broad acres of fields speak eloquently of prosperity and happiness, then dwelt the hunter, steader, enduring privations, wielding the axe more than guiding the plow; burning the fallow more than tilling the field. Where three churches now stand, then stood the maple and the elm—the minarets of nature, from whose lofty tops the birds called to worship. What a transformation! Brawn and muscle, intelligence and energy are the elements that have wrought it. The Antrim dock was their depot and entrepot, and "Antrim City" was their metropolis. The scribe knows something of the hardships endured, but he also remembers the brighter side of life among these pioneers; their kind words and hospitable heartheme; are treasured as precious memories. The "old Indian orchard" upon the hill-top; the bachelor home of county surveyor Cephas Smith, past whose door the scribe has seen the lynx leap; the old log school house, down the Antrim road, where the scribe attended divine service, perhaps not in such devotional spirit as the occasion demanded. These memories linger with undiminished distinctness as the quarter of a century is rounding up.

A side-glance eastward, although a digression, must be had at this place. Our memory again recalls that journey to South Arm. That territory was then a part of Antrim county. On the west side of the lake, Isaman kept a store, and Sol. had full sway. The little settlement about the head embraced D. C. Nettleton, Mike Murphy, D. Hogan, "old man Rogers," Jake Keller, Chris Mayhew, and, a little further up on the west side, D. J. Parish. Up to 1869 there was no postoffice, and the colony took "turn about" in setting their mail from Charlevoix. The postoffice—Orchonville,"—was established in 1869, with David C. Nettleton as postmaster.

Where the East Jordan Lumber Co's mill now stands one party camped and roasted potatoes and partridges. Not even a shanty occupied the site where Mr. Loraine's town now flourishes. The hillside was covered with a forest, and a small opening, sparcely covered with second growth, reached back a short distance from the shore. Resorters did not then whip the Jordan for trout, and that beautiful stream flowed unvexed by saw-logs from its fountain head to the placid waters of the Arm. The scribe remembers seeing for the first time the little tug Cino. Nutt steaming up the Arm from Charlevoix, being then the only steam craft on those waters. But we were yet to see Charlevoix.

Still fresh in the memory of the scribe is that wet February morning when he walked from Antrim to his future home in Charlevoix. Vividly he remembers his first meal here, eaten in the little cottage of Major Green, when his hunger was appeased by a feast, of which crisp fried pork was a part. Pork was staple food here then—beef was a luxury rarely enjoyed, unless you could bribe a steamboat steward. Well the scribe remembers the reluctance with which he yielded to the importunities of Major Green to remove to rubbish the town projected through the rent shoes.

The tariff debates in the House and a large amount of business up in adjustment the 17th. The debate thrashed over and over and was on the whole unusually dull. Pages of New York, Sergeant of Maryland, and Ellis of Kentucky, were the orators for the Democrats. Tay, representing Ohio, and Bayne of Pennsylvania, Raeh Iowa, a part of Indiana, and Ohio passed Mr. Hatch operated a bill to be forced the pleurisy. Its provisions are of until to inflicted sons of the army and representatives. Bill to change the time of appointment of land officers. Bill to amend the act of March 3, 1887, relative to the establishment of an electric experiment station for the Division of Investigation and experiment whether electricity can be profitably used for the production of light and power for public or private purposes. Bill to amend Committee on Agriculture. The Senate then proceeded to the consideration of executive business, and was adjourned.

Anti-Prohibition Mutiny in Maine.

THERE is a growing sentiment in favor of the formation of sections all over the State of Maine desiring to agitate for a resubmission of the prohibitory law to the voters for resubmission. A dissatisfaction with prohibition stands that the prohibitory law is detrimental to the business, social and moral interests of the State, and calls for the repeal, and expressing a strong interest for the cause of temperance and hoping that it may be helped, by the operations of the present system.

Denied by Cleveland.

EX-PRESIDENT CLEVELAND was seen at his home at Lakewood, N. J., Sunday afternoon. If there was any truth in the story published in New York that he had written a letter declining to be renominated for the Presidency, which he was about to make public, when friends, whom Mrs. Cleveland had called to her husband's bedside, dissuaded him from doing so, he did not, and said it was made out of the whole.

Winter Wheat in Kansas.

THE General Freight Department of the Union Pacific Railway has compiled a statement of the acreage and condition of winter wheat in the counties in Kansas through which the road runs. The statement shows that the acreage in the thirty-three counties in which the road is located, is 1,000,000 acres, or 100,000 over last year's acreage, and constitutes the largest acreage ever sown, very good in three, fine in five, fair in five, and poor in two.

Cattle Dying in the Texas.

TALLAL, I. T., dispatch: A severe storm struck this section of the country a few days ago. The mercury has been and still is below freezing point with no signs of the storm abating. Hundreds of cattle are dying every morning. Embassies can scarcely be seen for miles at 1,000 during the last two days. Train loads of cattle are being shipped to the Texas Road from the South and many of them will die.

Battled with Lynchers.

THERE is an unconfirmed report at Springfield, Mo., that Sheriff Lynch is in search of the murderers of Deputy Sheriff Triplett who was killed by an organized horde of lynchers in the southern part of Taney county. The report states that over fifty shots were exchanged and several on each side were wounded. Owing to the lack of telegraphic communication the report cannot be verified.

FRANK AND LEWIS MOORE, of Crosby's Mill, Chester Co., Pa., died from poisoning. It is supposed that the kids ate some of the seed of some other boy that was dosed with arsenic. It is known that Frank and Lewis were both taken ill immediately after eating dinner at the mill. Suspicion points to a terrible method of discovering the guilty parties of the lunch baskets. This method, it is thought, was to dose a cake or a piece of pie with arsenic. An elder brother of the boys made no complaint of the fact that he was a confirmed thief. Thing among the spanking-room boys to hand small cakes to lunches. Reverend Benjamin Clark also said that numerous robberies had been made about this hospitable lunch, but that it was impossible to detect the guilty parties. Now in the spanking-room boys have been arrested in order to learn who is responsible for the deaths.

As to Your Clothing

There is a new Clothing Store in town, and I am glad of it. I am aware that a good many were dissatisfied, thinking I had it all my own way, and was overcharging for my goods. I have always tried to please my customers, and to do so I have been adding to my stock until I have the largest stock of Clothing and Furnishing Goods that I have ever had in my store. All I ask is for you to give me a show, and don't forget to look over my stock before buying, and if I don't give you prices and goods to down the world, I won't expect your trade.

—The services at the Congregational church next Sunday evening will be specially adapted to sailors and fishermen. All those whose lives are to be spent largely on the water for the next six or eight months, are heartily invited. Rev. W. H. Macpherson will sing an appropriate solo.

—The date of the entertainment to be given by the W. R. C. together with the program, will be announced next week. It will be an elaborate affair, and our citizens should testify their appreciation of the good work done by the ladies of the corps in the past, and give them a rousing house, that they may be able to continue their charitable work.

Railroad Notes

It is now stated by authority that regular trains will be running to Petoskey on the C. & W. M. early in June. The steel is now laid to the Ellsworth sink hole, which will probably be gone around temporarily, and laying will continue at the rate of a mile and a half per day. That will bring the steel here the present month. The ballasting gang are now at work with four engines, sixteen hours per day. With the two engines to be added, it is expected that surfacing will be completed in May, or early in June.

A switch is to be put in at Petoskey at once, making connections with the G. R. & I., and the material for the bridge brought in that way.

The old crew of "No. 105" is in charge of that engine, and at work on the north end. Engineer O'Neill is to move from Muskegon to Petoskey, and it is understood that his engine will be kept here, either for local passenger service, or to do work in the Charlevoix yard and on the Ironton branch.

A. J. Hanna, who has the contract for putting in the stone openings at the two resorts and at J. C. Miller's, is at work with a force of ten men.

Summer excursions to "Charlevoix the beautiful," are already being advertised on the Grand Rapids theatre programs.

Hastings from Hayes.

Five hundred dollars Highway fund and five mills on the hundred for statute labor was voted; also five hundred dollars contingent fund.

E. H. Sly's new store building at Bayside was blown down last Saturday morning during the gale. It was a two story building and almost completed. Workmen are at work clearing away the debris and he will rebuild immediately.

E. H. Sly's team fell off the dock at Bayside Saturday, one horse was killed, the other escaped uninjured.

Hayes got along with the Kangaroo method of voting pretty well. Only 93 votes polled, one thrown out for being improperly stamped, Wm. Gray, on the Democratic ticket, polled 55 votes and A. W. Chew, on the Republican, 37 votes.

Hayes has fifty-four registered Indian voters and with the exception of three or four, they vote the Democratic ticket solid. About one-half of them voted on Monday.

CURRENT MARINE NOTES.

The tug Parks had her new wheel put on yesterday.

All ports along Grand Traverse Bay are now open.

Chas. Noyes will be engineer on the Gracie Barker.

Big fleet of vessels expected tomorrow or next day.

F. W. Crossart, of this place, goes as mate of the schooner Lottie Cooper, with Capt. Lorenz.

Capt. Fred Lorenz, last year of the schooner Florence M. Smith, will sail the Lottie Cooper this season.

The steamer Thomas Friant will arrive here on her first trip, on time, tomorrow morning. (Thursday).

Capt. Geo. Jepson will sail the steamer Crescent after Capt. Young leaves her to go in the new boat about May 15th.

John Anderson goes as first engineer of the barge Keystone, at Cleveland; and Leslie Giddings, as second. The latter left Friday.

The steamer Clara Belle was launched last week, but will be hauled out again, some difficulty having been discovered that renders it necessary.

Pine Lake is clear of ice and five vessels have been chartered from Chicago, Milwaukee and Sheboygan for lumber from Boyne City and Advance.

Capt. Grummond will fit the steamer Manistique out for wrecking purposes, and will station her at Cheboygan, Mich., in place of the burnt Leviathan.

The late southerly gale cleared the straits of ice down as far as McGulpin's point, on the Lake Michigan side and there is little doubt that the straits are now clear both sides.

The steamers Lawrence and Petoskey left Chicago Monday night for the north. They will be due here tonight or tomorrow morning, if the recent southwest gale has not driven them in somewhere.

The wrecking expedition which abandoned the M. C. Seve, ashore on Pilot Island, last December, on account of ice, snow, and heavy weather are now making preparations to go to her as soon as the ice breaks up in the door. The Seve lies in a bad condition, and the southwest gale which is now raging will no doubt carry her out into the lake with the ice. The Seve is loaded with lumber, and was caught out in the storm of Dec. 4 last, while on her way to Milwaukee from Pine Lake. She lies on a large rock which penetrates her bottom.

The conspiracy case against the president and secretary of the Seamen's Union was called in a Chicago court last week. E. O. Schubert, owner of the bark H. H. Badger, is the complainant. While the ship was in Mackinaw last summer Capt. Freer, who smuggled McGarigle to Canada, had trouble with a union sailor and discharged him. Another sailor left on that account, and Captain Freer refused to pay him his wages. The Seamen's Union then passed an order refusing to allow any union men to work for Freer until the sailor's wages were paid. Capt. Freer is the father-in-law of Mr. Schubert, both being well known here, the latter being a relative of the Dompelly's.

At a meeting of vessel owners and seamen, held in Milwaukee last week, an agreement was adopted by Milwaukee vessel owners fixing the wages of sailors for the coming season. It is provided that the minimum rate per day shall be $1.75. If freight rates improve, wages are to be increased. In September the minimum shall be $2 a day. A provision is also made for the appointment of a grievance committee to consist of five members from each side, which shall settle the difference between employers and employed. Milwaukee vessel owners will likely form an association now. It is believed that the scale will be adopted all over the lakes. A shipping office is to be opened in Chicago.

A Pair of Jacks.

By Lulu Jamison

CHAPTER V.

"I've found a New York paper at last, much to my surprise. I did not believe this place could boast the possession of one.

"But now that you know it can, your opinion of us is gallant, I dare say. We are slightly civilized, you see."

Jack made no comment upon Mary's decidedly sarcastic words, but throwing himself upon the grass beside her he began to unfold his paper. Presently changing his mind he refolded it and turning toward her said, somewhat irritably:

"Do you ever grow lonely here?

She looked at him with some surprise, and answered with unusual decisiveness:

"Never. It is just the life I have always grandma and the horses. It is even enough to satisfy Phillips, I think, though I would lose my mind. But of course I have my books and my horses and my dogs. You think, don't you, I'm a queer girl?

"I'm sorry I ever said anything about that," he answered, with a slight flush at the tactless question. "I only meant that I would be glad to do any personal service in my power, if I should happen to be here when you need such a service."

"Thanks," said Jack, gravely, rising to his feet; "then I have an unpleasant personal service to perform now. We don't treat you a little more kindly? Make an effort, as the boys say, to behave in the way you are not accustomed with Mrs. Chick."

"No, I think I should come nearer home if I do that," she laughed.

"Do you think—?" To my little pleasantry suggestion—"

"I dare say, some day in your future! Now that I know that it is upon you I believe that also is my friend. I have confidence in your judgment, and I believe Dickens is in my custody whatever on the subject."

"I hope sincerely that other friends for you will come in some way to help you. I do thoroughly hate him. He thinks me a boy, and treats me as such. I never so truly despised myself. But I must go now, and I shall not come back this afternoon, because I shall be busy with my lessons. I can't complain that you have made me neglect them, because I am a country girl and know nothing of any ways and manners. He said that, as I was ignorant of all good manners, I might be free for grumpiness. I made the pleasantry in return."

With this consolation she waited in the window, and, looking upon the long line of light from the factory oil lamps, were merely thinking to herself:

"Just as I thought. They are together. I wonder if grandma is asleep, and if I could get to bike him better than me. If I thought that, I would be well repaid for earned.

She compressed her lips tightly, and leaning the window, she pressed in the center of the pane with so set a vicious bite.

Then, growing suddenly determined, she turned her back full on it, a pity of well-nigh contempt, and, taking down a mahogany lamp shade, she began the room, where, by the light of the lamp, she was making preparations for bed.

"Mary, my child," cried the somewhat startled woman, as the flying figure burst rather precipitately into her room. "You're nearly frightened me with your air of, Miss Mary. Why ain't you asleep?"

"Because I'm too much awake. I want Jack," pleaded the girl, in a voice if you had to go to bed under protest. Grandma, Wan-ne-ta-ha, the opposite, I know I grow tired of talking to anyone," explained Mary, coaxing herself on the bed and laughing her fast from side to side. "But I should be cross down and leave a chat with you. Do you, my pet and sympathy?"

"Thought he one saying I was," was the answer, with the unmoved expression. "Mr. Beverly, repeated Jeannette, impatient at the unmoved face opposite. "A week, I tell you. No, more than a week. I'm tired of it."

"Yes dears, that all! It seems more than month. Don't you think it has considerable—amazing?"

"Amazing, Mary dear? I don't know what you mean. I'm sure I never met a pleasanter young man."

"Oh, indeed! I see how it is. He has gotten round you, too, Jeannette, my dear, innocent, unsuspecting grandma. I dare say you'd both go down on your knees and thank heaven for the privilege of wooing me, if I would only ask him. It is certainly strange how some people do anything, and everything, but what they are asked to do."

"Mary, I'm ashamed! Jeannette, as she gave Mary a disdainful glance, "I don't know what I should do if I should be thinking of such a thing."

"Oh, I know, I know! I'm growing tipsy. The fun I've made other girls to do so, I'm sure I deserve it."

"Of course he has. Didn't I make the fun of you? Didn't I make you promise to be good to him? Didn't I make you promise to be good to him? Didn't I make you promise to be good to him

Eleventh Dist. Republican Convention.

A convention of the Republicans of the Eleventh Congressional District of Michigan, will be held at Reed City on said district, on Tuesday, April 19th, A. D. 1892, at the hour of 10 o'clock a. m., for purpose of electing delegates and two alternates to the Republican National Convention, to be held at Minneapolis June 7th, 1892, and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before it. The several counties will be entitled to the following number of delegates:

Charlevoix	5	Oceola	5
Antrim	7	Clare	7
Grand Traverse	9	Mecosta	7
Kalkaska	3	Isabella	5
Manistee	7	Montcalm	11
Roscommon	3	Gladwin	4

By authority of Rep. State Central Com.

GEO. P. SNOW.

The silver question is an issue of the past, as far as the house of Representatives is concerned. Free coinage is dead.

That poor offspring of misfortune, the Bell Telephone company, has increased its capital from $15,000,000 to $17,000,000, and will divide a profit of $3,000,000 as an incidental matter.

Lord Salisbury has complied with the demands of President Harrison in the Behring sea matter, and there is no longer "blood on the moon." Again the British lion has felt the claws of the eagle.

The Coloma Boomer is not going to carry great responsibility in this big world of trials and tribulations. It says: "The Boomer has nothing to say about township election. It will not take a part or share in anything nor will have nothing to do concerning any property."

The ways and means committee of the Democratic house has decided to report a bill reducing the duty on tin plate from two and two-tenths cents to one-cent per pound, and to make tin plate free of duty after October 1, 1893. The Democratic party is determined to put a stop to the erection of tin plate mills in this country if possible!

Cleveland seems to be regaining strength while the Hill boom is shrinking. When an equilibrium is reached each of the aspirants will be strong enough to beat the other out of all chance of the nomination. Western Democrats with presidential lightning rods in the air may at least enjoy the pleasurable anticipation of a stroke of luck.

The action of the Wisconsin supreme court in declaring the legislative gerrymander of that state illegal and requiring a new apportionment, will sound the death-knell of the democratic party in the north if it is sustained. Without the gerrymander, and with an effective suffrage law in the south, the democratic party in this country would still be a hopeless minority.

President Harrison asks congress to appropriate $50,000 toward the expense of holding the Grand Army of the Republic encampment in Washington next September. It is proposed to make the event notable with a great gathering of veterans. The most soul-stirring occurrence will be the march of the survivors of the great armies down Pennsylvania avenue, as they passed at the close of the war. It is thought that congress will vote the sum requested.

In the theory of free trade the fundamental principle is that it is wisdom to buy in the cheapest and sell in the dearest market available. This is the doctrine of segregated selfishness, expressed in the saying "every one for himself and the devil take the hindmost." Protection takes a wider view of the subject, and insists that as the "laborer is worthy of his hire," and is a more valuable citizen when he receives his share, it is wise to "live and let live." This is the doctrine of aggregated helpfulness.

It is the motto of a great labor organization that "An injury to one is the cry cern of all." Free trade is come and expects no competition in our markets of the products of foreign cheaper labor with the products of our better paid home labor, on the plea that the foreign products are cheap than the home products. But it is just a plain case that home labor is deprived of compensation or employment, or both, to the extent of the use of these foreign products, or to the amount of the reduction of wages compelled by home competition with cheaper labor! The free trade argument thus becomes an "injury" to all home labor of giant proportions, dwarfing the promised benefits of cheapness into a trifle, with even that trifle uncertain and delusive.

Northern Michigan News.

St. Ignace has liabilities of over $50,000, exclusive of her school debt.

On the 25th, South Boardman, near Kalkaska, was almost entirely destroyed by fire.

An effort is being made to get the Petoskey Driving Park Association included in the West Michigan trotting circuit.

Boyne Citizen: Capt. Monroe has gang of men at work raising the pilot driver that was sunk off the Redpath dock here last fall.

Boyne City will have a new stock company for the manufacture of furniture, if the G. R. & I. R. R. is extended to that place.

The Boyne Falls house changed hands last week. Mr. Thompson going to Traverse City. Dan Judd going back into the hotel.

Mancelona's handle company is securing the right of way for its narrow gauge railroad, to be six miles in length and to penetrate a valuable tract of hardwood.

The Cameron Lumber Co., of Torch Lake, has been incorporated under State law, with a capital stock of $100,000. The East Jordan Lumber Co., has been incorporated under the laws of Illinois.

The Seymour Transportation Co's dock at Bay View is being repaired and lengthened. Two new cribs are to be added to it, making it 120 feet long. The work is being superintended by H. A. Hollins. The estimated cost of the improvements will be about $1,000.

Messrs. Salling, Hanson & Co., of Grayling Mich., have got out and banked about 1,000,000 feet of mostly Norway pine, between Cross Village and Big Stone Bay, which they will tow to St. Ignace and manufacture at their mills, they having bought out the Mackinaw Lumber Co's plant at that place.

East Jordan Enterprise: Work has commenced for rebuilding the wrecked Bed Mill. It will be repaired as soon as possible, and have the same capacity as before the explosion.——By reference to a notice elsewhere in this issue it will be seen that the firm of Heaton & Coulter has been succeeded by Coulter & Jamison.

All during the past winter the officials of Mackinac county have been unable to get their orders for salaries cashed, the county is so heavily in debt and so short of money. At the last term of the circuit court none of the jurors could be paid and they obliged to pay their own expenses out of their reserve fund and keep their orders.

A family named Page, at Hortons Bay, consisting of father, mother, two sons and a daughter, were badly poisoned one day last week by eating bread in which arsenic had been put instead of saleratus. The family had just moved to Hortons Bay from Elmira, and is the consequent confusion the package containing arsenic which had been used in treating a sick horse a short time previous. In making the breakfast biscuits Sunday morning, Mrs. Page took a teaspoonful of the arsenic in mistake for saleratus. All the family partook of the biscuits and all were very sick, but with the exception of Mr. Page, who is still very low are all in a fair way to recovery.

The East Jordan Explosion—Another Victim.

The coroners' jury in the East Jordan boiler explosion case, last week returned a verdict that the disaster occurred from low water, cause unknown. They exonerated the men and employes from blame. The limb of Sandy Reinhart, who was so painfully injured, was amputated by Drs. Bennett and Foster on Friday, and contrary to expectations the patient rallied from the effects of the operation, and gave his friends hopes of his recovery, but on Monday he died. He makes the eighth victim of the terrible disaster.

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd, at Groton, S. D., we quote: "We taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four doctors gave me up saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles; it has cured me, and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottles free at F. G. Hines & Co's. Regular size, 50 cents and $1.00. 4

PROBATE NOTICE.

State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. The Probate Court for said County. At a session of the Probate Court for said county, held at the probate office, in the village of Charlevoix, on the 22nd day of March, A. D. 1892. Present, Fred W. Mayne, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Frank A. Wolcott, deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Frank A. Wolcott, praying that administration of the estate of said deceased, and representing that said deceased at the time of his death was possessed of and owned in the county and state of Michigan, certain real estate, and that said deceased died intestate, and praying that he may be appointed administrator, who are or were at the time of the death of the said deceased, the heirs at law of said deceased, and entitled to inherit the real estate of said deceased, and the residuary legatees and next of kin, if any there be, and entitled to the residue of said estate, and further that such of them or their heirs or assigns may now be known, may be adjudged by this court to be such. It is ordered that the 4th day of April, A. D. 1892, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law and next of kin, named, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the probate office, in the village of Boyne City, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted. It is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested, in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and published and circulated in said county, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

WE Have Been Too Busy to write an Advertisement.

We could not begin to say what we would in the small space we have. We will only call attention to a few of our specialities-

IN SEEDS

Our trade is growing and we handle only reliable kinds. Can supply you with seed oats, wheat, corn and all field and garden seeds.

Implements

The "South Bend chilled" and "Gale No. 110" lead the world in plows. The Black Diamond, and Gale Lever, are the best harrow.

The 'Champion' and "Farmer's Favorite" grain drills are "on top."

We went to headquarters and got the best wagons and buggies. Our "Cyclone" fanning mill will clean you up.

It is natural for a dealer to say his wares are the "best" but we think we know what we were doing and found the BEST of everything before buying.

"Chew our string," and you can decide our pudding.

AFTER TWO YEARS

RECOVERY OF THE HILL FARM VICTIMS.

Ghastly Relics Should Be Given a Sixfoot Burial—Suspects in Stockholm—Mortgages to Receive the Foreclosure Again.

Congressional.

On the 19th the usual morning contest in the House of Representatives was over the question of the right of the Speaker to refuse all the bills, which he claims were introduced for obstruction, and then Mr. Hoar stating that it was evident that no fair vote could be taken, moved an adjournment, which motion was carried. The Senate spent the day in executive session, the question being over the Chinese and Indian bills of an early day report, a resolution for further consideration. The internal revenue bill occupied the attention of everything else in the House. At the close of the proceedings Mr. Bland, the presiding officer, announced that he had been approached by the Speaker, and in a few moments when discussing the pending question in the pending bill. After exciting debate, the Speaker ordered the roll call, and the result was a tie, the ayes and nays being 150 to 150, the strength very nearly evenly divided, very few members being absent. Under the circumstances, the correspondents received the the President relative to the Behring Sea treaties was waite patiently. It reveals a very sickly situation. The President sent in the Senate the following message: Hon. Stanton J. Peelle of Indiana, Judge of the Court of Claims, vice Judge Nott, retired; Calvin Brainerd Kinney, of Virginia, to be Consul-General for Siam; Lewis Ledyard Delafield, of New York, to be United States District of Texas; John H. Baker, for District of Indiana; Elbert S. Jackson, District Attorney; Alvin Saunders, Governor, Territory of Idaho; Joseph Bell, District Attorney, District of Pennsylvania.

Taken from the Trunk.

The dead have been wrecked from their coffins in both, and all that remains now is to accord a Christian burial to the unknown who met their fate in the Hill Farm mine at Dunbar, Pa., June 18, 1891. The bodies of twenty-three of the miners have been brought to the surface. The struggle for life of the entombed miners was as terrible as it was brief. The bodies were suffocated — not burned or starved—and it is impossible that any lived longer than an hour. The search for the bodies has been carried on unceasingly by the owners of the Hill Farm since the awful disaster twenty months ago, at a cost of over $100,000. After two years' work the searchers were compelled to abandon the work for a time till the fire, which followed the explosion, could be extinguished. The mine was then sealed up, and then flooded to radiate the fire, after which months were required to clear the mine of water and the tunnel reopened disclosed the dead.

A Lethargic at Seventy-five.

A most ridiculous element of surprised and bewildered curiosity is lent to the born in a Lethargic of 75 summers, Arthur Bitson by the fact that he has lived with his grandson, Willie Pitts, ever since his parents died, dependent on him for support. To the amazement of every one he and gentleman eloped with the wife of Harrison Wheeler, the village blacksmith. The woman was about 30 years old and a rather flighty miss. She had been $15 on his personal, but no other means to facilitate their flight. The elopement supposed to have gone to Chicago. Wheeler was by Saturday afternoon hunting a divorce lawyer.

A Novel Claim for Damages.

DAVID JACOBS, of Seymour, Ind., has sued the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for $10,000 for being assaulted while walking for a load of brick on a day of his employment. He was a freight train cleared a local crossing.

BREVITIES.

Twenty-two business houses were destroyed by fire in Alto, Texas.

A bill appropriating $12,000 for an Iowa World's Fair exhibit passed the State Senate.

Edward M. Field, who has been adjudged insane, will be sent to the Buffalo State Hospital.

Warren Watson, of Kansas City, was killed by a bear while on a trip to Santa Fe Railroad.

Governor Serna Harrison is generally in possession of the Presidential office in Lima, Peru.

Five persons were killed and twenty injured by a fire in Amsterdam resulting from the explosion of a barrel of kerosene.

Captain Miles' company of Texas rangers has had a brush with a band of Garza's adherents in Duval County, three men on each side was killed.

Miss May Fessenden, of Kent, Ohio, committed suicide with a revolver because her mother had refused to consent to her marriage, with Wilson Smith.

Tuesday Harrison will issue a proclamation extraordinary about four or five thousand Mormons who were disfranchised by the Edmunds-Tucker law.

The Canadian Government refuses to allow the importation of American oatmeal into Montreal under bond for the purpose of slaughtering them there and exporting them as meal.

France refuses to apologize for the arrest of Mr. Pauffin and his butcher, two Englishmen, who were arrested at the Antonli races on the mistaken supposition that they were pickpockets.

The will of Rev. E. J. Peers, of Monmouth, N. J., leaves the entire fund for the education of colored young men for the ministry.

The library of the late John B. Gough, which contained many rare old volumes, was sold at auction in Boston. "Gutenbill in the Barber Shop" brought $200.

There was stalling at the Hetopen colliery, in Durham, England. The miners are trying to force the employment to join in the strike and then allow the mines to be flooded.

EASTERN.

It appears probable that a Sunday-closing clause will be upon the New York World's Fair appropriation bill, and that so amendment the bill will receive the executive signature.

Mrs. McCrain, of Pittsburg, while drunk, drove her 5-year-old daughter on the stove to punish her for crying. The child was almost burned to death when rescued by the father.

Henry Gibson, acting as foreman of a jury in a damage suit before a New York court, refused to return a verdict according to instructions from the Court, and was excused from service.

A message of the New Jersey Senate alleges that he was offered $10,000 to vote for the bill legalizing the Gooding Railway deal. The offer was not fixed but is said to have been used at that time was $5,000.000.

William Lewis sang "Comrades" in a convivial party at Newark, N. J., one night. Mike Slattery protested, and then the men fought. They were parted, and Lewis went away, but soon returned with a razor, with which he cut Slattery's throat. The man who could not shake "Comrades" to dead, and the slayer is in jail.

Thomas Ferrier, a capitalist and prominent of New York, 20 years of age, has been sued for breach of promise of marriage by Miss Carmania A. Emmett, of Brooklyn, who demands $50,000 damages. Former music Miss Emmett's accompaniment. Strong affidavits are given inviting correspondence with a view to matrimony.

WESTERN.

At Darlington, Wis., the case of the Sickelds brothers was given to the jury in the special plea of insanity. It was proved a verdict that each of the seven defendants was Sept. 21, 1891, insane, and therefore irresponsible for his acts. The jury found the twelve men of them are now insane, and they will probably be kept in the asylum for life. Great sympathy is lent to the Sickelds family. Sixteen years ago the father of the seven defendants, Frank Hiles, Frank Midgley, and John A. Midgley, were discharged.

In spite of the explosion of a boiler at the workshop of the Lacleede Firebrick Manufacturing Company at Lacleede, a St. Louis Mail school, four men were killed and four others injured, and two others used seriously, The boiler exploded, blew up and a battery of six which, it is supposed, ran out of water. It is a large boiler filled with cold water, and the explosion followed. The Superintendent was completely wrecked, and the two injured fellows were carried out of the yard.

The Grand Jury of Cook County, Ill., "lands" methods of certain members of the Chicago city council, and in its report to Judge Chetlain, it says: "We have the indictment of a number of aldermen for bribery, and we hold the votes in favor of two or three valuable franchises were given for bribes or promotions. The evidence, it is asserted, is in the hands of a number of so-arranged 'gang' in the council, which has prevented the passage of all ordinances for which the promoters were not willing to pay bribes, and has supported all for which the cash was forthcoming. The evidence is ample to prove that the appropriate for franchises have been sought and obtained and had plainly that they cause their arrange the money to secure the adoption. This attorney, so the story goes, is a member of influence in the council, and endeavored the manner for the adoption of ordinances required for the development of the plunder with the gang of which he is the blackleg. He is reported to have made a clean sweep.

A Chicago dispatch says: Fire occurred at Odin, Ill., by other night in which seven persons were burned to death through none of the dangerously. The sufferers are Mrs. Jacob Ruff, aged 50; E. Ingleson, Lawrenceville, Ill., aged about fourteen; Mrs. Ruff's daughter, Ill., right leg and his injured, H. C. Fancher, Fairfield, Ill., aged 15, left hand and otherwise injured; W. H. Hopkins, Odin, Ill., slightly; and Mrs. H. Hopkins, Flora, Ill., not injured, right arm and shoulder bruised. Mr. Ingleson, Mrs. Ruff and Mr. Fancher will recover. E. N. Moore, Mrs. H. Hopkins, Mrs. Ruff, Mr. Ingleson and Mr. Fancher, Mrs. H. Hopkins and Rogers brought A. H. Moore, Charles Hutchinson, Mrs. Ruff, Mrs. W. Meyers, Rik City, kan. left arm and hand cut, Mrs. Ruff, Mrs. Hopkins, Beatrice, Va., slightly bruised in most; Charles Hutchinson, Mrs. Ruff, cut in head; James A. Scudder, Iowa Hatch, Ill., Mrs. Ruff, Mrs. H. Thompson, Seymour, Ind., head cut; J. W. Ward, Lawrenceville, Ill., cut in back and face; S. O. Mirkle, Fairfield, Ill., slight cut on head; Mrs. J. SOUTHERN.

At Baltimore, Md., Mrs. Andrew Reid, Jr., discovered a man Thursday night in a second-story dentist's plane and secured it for $20. Mr. William T. Walters, the well known philanthropist, presented the painting to be as dentist's fee, the amount of the fee being dollars.

In Silver Plain, West Baton Rouge, La., the horse at a tragedy in the Rev. Monroe Swan's school room, which killed the teacher he loved, killed the school boy who had killed the teacher into the woods, taking a loaded revolver with him. When the pursuers were closing in upon him he fired three shots into his head, and fell dead. The girl he reached him he was dead.

The Grand Lodge of Knights Pythias Company has arrived in El Paso, Texas, after making a tour of the Mexican, based with financial distress and a history of misfortune from the time of entering that republic. Manager Merrick, of the Pullman Palace Cars, advanced the money for railroad transportation to bring the company to Fort Chihuahua, where it was delayed for several days for lack of funds to meet obligations.

WASHINGTON

All the Appellate Justices appointed by the President, including Judge Woods, of Indiana, have been confirmed.

Senator Gallinger has introduced a bill appropriating $15,000 for a national sanitarium for the treatment of pulmonary disease.

The great free silver fight is now on. A Washington dispatch says: There seems to be no doubt about the passage of the bill on the final vote, unless the opposition manages to kill it off by some parliamentary harm parse, and it is generally probable that this will happen. The opponents have and yet developed their plan of sniping, but as they are undoubtedly in the majority they will claim if necessary to kill the bill which is nearly occasion the weaker party prepare for delaying final action. Everything points in a splitted fight and it is probable that there will be some sharp sparring and hot words before it is over. No effort has been made yet in Congress this session has created sure the feeling of bitterness of feeling that has lire, developed on this silver bill. The bill may be added to and amended that has come up has so interested the following public. There seems to be no doubt in the minds of those who have charge of the matter in the House of the passage of the bill. It is probable that a vote will be taken Republicans will vote for it. Every Farmers' Alliance for it, and the opposition outside that it will pass. They are generally of opinion, too, that it will pass the Senate, though the vote there will probably be pretty close.

POLITICAL

The Prohibitionists of Michigan, at the State Convention held at Grand Rapids, refused to entertain a proposition looking toward fusion with the People's party.

The first Democratic territorial convention in the history of Indian Territory was held at McAlester, when delegates were in attendance to the Democratic National Convention were chosen.

INDUSTRIAL.

Sixty union printers have struck in the establishment of the West Publishing Company, in St. Paul, because the use of machines caused the employment of more apprentices than their rules allowed.

Eleven conductors on the Wisconsin division of the Chicago and North-western railroad were discharged but in no case did the reason given for their dismissal connect on the Union. The evidence against all of them is said to have been furnished by a female detective employed by the company, by representing herself as a distressed country girl, and in fact it reveals a very sickly situation. The President sent in the Senate the following nominations: Stanton J. Peelle, of Indiana, Judge of the Court of Claims, vice Judge Nott, retired; Calvin Brainerd Kinney, of Virginia, to be Consul-General for Siam; William L. Ledyard Delafield, of New York, to be United States District of Texas; John H. Baker, for District of Indiana; Elbert S. MILLIONAIRES OFTEN DISTRESSED FOR MONEY.

Washington Correspondence.

WASHINGTON correspondent of the Omaha Bee gives a man who is worth a million dollars. He is a well-known newspaper correspondent and a little group standing in the corridor of a Senate corridor as he passed the door of Senator Nebraska walked up to him and said: "Do you know what this mossbunged people think? They think you are a man who is worth a million dollars." He had but twenty cents in his pocket. "Why, how much are you worth?" I said.

"Not a red cent," was the reply, "and you I had to borrow a quarter's paper for 25c before a Washington merchant would open up the loan. It all came about through Senator Paddock's the-ughlove-ness. He is so much engrossed in his large-fend lill and other legislative matters that he has not time to lend him the money daily like such as pocket money, and I have to borrow it from Senators, as a fact that he once was the Senator from the line between Chicago and Green Bay, and such conductor as asked for his tickets, and had been provided with tickets, and had been provided with tickets, and had been provided with

MEMORIES.

The Scribe Revives Recollections of the Past—Persons and Events.

In those early days, when the nearest railroad station was Grand Rapids, and Charlevoix was a wooding station for a dozen or more lake propellers running between Buffalo and Chicago, the "skippers" lay close to all our hearts. Scarcely a day passed that one or more of them did not take possession of our outside dock for several hours. Indians were in demand, and so was Indian whisky, a supply of which was kept on board to facilitate business. These old veteran lake captains still occupy a chamber in the scribes memory as potent factors of our existence in those days of isolation. Their distinct and striking personalities were made more conspicuous by their autocratic sway over everything within a distance of the length of their heaving lines.

One of the earliest to wood at the "Pine River pier" was Capt. Jim Pratt, of the St. Louis. That was the day of tyrants afloat, and Capt. Jim was a tyrant—a veritable despot, yet, withal, kind hearted when you broke the crust of his crusty nature. You could begin to hear him swear as soon as he checked down outside, and by the time his lines were made fast, every thing was blue. Those days a Chicago paper two days old was fought for as a pearl of great price. The scribe once approached Capt. Pratt on the dock and asked him for a paper. With a power of invective that nearly threw the scribe off the dock the old skipper declared that he "was not peddling newspapers up and down the lakes." Crestfallen and all taken-a-back the scribe started up the dock only to be called back by Jack Ingalls and introduced to the old bear as a "young man of the press" to whom a paper at that time would be most valuable. Pratt alighted from his perch, and, inviting the scribe to his room gave him a pocketful of the i. ne. Every trip after that, while he sailed here, a paper was laid aside for the SENTINEL. Underneath the hard shell of the old sailor there was much of the milk of human kindness. But woe be to the deck-hand that rebelled or by as much as a look questioned his authority.

* * *

But the scribe even yet laughs when the figure of old Capt. Jas. Drake, of the Oneida, rises before him in memory. "Old Jimmy Ducks," everybody called him, even the dock jammies of Buffalo gaging him by yelling that cognomen at him as he passed up the river. He wore his high-topped heavy boots in August, and while yet out in the lake he would begin swearing at Mr. Fox about the measurement of the piling of the wood. Fox always laid for the old Irishman, and yet relates with an air of satisfaction how, after old Jimmy would throw the bottom logs of the pile into the lake, he would fish them out and measure them again in the Oneida's pile. Scarcely a trip that Uncle Amos and Capt. Drake would not have a rection on the dock, the former stamping and swearing, until Fox would get purple and consign him and his boat to a locality where fuel was not required. The old man is yet sailing out of Buffalo, and, without question is still wearing his big boots on the pilot house.

In contrast to these characters of fire and brimstone, was the quiet and gentlemanly Capt. Perkins who succeeded Capt. Welch in the propeller Fountain City, in 1869. The scribe sees him standing on the pilot house with his hands in his pockets, now and then speaking a quiet word to the mate, always addressing him as "Mr." An incident of his first trip here in '69 still lingers in our memory. He had just checked down outside, when we heard him yell "Fox!" from the pilot house. Mr. Fox went as far out on the end of the dock as he could get, and this was his spring greeting from the Fountain City: "You will find a bottle and tumbler in my room on the bureau!" We remember seeing "Wagoosh" climb over the rail soon after the heaving lines touched the dock. Poor Capt. Perkins bad health soon compelled him to leave the lakes, and he died at Painesville, Ohio, in 1871.

One of our favorite captains those days was Captain Burton Penny, master of that queen of passenger steamers, the Idaho. With what regularity she alternated with the Fountain City—"up" every other Friday night and "down" Thursday morning. Those were the "well letter days" at the old dock. That chime whistle only gave one long blast, but it was a long one, and it was music to our ears. Capt. Penny was a portly and bluff old sailor, and as kind as he was big. But in bad weather passengers found it pleasanter to keep "well aft." His mate—Alex. Clark—was his duplicate. Capt. Clark was afterward a popular captain, and is now President of the Seaman's Benevolent Association. Clark when mate of the Idaho, once took the boat out after wooding, (as was customary), but left Capt. Penny ashore at Mr. Fox's house. His mistake was not discovered until well down toward Wagoochance. Fox says they were down cellar and did not hear the whistle. The scribe enjoyed the fun of seeing Clark sneak down one arch while Penny climbed up the other, and took the bells. Capt. Penny retired some years ago.

* * *

But the "Commodore" of the whole fleet was honest old Captain James Gibson, who sailed the Fountain City after Perkins left her. He always loved Charlevoix, and was the only one of the lot who had the courage to bring his boat inside after the river was dug out. Several trips one season he made landings inside—the largest craft that floated in Round Lake, before or since. A trip with Capt. Gibson was a social event. Fatherly, candid, high-minded and clean-tongued, he was a sailor gentleman. Always considerate of the comfort of his passengers, and especially kind to the children. If he could not find little ones in the cabin he would go to the steerage for them. When the Fountain City left this route everybody mourned. The jovial old Scotchman is now sailing one of the mammoth steamers of the Lackwanna line.

As to Your Clothing

There is a new Clothing Store in town, and I am glad of it. I am aware that a good many were dissatisfied, thinking I had it all my own way, and was overcharging for my goods. I have always tried to please my customers, and to do so I have been adding to my stock until I have the largest stock of Clothing and Furnishing Goods that I have ever had in my store. All I ask is for you to give me a show, and don't forget to look over my stock before buying, and if I don't give you prices and goods to down the world, I won't expect your trade.

At the Norwood Township meeting it was voted to appropriate funds to gravel the Norwood road from McGeagh's mill north to the Town line, providing Charlevoix will gravel it to that point from the state road. If we are wise we will accept the proposition. Money spent on roads is well spent.

—Allmendinger's pile driver will leave to-day or to-morrow for Benton Harbor, in tow of the tug Higgie. To-day the machine has finished driving some piles at Emrey's dock.

Wednesday the tugs Gilken and Minnie Warren got out to the fishing grounds through the ice. Friday night the heavy southeast gale cleared the lake of ice, and navigation is fully open at Charlevoix.

MEMORIES.

The Scribe Revives Recollections of the Past—Persons and Events.

In those early days, when the nearest railroad station was Grand Rapids, and Charlevoix was a wooding station for a dozen or more lake propellers running between Buffalo and Chicago, the "skippers" lay close to all our hearts. Scarcely a day passed that one or more of them did not take possession of our outside dock for several hours. Indians were in demand, and so was Indian whisky, a supply of which was kept on board to facilitate business. These old veteran lake captains still occupy a chamber in the scribes memory as potent factors of our existence in those days of isolation. Their distinct and striking personalities were made more conspicuous by their autocratic sway over everything within a distance of the length of their heaving lines.

One of the earliest to wood at the "Pine River pier" was Capt. Jim Pratt, of the St. Louis. That was the day of tyrants afloat, and Capt. Jim was a tyrant—a veritable despot, yet, withal, kind hearted when you broke the crust of his crusty nature. You could begin to hear him swear as soon as he checked down outside, and by the time his lines were made fast, everything was blue. Those days a Chicago paper two days old was fought for as a pearl of great price. The scribe once approached Capt. Pratt on the dock and asked him for a paper. With a power of invective that nearly threw the scribe off the dock the old skipper declared that he "was not peddling newspapers up and down the lakes." Crestfallen and all taken-a-back the scribe stared up the dock only to be called back by Jack Ingalls and introduced to the old bear as a "young man of the press" to whom a paper at that time would be most valuable. Pratt alighted from his perch, and, inviting the scribe to his room gave him a pocketful of the latest. Every trip after that, while he sailed here, a paper was laid aside for the SENTINEL. Underneath the hard shell of the old sailor there was much of the milk of human kindness. But woe be to the deck-hand that rebelled or by as much as a look questioned his authority.

* * *

But the scribe even yet laughs when the figure of old Capt. Jas. Drake, of the Oneida, rises before him in memory. "Old Jimmy Drake," everybody called him, even the dock gamins of Buffalo guying him by yelling that cognomen at him as he passed up the river. He wore his high-topped heavy boots in August, and while yet out in the lake he would begin swearing at Mr. Fox about the measurement of the piling of the wood. The shanty laid for the old Irishman, and yet relates with an air of satisfaction how, after old Jimmy would throw the bottom logs of the pile into the lake, he would fish them out and measure them again in the Oneida's pile. Scarcely a trip that Uncle Amos and Capt. Drake would not have a ruction on the dock, the former stamping and swearing until Fox would get purple and consign him and his boat to a locality where fuel was not required. The old man is yet sailing out of Buffalo, and, without question is still wearing his big boots on the pilot house.

In contrast to these characters of fire and brimstone, was the quiet and gentlemanly Capt. Perkins who succeeded Capt. Welch in the propeller Fountain City, in 1869. The scribe sees him standing on the pilot house with his hands in his pockets, now and then speaking a quiet word to the mate, always addressing him as "Mr." An incident of his first trip here in '69 still lingers in our memory. He had just checked down outside, when we heard him yell "Fox!" from the pilot house. Mr. Fox went as far out on the end of the dock as he could get, and this was his spring greeting from the Fountain City: "You will find a bottle and tumbler in my room on the bureau!" We remember seeing "Mr. Fox" climb over the big hawse fender the heaving lines touched the dock. Poor Capt. Perkins bad health soon compelled him to leave the lakes, and he died at Painesville, Ohio, in 1871.

One of our favorite captains those days was Captain Burton Penny, master of that queen of passenger steamers, the Idaho. With what regularity she alternated with the Fountain City—"up" every other Friday night and "down" Thursday morning. Those were the "red letter days" at the old dock. That chime whistle only gave one long blast, but it was a long one, and it was music to our ears. Capt. Penny was a portly and bluff old sailor, and as kind as he was big. But in bad weather passengers found it pleasanter to keep "well aft." His mate—Alex. Clark—was his duplicate. Capt. Clark was afterward a popular captain, and is now President of the Seaman's Benevolent Association. Clark when mate of the Idaho, once took the boat out after wooding, (as was customary), but left Capt. Penny ashore at Mr. Fox's house. His mistake was not discovered until well down toward Wagoochance. Fox says they were down cellar and did not hear the whistle. The scribe enjoyed the fun of seeing Clark sneak down one arch while Penny climbed up the other, and took the bells. Capt. Penny retired some years ago.

* * *

But the "Commodore" of the whole fleet was honest old Captain James Gibson, who sailed the Fountain City after Perkins left her. He always loved Charlevoix, and was the only one of the lot who had the courage to bring his boat inside after the river was dug out. Several trips one season he made landings inside—the largest craft that float, in Round Lake, before or since. A trip with Capt. Gibson was a social event. Fatherly, candid, high-minded and clean-tongued, he was a sailor gentleman. Always considerate of the comfort of his passengers, and especially kind to the children. If he could not find little ones in the cabin he would go to the steerage for them. When the Fountain City left this route everybody mourned. The jovial old Scotchman is now sailing one of the mammoth steamers of the Lackawanna line.

As to Your Clothing

There is a new Clothing Store in town, and I am glad of it. I am aware that a good many were dissatisfied, thinking I had it all my own way, and was overcharging for my goods. I have always tried to please my customers, and to do so I have been adding to my stock until I have the largest stock of Clothing and Furnishing Goods that I have ever had in my store. All I ask is for you to give me a show, and don't forget to look over my stock before buying, and if I don't give you prices and goods to down the world, I won't expect your trade.

Established 1882. G. W. MILLER'S. Still on Earth 1891.

—At the Norwood Township meeting it was voted to appropriate funds to gravel the Norwood road from McGeoghe's mill north to the Town line, providing Charlevoix will gravel it to that point from the state road. If we are wise we will accept the proposition. Money spent on roads is well spent.

—Allmendinger's pile driver will leave to-day or to-morrow for Benton Harbor, in tow of the tug Higgie. To-day the machine has finished driving some piles at Emrey's dock.

—Wednesday the tugs Giken and Minnie Warren got out to the fishing grounds through the ice. Friday night the heavy southeast gale cleared the lake of ice, and navigation is fully open at Charlevoix.

One Hundred Questions Answered in Plain English—Something About Beet Root Sugar and Binding Twine.

Q. What is the Mc-Kinley law? A. It is the tariff law which was enacted "when some inebriated or the horses of the Senate" left it.

Q. Is it not so, though slightly so near the truth as the World does give in talking about the tariff. Against an unsupported assertion that domestic goods have risen more than foreign goods, we place the following facts and figures:

London is the great world's market for foreign wools. We learn from the London Economist of January 1, 1895, Lee-quote the list of wools, and cotton also, regularly quoted there when to wind up its columns, with the annexed prices for that date of each designated brand. Then we take the corresponding list and prices as given in the same journal on February 1, 1897. We compare the two lists of prices, with the following results:

Here are thirteen items out of the fifty-seven given in which show a positive advance in price since January, 1895, since the introduction of the Mc-Kinley tariff, and 44 instances in which there has been a fall in price, showing a further decrease in the prices of products compared to the fall in London.

The fall in wool stands to date to a downward movement throughout the world, caused by immensely increased production in nearly all wool-growing countries, for long, the McKinley law's being responsible for it, that measure has stricken the fall in this country so that our wool-growers have suffered less than those of any other country. The fall has been insignificant compared to what it would have been under a free wool regime.

Cotton goods, it under free trade wages would be lower, would fall in price proportionately, would not the advocates of free trade say so?

Undoubtedly he would. If prices would, under free trade, fall in the workmanship of the cotton fabric, by a corresponding fall in wages, by a reduction of wages, it is supposed by all experienced men and facts. Let us take an illustration. When a rich man goes to a shoemaker in this country and has his foot measured for a pair of shoes, when are to be made to order and exactly fitted to the peculiar shape of his foot he unhesitatingly pays more than he would pay for similar work in England or in Europe. Our shoemaker gets two and three times as much as the shoemaker of other countries, and it is just natural that, even allowing perhaps for his greater skill, the product of his labor should be dearer.

But take, on the other hand, a pair of shoes made by the wonderful machines which can be found in any shoe of our great factories, which cut the leather, sew the shoes and finish them, almost entirely without the intervention of human hands, on machines throwing out hundreds of pairs of shoes daily. Here is a marvelous cheapening of labor, the fact that the wages of the workingman, who tends to such a machine are lower and would make a apparentle difference in the price of one of those hundred pairs of shoes which that machine turns out? Certainly not. And yet it is just the slashing change which has kind of shoes.

Q. Can this be so everyone knows. Many a tree-trader lies unwittingly and deliberately, and yet, on the other hand, everybody knows, has given incontrovertible evidence on this point, which he said that all substantial articles of the Schedule are cheaper now than they were under the Mc-Kinley tariff, and that the cheapness is due to the tariff. We think the following extract from the Dry Goods Chronicle, of Boston, Mass., of the 1st of March, 1896, will be read with great interest by the owners of machines made at Lowell, Lawrence, Fall River, Manchester and those large works which supply most of the cotton goods used in this country. Here is what the Dry Goods Chronicle says:

"Cotton goods are cheaper than ever before, and the reduction in the cost of the raw material is not the only cause of the cheapening of the goods. Machinery has been improved, and the cost of the labor has been reduced. Wages have not been reduced in the cotton mills, and the operatives are earning more than ever before, because they can do more work in the same time. The cotton goods now made are better than those made a year ago, and much better than those made two years ago. The cotton goods now made are better than those made five years ago, and much better than those made ten years ago. The cotton goods now made are better than those made when the Mc-Kinley tax law was enacted, and much better than those made when the Wilson tax law was enacted. The cotton goods now made are better than those made when the Mc-Kinley tax law was repealed, and much better than those made when the Wilson tax law was enacted

The Republican Victories.

The municipal and township elections throughout Michigan this spring have been an emphatic rebuke to Democrats and Democratic methods.

Looking over the State to-day the Democrats see scarcely a city of any size that they can call theirs. Grand Rapids, which a year ago went Democratic by 1,500, this spring elected a Republican mayor by 500 majority. Other cities did the same. Lansing, with the influence of the State administration to aid the Democrats, elected a full Republican ticket. Saginaw, a Democratic stronghold, will have a Republican mayor and city officials this year. Ionia and Jackson, both Democratic strongholds, have gone over to the other side. Kalamazoo, Flint, Coldwater, Muskegon, Grand Haven, Ypsilanti, Cheboygan, Albion and Ludington, Republican cities which the Democrats were confident they would carry, have all elected Republican tickets by increased pluralities. Bay City, Alpena, and a few other Democratic cities, were carried by the Democrats by greatly decreased majorities. In every quarter Republicans have made substantial gains, and they enter upon the National and State campaign in the possession of the municipal machinery of every city of any size in the state.

Township elections show large Republican gains, and a general Republican awakening throughout the state gives notice to the Democratic party that it has been weighed in the balance and found wanting.

The November elections will find Michigan in the Republican column.

The fathers and founders of free trade in this country advocated the doctrine that capital should own labor, while and black.

The money that goes abroad to pay for the labor of manufacturing our boasted million dollars' work of woolen goods, or iron goods, etc., is absolutely taken from the employment and pay of labor in this land.

Capital in this country is now about able to take care of itself in manufacturing enterprises, but labor is assailed by the cheap competition of the oppressed hordes of the world, and must have protection or sink to the level of its assailants.

Mr. C. S. Ellsworth, Antrim county received Monday evening on the train 15,000 brook trout to be planted in Intermediate lake. Mr. Mesplebed has planted in this lake, all told, about 200,000 trout, and says that they are doing well.

The stamp tide of Hill now continues. The pith of Josh Billings' remark that "while a man gets started down hill everything seems to be planned for the occasion," is doubtless appreciated by nobody so profoundly just now as by the senator from New York.

It is the staid and dignified Philadelphia Ledger which perpetrates this: A New York senator who recently took his boom south for his health is said to be contemplating a western trip for the same purpose. The poor man suffers most from prosperity.

EX-GOVERNOR CAMPBELL says he will head a Cleveland delegation to Chicago from Ohio, and Senator Brice gives assurances to Senator Hill that there will be a delegation for him from Ohio. If this thing goes on arrangements will have to be made at Chicago for holding two conventions.

Of thirty-five woolen manufacturers who were asked whether they desired free wool thirty-two answered in the negative. The three odd ones belong to the class who think they can have protection for themselves without according it to any one else. They are not Protectionists at all if they fail to understand that the doctrine of that system is live and let live.

T. B. Democrats were just as positive that the McKinley bill was unconstitutional as they were that it was ruinous and would utterly destroy the foreign trade of the country. The supreme court has explained how badly they were mistaken on the first point and has shown that the law is constitutional and valid in every particular. The figures giving the imports and exports for the last year show a great growth instead of falling off in foreign trade, and conclusively dispose of the second objection the Democrats made to the McKinley tariff. In fact, all the dire predictions made by the enemies of the McKinley law have come to naught; but the free-trade attorneys continue to proclaim to the second objection that the McKinley law, just the same. They have become so addicted to the habit of calamity-howling that they can't stop.

Northern Michigan News.

Cheboygan has rejected an electric light proposition for the third time.

There are two babies in Kingsley, Grand Traverse county, who were born on the 29th of February last.

The Queen of the Lakes will ply between Elk Rapids and Eastport this season under the command of Capt. Hawley.

Dr. S. T. White leaves Hillsdale about April 15 for San Francisco, where he has a more profitable field for the practice of his profession.

William Kerr, foreman of Cross Village, was carried away with drifting ice and a week has elapsed without tidings from him.

A steam shovel at Hillsdale got away from the engineer one day last week, and ran down the track half a mile, before it was caught.

The telegraph poles are distributed along the railroad track as far as Hillsdale and they will soon have wire communication with the outside world.

Chas. Harper has sold his farm at Central lake, to the railroad. They buy it for a gravel pit for ballasting the road. A slide track is now being put in.

The hardy Le Blanc brothers, Beaver Island mail carriers, are all right and are carrying the mail regularly to the islands in an open boat. It was feared that they were drowned.

Henry Pipp, of Kalkaska, who lately signed with the National base ball league, has thrown up the job and returned home disgusted with the life of a professional base ball player.

Archie Dougherty was elected Supervisor of Elk Rapids. The Progress says the Democrats there met their Waterloo—every man on the Republican ticket being elected by majorities ranging from 75 upwards.

Mr S. Isaman of East Jordan receives a pension from Uncle Sam of $6.00 per month. He thinks it is rather small pay for one to get who holds two honorable discharges and a medal from President A. Lincoln.

Mrs. A. A. Smith of Northport aged 53, is writing a series of articles for the Grand Traverse Herald, depicting the hardships of a pioneer missionary life. Her husband the late Hev. Geo N. Smith, was the first ordained Congregational minister in Michigan, and his entire life was spent in mission work among the Indians.

Six little girls of Petoskey organized a cook club last fall, and they pursued their studies and experiments in a highly successful manner all winter. The other evening they gave a sort of a valedictory tea, at which the edibles being of their own cooking. The chairs were so delicious that the little girls' big sisters' beaux have concluded to wait for the little cooks to grow up.

Prof. Richard T. Ely, of John Hopkins University, has been called to the head of the Bay View summer University, and has accepted. Prof. Ely is recognized as one of the foremost political economists in this country, and his name is known in every civilized land. It is therefore especially gratifying that he is coming to Michigan, and Bay View is to be congratulated in securing so eminent a person.

Grand Traverse Herald: Grand Traverse county will have the honor of furnishing Michigan's quota of native sticks of timber for the colonade of the Forestry building at the World's Fair in Chicago in 1893. This great building has a colonade extending around it, supported by pillars formed of one large center timber with a smaller stick on each side. These timber are to be furnished by the states and territories, of selected native woods. Michigan is to be furnish nine sticks, three 16 to 20 inches in size and six 9 to 12 inches, all 25 feet long. They will be of white ash, red oak, basswood, soft elm, maple, beech, white pine, Norway pine and hemlock. The bark is left on the trees. They are selected carefully, to furnish handsome specimens, and then have to be felled with great care to keep the bark intact and free from injury. The sticks will be covered with some preservative preparation to keep the bark from peeling or injury and a tablet will be set into each stick giving its common and scientific name and the state from which it comes. A Campeachy of Acme township, has this important matter in charge and timbers will be cut near Balsa station on the C. & N. M. and shipped from this port direct to Chicago by rail.

WILD WORK OF WINDS.

NELSON, NEB., THE SCENE OF DEVASTATION.

A Kentucky Joint Peddler in His Drawing Room Entertains Two Ladies with Pistols—Black Lizzard at Kiev, Wis.—The Dead Was a Good One.

At Washington.

On the 21st Mr. Morgan introduced a resolution from the Committee on Foreign Relations to inquire into the causes of difference with Chile and to report the facts and the action of the United States thereon. Mr. Morgan said the resolutions were laid on the table and the following day the House the senate adopted from a decidedly pellucid and silver tongued speech by Senator Hoar, who was for once in his life brief. The Senate Committee on Commerce reported that the power wrest in Secretary Foster under the act of congress regarding the conference of any nation with the United States could erase in the tariff, formed a new definition of reciprocity, and generally emasculate the act. Senator Morgan, the author of the law against which all the Republicans have been so excited. He was among those present in the senate when the act was passed and paid close attention to it, and he said he had never heard the slightest hint of such a construction of the act. The Senate accepted the recommendation of the House and concurred in the conference report on the Indian appropriation. The Indian Bill was finally debated in the House.

Nelson, Neb., Struck by a Cyclone.

A cyclone struck Nelson in the northern part of Nebraska, at 4:30 p. m. Thursday. A heavy wind and rain had preceded from the southeast for some time and seemed to carry the cyclone right along with it. It was plain that a terrible cyclone was raging in the southwest for several miles before it struck Nelson. The clouds spread round and seemed to come from all several directions. The sky was green and yellow and terrible. Houses and barns packed in a rather good cover of safety. Damages have not estimated at $100,000. The Post National Bank of Nelson, the Opera house, three stores, six residences and half a dozen others in the block were unroofed and scattered and many others badly damaged. Nine were killed, the gun school-house, which was occupied at the beginning of the year at a cost of $18,000, was almost destroyed. The Presbyterian Church was badly unroofed. A large number of residences were completely wrecked. Many people were injured but none killed.

Howling Over Dollar Bills.

At Hartsville, Ky., the dwelling of Judge R. I. Bush, together with all its contents and a valuable library, was entirely consumed by an incendiary fire, while attempting to save some valuable papers, was struck on the head and badly burn the effects of which he will die. The loss on the building is estimated at $3,000, furniture, $2,500; library, $1,500, with no insurance.

EASTERN.

Because a jury had failed to come to an agreement in the case of R. J. Cornelius, accused of the murder of Policeman Findlay, Judge Arnold, of Philadelphia, told the prisoner as he was discharging them that they were a disgrace to society.

After a protracted illness, lasting from Dec. 17 last, when he was first afflicted with paraparesis, Walt Whitman, the poet and author, died at his home in Camden, N. J., at 6 o'clock Monday night. His lasting off was practically the end of his life.

Shortly before his death he asked his friends to have some music formed thus on his side, and in ten minutes he was dead.

Mrs. Hubbe B. Bulkman, of New York, who was injured in a fall on the ice on the Hudson River followed at Hoboken, Christmas Eve, that she had both heads, both eyes and both ears, has brought suit against the railroad company for $250,000 damages.

While clerks in the Brooklyn Post-office were sorting mail on Monday they found a small explosion immediately following by a blaze from one of the packages. It was followed by two other explosions of less force. A clerk rushed up to the counter on which was a burning package, threw it on the floor and smothered the flames. An examination of the package showed that it contained twenty-five combustible chemicals wrapped in a certain newspaper. There was no writing inside the package, but that portion of the address which was not destroyed showed that it was addressed to Brazilla Lump Sugar Co.

Bit a fire when broke out at McKeesport, Pa., in a cannon street Methodist church, a handsome structure, was totally consumed and two dwellings completely gutted. The fire department cannot work in a hose company and was unable to check the flames, and for a time which was threatened the entire foundation of a block on an adjoining street. The church was valued at $40,000 and the loss on the church. The above a setting are to the insured amount. The fire was set and labor were rescued from the burning dwellings by firemen. The Swedish women and babe are missing.

It is believed that four lives perished in the famous Total loss, $50,000, insured, $25,000.

When the arrest were seized they were taken to the Sheriff's office, where they have since been kept. The company, which is composed of the editors of the leading newspapers of Memphis, is reputedly entrenched in the State Legislature, and it is stated that the action of Judge Dubose is illegal and a usurpation of power.

WASHINGTON

It Washington it is reported on good authority that the President has been given by the Russian Minister assurances that the Russian Government will cooperate with this Government in the matter of protecting seal life in Behring Sea. The Russian Minister is credited with the assertion that his government would add four men-of-war to the fleet of six Russians now at Vladivostock.

POLITICAL.

Representative McKenna, of the Ninth District of California, has resigned his seat in Congress.

The latest names from Marshfield, Wis., that ex-Senator Spooner has been requested not to be a candidate for re-election because it is President Harrison's intention to appoint him upon the mission to arbitrate the Behring Sea controversy.

William D. Bynum, Congressman from Indiana, failed on the floor in national matters the other night at Pressed Bacon, Ill. Why do you think of Cleveland's chances for the Presidency? he was asked. "I think they are improving every day. I cannot express an opinion as to whether he will be nominated, for the condition of things is constantly changing. I can say however, that he is very strong in the West, and is constantly growing stronger. Indiana's delegation to the National Convention will probably cast a complimentary vote for him, provided Cleveland's strength is only the delegation against Cleveland after it is that he cannot be nominated. The people of Indiana—that is fully 90 per cent—are very strong for Cleveland as against any outside man.

FOREIGN.

Bitterness nothing in Prague Monday night, the crowds which had assembled contrary to government orders to celebrate the birth of John Commenius, the Bohemian reformer, and the fight which ensued with the police and gendarmes.

The President and his family always enter at the door of the Magic Lantern, tenant of the church fronts on Connecticut avenue, and the audience is charged to look. This is a little more recited. There are less gaping heads and the peculiar expression of always turns quickly in on N street and the family sitting on the entrance, as the third, do many other pew holders, whose seats are well at the end of the church.

WHERE THE PRESIDENT WORSHIPS.

There is usually a little crowd of people on the sidewalk to see the President who knows this habit of the President's, and the N street entrance is always crowded. They are, low, however, and respectful. The President is usually accompanied by his wife, sometimes by Mrs. Harrison's mother, Mrs. Scott, and by a private secretary. Mrs. Harrison's attendance is very irregular. The President's church, is a congregational, and he is a member of it. He is a very earnest evangelical, institutionist of the Presbyterian, and a very earnest Christian worker. His sermons are all carefully prepared, and are delivered in the strongest style, but are well delivered that the listener seldom thinks of the time they are being read. Dr. Hamlin does not follow the Bible, but he is a great and many other people of varied and official ability. He is his congregation to tone down his presentation of the Bible to suit them.

The income of the Church of the Covenant is a very handsome one. The pews bring a rental of from $25 to $60 a year, and the contributions are generous, and the morning collection runs from $100 to $200 a Sunday. Dr. Hamlin receives a salary of $6,000 a year, and the Sunday before last he received a gift of $1,000 in addition. It is stated that the church is free from debt, and that it has a surplus of $6,000 in the treasury. The church is a very fashionable one, and the President's family is not sorry that he is a member of it. It is stated that the President's family is not sorry that he is a member of it. It is stated that the President's family is not sorry that he is a member of it. It is stated that

Capt. J. P. Clark is again sailing the schooner Baber.

The scow Lottie Mason clears for Milwaukee to-day.

The schooner Florence Smith has received a new main-mast.

The tug Parkes was launched yesterday, but leaked so badly she has to be hauled out again.

The boats have had no difficulty in getting in and out, proving that we have a good eleven feet of water.

The schooner Fearless was towed in by the tug Martin last evening, the first vessel to arrive this spring.

The tug Higgie arrived at Benton Harbor last night with Allmendinger's pile driver, and starts home to-day.

J. E. Carter captains the Clara Hetle, with Tom Nowland as engineer. Ed. Guard is booked as engineer of the Gordon.

The schooner Peoria cleared Monday morning for Sheboygan, with lumber and slabs—the first vessel clearance of the season.

The tug Higgie, with the Allmendinger outfit, arrived at Manistee Friday afternoon safely, and laid there during the blow.

The fishing tug Ethel J., formerly owned by Connable & Sons, last week picked up two men seven or eight from Marquette on drifting ice.

Harbor Springs and Petoskey will have another line of steamers this season—Grimmond's Mackinac line. The steamer Atlantic, of that line, will stop there regularly during the season.

The Norwegian steamer Wergeland will leave Norway next week direct for Chicago, via Montreal, the St. Lawrence and the Welland canal. Her cargo will be herrings, bristlings, cod liver oil, etc. She will reach Chicago about May 10. This will be the first foreign boat to enter our inland harbors, and the event will be celebrated. The steamer will return with a cargo for Norway, taking it from Chicago.

Thursday was "first boat day" for Charlevoix. At 6 o'clock a. m., the Petoskey arrived from Chicago; at 10 o'clock the Priant came in from Petoskey, and at 7 p. m. the Lawrence came up the river. The latter returned from Beaver Harbor Friday afternoon, and lay here storm bound all day Saturday. The Lawrence will only run to East Jordan before and after the resort season.

Capt. Joe Swailes is making a new schooner out of the old Sea Gem. She has been raised aft, improving her sheer; has received new planking all above water, new frames and entire new lining and new decks. She will be one of the finest looking vessels of her tonnage afloat, and, as the sailors say, as "stiff as a church." Capt. Swailes can not only sail a vessel, but he can make one.

Bring your wheat to the Hiltebung Milling Company and receive the highest market price in cash.

COMMON COUNCIL.

At the council meeting Friday evening, the ordinance prescribing the hours for open saloons was repealed. The State law, fixing the hours from 5 a. m. to 9 p. m., now governs.

A petition was granted for a sidewalk on the south side of Hurlbut avenue, from State street to May st.

The bonds of Chalupka Bros., for their new saloon in the old Ferguson House, with Wm. Ferguson and Levi Lewis as sureties, was approved.

The committee on water-supply reported that a well could be sunk at following prices: 4 inch, $2 per foot; 6 inch, $2.50; 8 inch, $3.25.

Undine.

John Bartholomew has built a house and will move his family to Undine Tuesday.

School commenced in Dist. No. 3 Monday, with Miss Williams teacher, in the place of Miss Willis, resigned. Miss Willis has gone to Cheboygan to live with her sister, Mrs. Wylie.

The Tallapoosians got tired one at a time. Mrs. Adell Newland is coming north the 1st of May; in company with Mrs. Mattie Voorn, of Frankfort.

Additional Local.

—Chicago Herald: Active negotiations are in progress among the Boston owners for the purchase of the C. & W. M. by the Lake Erie and Western railroad, and every indication, it is said, is favorable to its consummation.

—Died, on the 4th, at his home in South Arm, Wm. E. Holben, aged 27 years. The deceased was the son of Elijah Holben, and was the first white child born on South Arm. He died from the effects of the grippe which he had fully two years ago, from which time he has steadily declined. Our old friend has our sympathy in this hour of bereavement.

—In the Horled murder case at Harbor Springs last week, the jury after being out fourteen hours, rendered a verdict of manslaughter against Carlsen, with a plea for the mercy of the court. The verdict gives general satisfaction. Brown, who was with Carlsen when the deed was committed, has gone crary and is in an asylum.

—Chas. Damour, a Canadian Frenchman, is a laborer in the employ of contractor Hanna, doing the C. & W. M. stone work here. He is a young man of unusual intelligence, and has traveled over nearly the entire globe. Last summer he was in Algeria, and bought from an Arab a few hundred pieces of coins, taken from the ruins of Carthage. The figures and characters upon some of them are yet quite distinct. Among them is a "Sol," an ancient Roman coin. They are unpoetionably fifteen centuries old.

—The railroad dock is badly demoralized. Its condition affords a striking illustration of the irresistible force of Pine Lake ice, in expansion, or moving before a March wind. Piles broken off or bent shoreward; large timber stringers torn from their places, and steel rails that connected shore with dock twisted like reeds. It will be an expensive job to repair it, and still more expensive to protect it from further damage. It will be necessary to sink a heavy crib on its front, which will probably be done this year.

—S. M. Moore, President of the Chicago Resort Association, was here two days last week. He came with the intention of putting a stone foundation under the club house and plastering the interior throughout, but the project was abandoned until the close of the resort season, when when these and other improvements will be made. Mr. Moore was at Grand Rapids on his way north, and called at General Manager Heald's office, from whom he learned that it is the intention of the company to arrange for special sleeping cars from Chicago to Charlevoix July 1st.

Norwood Notes.

Norwood residents, on any clear night, can see the pleasant gleam of four lighthouses—Old Mission, Cat Head, Fox Island, and the Beavers.

The L. A. S. gave a very pleasant social last Wednesday evening, which netted them $8.25, and will be applied on the church debt.

We hear from John Muirhead that he contemplates removing from Tallapoosa to Atlanta. We hope to see him back in Norwood.

Fred. Gillett, after much labor, has succeeded in getting his house moved into town and on his lot.

The Lawrence, with freight, made her first stop last week, and we are once more in connection with the "outside."

Billy Cowan is going to move. Don't say anything about it, tho'. Houses are much needed in this town at present.

Wm. Richardson expects his wife and daughter from Lowell, Mass., this week.

Miss Jennie Shaw arrived from Chicago Tuesday, and will for some time make her home with her aunt, Mrs. Van Pelt.

The funeral procession that conveyed the remains of Jerry Vettaw to his last resting place went thro' town on a keen trot. The driver of the hearse said, in excuse, that he was hungry and was afraid he would be late for dinner.

S. B. Chase, with a friend from Chicago, is here for a few days.

John Clements will move to Traverse City next week.

There is an unmistakable increase of real estate and commercial activity throughout Northern Michigan this spring, in consequence of the railroad extension.

Special Session of the Board of Supervisors.

A special meeting of the Board of Supervisors is called for next Wednesday, April 20, to arrange a uniform plan of assessment under the new mortgage law, and to dispose of such other business as may come before it.

Doctor Louise Dowse, who has just recovered from a long and dangerous illness left Petoskey Wednesday evening accompanied by Miss A. E. Seavey, who has been her nurse during her illness. They intended to make short a week's visit with Miss Seavey's friends at Harrington and Cooperville. Thursday evening's Grand Rapids Leader contains a sensational story to the effect that the next morning when Miss Dowse emerged from behind the curtains of the sleeping car section which she and her nurse occupied she was dressed as a man. The paper states that the couple took breakfast at the Morton, the doctor registering as C. L. Dowse, Leonardsville, N. Y.

As to Your Clothing
There is a new Clothing Store in town, and I am glad of it. I am aware that a good many were dissatisfied, thinking I had it all my own way, and was overcharging for my goods. I have always tried to please my customers, and to do so I have been adding to my stock until I have the largest stock of Clothing and Furnishing Goods that I have ever had in my store. All I ask is for you to give me a show, and don't forget to look over my stock before buying, and if I don't give you prices and goods to down the world, I won't expect your trade.

—The grand jury is solemnly deliberating at Boyne City, and has examined a large number of witnesses in the East Jordan lumber transaction. Monday Charlevoix came in for a share of the honors. Sheriff Hurd appeared with a pocket-full of subpenas, and a couple of loads of folks were hustled up to the county seat. It is understood they were wanted to testify in certain alleged cases of violations of the liquor law here; and a whisper is heard that certain friendly poker games are under investigation.

—Wm. L. Stigar, the "lone fisherman" of Antrim City, was in town Monday. Mr. Stigar takes exception to certain statements made in "memories" concerning the present status or the town of which he is "inveterate mayor." He claims the place is booming, and bids fair to surpass its ancient glory; that Atwood is green with envy. In addition to his own quite extensive fishing establishment, Dan Flanagin has a shingle mill and store, and ships quite extensively. Mr. Stigar lived in Charlevoix when there were but four houses. In 1867 he built Fox's dock, on Lake Michigan.

In the House the 5th—after the transaction of routine business, the river and harbor bill was taken up and after debate the bill passed. Also the army appropriation bill. In the Senate, after long discussion of the whole (30-40) days of Congress, the vote on the Tariff was taken on the bill. After a long debate the amendments made by the House were adjourned. In the Senate Mr. Voorhees introduced a bill to Mr. Fuller and agreed to, calling on the Secretary of the Treasury for a statement as to the amount of silver offered to the Government each month, since the passage of the act of July 14, 1890, by whom and what quantity of the amount of silver bullion, purchased under the act of July 14, 1890, has been coined, and in what proportion, number of days given the sellers by which to deliver the silver, the dates and the amounts of the Treasury appropriation bill, and the bill for the relief of the widow of Gen. Custer, which includes grant to accrued from the Honorable Department. The bill was read for the first time and laid before the House for the Vice-President and was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

TUESDAY evening an expedition of armed men passed through Cheyenne, Wyo., bound for Northern Uintah County. The party consisted of from fifty to sixty men, with arms, ammunition, and sufficient provisions, and the object is the extermination of the Indians known as Tabeguache Utes, living in Johnson County. The Utes have been Denver's wards for years, and outbreaks of mobbing incursions and exploitations have happened every year. The Uintah County contains a number of Mormon farmers, who have suffered severely by the depredations of "outlaws" for a number of years. Serious trouble commenced in Rosevelt, for last Adobe Twelve and Bonanza Joans, two of the "traitors," were assassinated in broad daylight, and the crime was charged by friends of the murderers to be the big cattle interests, and they were warned to leave the country. YOUNG MEN IN POLITICS

EXPERIENCED STATESMEN GIVE ADVICE.

Should the Youth of the Land Seek to Serve Their Country in an Official Way?—Acquire a Competence Before Entering the Fight For Fame.

WASHINGTON is the experience of the young man in politics is one of the best in the world. The best political economy, and it has been accompanied by an education to credit him with being a statesman. Is it good in any calculation? Shall young men seek for the future of the country? Are young men fitted for the work? Are young men equipped with the qualifications that are required? These questions were asked of a number of men who have been or are now engaged in the work of legislation, and the answers are given below. Ex-President Cleveland was asked to give his opinion on the question, and he responded as follows:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, Washington, D. C., Dec. 1, 1890.—My dear Sir: I have your letter of the 29th ult. I am very much pleased to have your opinion upon the question you propose to me, and I hope you will not think it presumptuous if I say that I have not the time to give it the consideration it deserves. I have always been a great admirer of young men who have taken up the business of politics as a profession, and I have always felt that the country was safe in their hands. I think that really there are more young men now in politics in proportion than there were in my time, and I think that really there are more than there have been at any time between my time and that of the Civil War. I regard this as a most favorable sign. I am very much in favor of young men who have taken the pains to equip themselves for the work they have undertaken. I believe that the experience of the last few years has been very favorable to young men who have taken an active part in the affairs of their country, but they will, I think, find many difficulties in the way of success in public life, if they do not take a thorough preparation for the work they have undertaken. I believe that a political career was the only one that would suit me, and I have always felt that my education, and my early training, and, at an early age, my study of the Constitution, and of the laws, made it a most fascinating study to me. I have never been sorry that I took up the study, and I have never been sorry that I made it my business to be a student of the Constitution and of the laws. I have never been sorry that I made it my business to be a student of the Constitution and of the laws. I have never been sorry that I made it my business to be a student of the Constitution and of the laws.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor.

CHARLEVOIX, APR. 20, 1892.

The Macedonian cry of the Democracy to the Prohibitionists, "Come and help us!" is once more heard in the land.

Kansas is paying off her farm mortgage indebtedness at over a million dollars a month. Yet the calamity-lites howl.

In a letter published lately, Mr. Grover Cleveland expresses doubts in regard to the wisdom of his renomination. D. B. Hill can scarcely be said to share Cleveland's doubts on this subject. Hill has none at all.

If all the money in the world were equally divided among civilized people, every person would get $6 as a share. But if all the money were so divided, it wouldn't be many months before it would again be distributed about as unequally as it is at present.

There was a good deal of talk in the latter part of November, 1890, of how the big Democratic majority would sit on Czar Reed when they got him back on the floor in the minority. There has not as yet been any Democrat developed who cared to sit on a volcano of the kind.

According to Mr. Whitelaw Reid Mr. Blaine has never really wanted the nomination for president since 1876. Since that time he has seen so much of the inside of that office. From assassination to nagging and hounding and persecution from office-seekers, that he thinks the position looks better from the outside than from the inside.

The national association of Democratic clubs has added a generous contribution to the humorous literature of the day in an address which it has just given to the country. It calls upon the friends of its party to organize to preserve the freedom of elections and to propagate the pure principles of the fathers of the republic!" This is a plain case of hilarious humor.

Senator Hill talked glibly with a Buffalo News reporter regarding the use result of the Rhode Island election. The senator said: "It is especially deplorable from the fact that Mr. Cleveland made such a forcible speech in Providence last week, and the figures show that in that city the Republicans obtained a larger majority than ever before in the last election." There is a depth of sarcasm in this that the Cleveland men can scarcely overlook.

This year the Republicans in the national house of representatives blocked the seeds of the free-silver juggernaut, but if another democratic victory is gained they will not again be able to do so. Let every workingman who wants a full dollar for his day's work—a dollar that will buy as much meat and bread and clothing as any man's dollar—take this fact home with him and paste it on the footboard of his bed, where he will see it every morning, as soon as his eyes open.

If the Democrats can get any comfort out of the returns from the recent election in Rhode Island, they are welcome to it. For four years there has been a steady decrease in the Democratic vote of the state. In 1889 the Democratic plurality in the state was 4,419; in 1890 it was 1,560; in 1891 it was 1,254; and now, in 1892, the Republicans have a majority on the popular vote of 229. The people of Rhode Island seem to be getting acquainted with the Democracy.

When the next free-trader attempts to give you his little song and dance about the duties on woolen goods and the horrors of the McKinley bill, just ask him how it is that Americans imported $20,000,000 less of woolen goods last year, and used $5,000,000 worth more than they did the year before. Don't be afraid to give anything away. No democrat will make use of that statement as a campaign document. That is not the kind of information the tariff smashers are hunting after.

On Tuesday, the 12th inst., at Steel City, the Eleventh District Republican convention, elected Thomas T. Bates, of Traverse City, and Geo. J. Stone, of Gratiot county, as delegates to the National Convention at Minneapolis. Dr. G. H. White, of Owosso, and B. L. Porkhill, of Isabella, were elected alternates. Wm. Mann of Boyne Falls, was elected the Charlevoix county member of the congressional committee. Frank H. Hussey, of this county, was elected one of the four alternates at large. His name was presented by Hon. Wm. Harris.

Miss Matilda McIntyre, of the Normal 3d class, will teach the spring term of school at Horton's Bay.

Cheboygan has 22,000,000 feet of lumber piled upon its docks and 12,000,000 feet of logs in the water.

Bonds aggregating $1,400 paid by the city of St. Ignace, have turned up out in Oregon, and now the authorities are asking Mr. W. J. Kenworthy, former city clerk to rise and explain.

A. T. Burnett, of Cross Village, made an assignment to Jas. H. Davis last week. He is one of the pioneer merchants of Emmet county, and one of the leading citizens of Cross Village.

The state board of control has ordered that the 150,000 acres of Agricultural college lands situated in Charlevoix, Antrim, Alpena and Arenac counties, be again placed in the market. They were withdrawn from the market a little over a year ago.

Petoskey Democrat: The steam yacht, Bella H. the property of Con Taggett, was yesterday taken upon a G. H. & I. log car to Charlon. From there it was taken to Walcott and launched in Bear Lake. Cook & Son gave it a though overhauling during the winter, putting in new boiler, engine, and repainting it throughout, and remodeling a portion of it.

Gill, Comable & Sons are erecting a two story building, 24x50, near their packing house on the beach, which will be used to manufacture their nets in. Theyhave been fishing near the Manitou Islands for some time, making Charlevoix their headquarters. In about a couple of weeks they will be netting near the Beaver Islands. They have put up 600 tons of ice on Lake Superior.

Boyne Falls News: We will wager that the farce of calling a grand jury for this county will only be equalled by that prodigate waste of money in the investigation of the court house fire. That was brought about by a certain brainless attorney and a self-styled detective, whose only object was to secure the two or three thousand dollars reward offered by the county.

Cheboygan Tribune; The Petoskey Democrat exults in the fact that Judge Hanford carried every county in this judicial district. When the fact is known that he had no opposition it will be seen how little it takes to make a Democratic editor happy. However, Democratic victories are so few and far between this year, we do not know as Bro. Hampton is much to blame for exulting in this instance.

The Northport and Traverse City mail is carried by a man who has the fingers of both hands frozen off, and his lower limbs frozen off to his knees. In this abbreviated condition, Sam Hooton handles the entire freight and mail bags of the route and alights with the ease of one not disabled. His condition was brought on by being caught on the Dakota prairies during a blizzard. He has leather caps over his knees and walks without even the aid of a cane.

A short time ago a party of Elk Rapids young ladies entertained their gentlemen friends in a novel manner. Invitations were issued requesting the young gentlemen to be present at a certain hour. On arriving they were stopped at the door and but one allowed to enter at a time. Upon being admitted the victim was blindfolded and taken to an inner room. Here he was circled around the room several times and then led before one of the girls who treated him with a neck from an electric battery, after which he was allowed to remove the bandage from his eyes and witness the discomfiture of those who followed him. After the initiation, the evening was given up to social enjoyment.

Detroit Free-Press: There is no enterprise which deserves more liberal and considerate treatment at the hands of the people than their local papers. Some of these in Michigan, pioneers in progress, established before there is a village sufficient to support them, are necessarily crude and for a time can only expect a scanty living. But the friendly hand should be extended to them, and those which are more favorably situated should be suitably sustained. The local merchant should use them freely, and demonstrating that advertising pays, should willingly pay a fair price for the returns he receives. The professional and business man, the artisan and the agriculturist should take them and should otherwise patronize them when they have need, and they will find the whole community quickened into new activity by the impulse which the live local paper will give.

A Little Girl's Experience In A Lighthouse.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Truscott are keepers of the Gov. Lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich., and are blessed with a daughter, four years old. Last April she was taken down with measles, followed by a severe cough and turning into a Fever. Doctors at home and at Detroit treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere "handful of bones." Then she tried Dr. King's New Discovery and after the use of two and a half bottles, was completely cured. They say Dr. King's New Discovery is worth its weight in gold yet you may get a trial bottle free at F. G. Hines & Co.'s Drug Store.

MEMORIES.

The Scribe Revives Recollections of the Past—Persons and Events.

Lieut. Walter Clifford, U. S. A., was a brother of the Newnans, of this place. In anti-bellum times, his name was Edward Walter Clifford Newnan, but in a moment of thoughtlessness, he enlisted as a private in a regular regiment under his two middle names. His courage and ability won him promotion, his warrants and commissions bearing the name of "Walter Clifford." Under this name he was married, at Sackett's Harbor, N. Y., and later, in this county, he had that name legalized in the probate court.

The scribe was one of a crowd that welcomed the propeller Fountain City from Buffalo, the first trip in the spring of 1859. Some one remarked that "Lieut. Clifford was aboard." Jack Ingalls observed: "Clifford is a Captain now." And so he was; and one of the first to land was Clifford. For three years he remained here "unassigned," and may be classed as a prominent figure in the pioneer history of Charlevoix. Clifford was, during those years, the life of our little social circle, and an enthusiastic believer in the future of Charlevoix. Indirectly, he went into mercantile business here, with his brother, W. C. Newnan, and built for a store the building on the south side of Round Lake, known now as the "Tip Miller place." His residence, on the south terrace, was afterward occupied by O. D. Wood, and lately burned.

* * *

Clifford was an original and striking character. His rapid promotion in the regular army from the ranks to a captaincy is sufficient evidence of his ability and courage, while his geniality and keen appreciation of humor was proverbial. He was never happier than when perpetrating a practical joke upon some one. Straight as an arrow, soldierly in every movement, courteous and kind, he was every inch an "officer and a gentleman;" but his propensity for fun asserted itself with astonishing frequency. "Corporal Tom Kelly" was his favorite victim, and many a prank did he play upon the old veteran. The scribe did not escape his penchant for deviltry, and yet remembers one cold November night, when he was locked from his cabin door and held prisoner on the street, coatless and shivering, to sing "Lariboard Watch" with him, release being granted after the fourth and last verse had awakened every resident of the street.

* * *

But the hour of Captain's pride received a shock one memorable Fourth of July. A celebration had been arranged, with Major Green as orator, and Captain Clifford as marshal. At nine o'clock on the morning of the 4th, the Captain, in the uniform of his rank, and astride about the only decent horse there was in the county, rode around to Dr. Cooper's, from whence the "column" was to move to the grove, where L. D. Bartholomew's residence now stands. Not even a drum healed that procession. Clifford led, and about a dozen of us followed him across the old wooden bridge. Clifford marshaled the crowd to the grove, and was seen no more that day. When next the scribe saw him his first words were—"If my colonel had seen me that day he would have had me court-martialed." And his laugh could have been heard across the harbor.

The crack of a rifle could be safely set down as Clifford shooting loons with his Winchester. He was a "dead shot," as the Indians in the White River campaign discovered, to their sorrow. He was an enthusiast in harbor improvement matters, and contributed freely on all occasions. Although possessing an enviable war record, and two brevets "for meritorious conduct in the field," he was never boastful. His order to report for duty assigned him as Indian Agent at Fort Berthold, Dakota, in which capacity he served for several years, winning warm commendation from his superiors, for his tact and courage, displayed in the management of a semi-hostile tribe.

* * *

Later, on his assignment to the 7th infantry, he was plunged into the Indian troubles preceding and succeeding the Custer massacre, and when Sitting Bull was rounded up, the Captain was detailed by Gen. Gibbon to bring in the chief and his band, which he did, accompanied only by a sergeant and interpreter. In the White River campaign he commanded a column sent in pursuit of the hostiles, and was once reported killed. He was proud of his profession and his flag, but sometimes fell into disfavor with his West Point superiors by his "mustang" recklessness. It is related that once, while officer of the day, he doffed his uniform and soundly thrashed an impudent private who had remarked to the Captain that his shoulder-straps were all that saved him from his wrath. But his straps were won in the smoke of battle, and even West Pointers respected him.

* * *

His last leave of absence was spent in Charlevoix, and the last evening here he spent at the residence of the scribe, relating the stirring incidents of his Indian campaigns. He left Charlevoix next day, never to return again. He had but just reached his western post, when he died suddenly from heart hiscase. Always popular with his men, his death was sincerely mourned by them; and in that fair-off deserted military post, a beautiful monument, erected by his company, marks the last bivouac of a brave soldier. The scribe, soon after, went personally to Gen. Sheridan, in Chicago, to arrange, if possible, for the removal of the remains to Charlevoix, but in the absence of any army regulation covering the case, it could not be accomplished. The Captain considered Charlevoix his home, and took a deep interest in its welfare.

MISSMACK.

Mortgage Tax.

To the Editor of the SENTINEL:

We notice that some of the Democratic papers take great satisfaction when recounting the laws passed by the late lamented Spaulding legislature in calling the attention of the "poor mossback" to the mortgage tax law. We fail to see any benefit that can be derived by the tax-payer from the law, except to the mortgagees.

Let us see how the law works. Rose's farm of eighty acres has been valued heretofore for assessing purposes at $800. And has paid the tax that amount. Doe holds a mortgage against Rose's land for $500. Now the farm will be assessed thus: Rose, valuation on 80 acres of land, $200; Doe, on mortgage claim, no assessable description, $500. Both assessments become a lien on the land.

Neither party dare pay the tax on the mortgage claim for thirty days after the tax-roll is placed in the collector's hands, thereby compelling the tax-payer to p

PRACTICAL QUESTIONS.

Question No. 15. The free traders say that when we have a protective tariff we have to pay so much more for what we need, and when this happens we have to work so much more for what we need, and when this happens we are poorer than we were before. Is this true? Answer—Decisively not.

This question furnishes about as good an illustration of the fallacies of free trade as could have been given. The "free trade" idea is that consumers pay the duty, in other words that the price of the imported article is increased by the duty. It is perhaps bound to be increased, for it goes are cheaper on account of lessened cost in machinery, but can there also be cheaper on account of the tariff? Inventions in machinery are the result of mechanical skill, the product of the genius of mechanics and men could say ever have had protection in the world before for the tariff. For true trade would have kept on without a protective tariff, for true trade, under a revenue tariff, there were no tariff taxes to pay, and yet the inventions, and improvements that there were issued 20,000 patents.

If our system of protection, that is protection has stimulated invention is wanted, we need only open the book of foreign article, the inventor of the improved machinery, and the great manufacturing works at Detroit established by the Scotch and Irish.

But for the passage of the McKinley bill we would have had no tin plate, for there would have been no incentive for the capital to have the tin plate factories. Further because of the protection

CURRENT MARINE NOTES.

The schooner Iver Lawson arrived at noon to-day.

Wm. Caughell, of Muskegon, is engineer on the tug Avery.

Frank Sears has bought out Wm. Sutton's half interest in the scow Lottie Mason.

The schooner Sea Gem has been launched, and is being put in shape for fitting out.

The schooner Geo. A. Marsh arrived to-day. A number of other vessels are on their way here.

Capt. Dick Williams has the tug Bob Stevenson out, and will tow logs with her, occasionly sneaking in a vessel.

The steamer Atlantic, of Grummond's line, will make regular trips between Detroit and Green Bay this season, stopping at Charlevoix both ways. She is expected here this week. Capt. Wilbur is the local agent.

Capt. Jacques Laframboise is at work raising the hull of the old wrecking tug Leviathan, which burnt at Cheboygan last fall. The intention is to recover the machinery of the burnt boat.

The Northern Michigan Line has chartered the new steamer Pilgrim to carry freight on their route until the Charlevoix comes out. She left Chicago Monday night, and is expected here to-night.

The steamer Clara Belle, of Connable & Sons' fishing fleet, has had her upper works remodeled into tug pattern, and otherwise overhauled and improved. She is now the best of the Connable fleet, and looks finely. Capt. Jim Carter sails her, and Tom Nowland is engineer.

Early Sunday morning the steamer Puritan arrived from Chicago, but was drawing 12 feet of water and could not get in, but on her way back Monday morning, she came in, drawing 11½ feet. Those who saw her say she is an elegant boat. She is lighted by electricity, and is beautifully furnished.

The fleet began arriving Thursday, and up to Sunday night the following vessels arrived: Lookout, Hattie Hutt, Rosa Belle, Evening Star, Duval, Sardinia, John Raber, Herschel. The most of them are loaded and gone. The Loookout and Hutt took lumber for the Charlevoix Lumber Co., the Raber loaded for Carpenter, while the rest were scattered about the lake and arm.

Capt. T. D. Smith, of the tug Martin, made a lucky hit yesterday afternoon. He was out after a tow, and saw a large sized schooner bearing toward him, by-the-wind. Thinking she was bound for Charlevoix, he rounded up alongside, and found it to be the American Union, commanded by his son-in-law, Capt. H. S. Stevens, formerly of this place. The vessel was grain-laden, bound from Chicago to Oswego, and happened to be on a tack which brought him near here. The tug accompanied the vessel for some time, Capt. Stevens going aboard.

From one end of the lakes to another the Knights of Labor and Vessel Owners' Associations have joined hands against the Chicago Seamen's Union. It is an alliance offensive and defensive and the knights are pledged to carry out the agreement. The contract was given out in all principal lake ports last week and it is binding upon the knights and vessel owners who have signed. The contract provides, first that wages shall never be less than $1.75 per day from April 1 to Sept. 1, on the basis of lumber freights from Menominee being $1.50. Wages are to be advanced one shilling to one shilling advance in freights. It is also provided that wages shall be advanced 25 cents during September and 50 cents for the remainder of the season. Trip wages are made optional from Nov. 1 to close. A grievance committee of five members from each side will pass upon all misunderstandings between owners and sailors. Owners expressly agree to ship none but Knights of Labor if such can be obtained. Sliding scales have been entered into at Milwaukee, Sheboygan, Manitowoc, Detroit, Cleveland and other points along the chain of lakes.

Religious Items.

Common Council.

At the council meeting on Friday night, the following officers were elected: Marshal, John Cooper; attorney, A. D. Cruickshank; health officer, Dr. Lefevre; president pro tem, Harry Nicholls; poundmaster, John Bell, Joseph Pappin and Horace Hull; dog poundmaster, John Cooper.

The saloon bonds of Chaloupka Bros., with A. Fox and Charles Chalonpka as sureties, were approved. Also those of A. Richards, with R. W. Tullock and John Bell as sureties.

J. A. Vote was re-elected engineer of the steam fire engine.

The water works committee made the following report, which was adopted:

That a six inch well be sunk to a depth of 300 feet, provided no adequate supply is struck before that depth is reached, and if at that depth no flowing supply is reached, that shallower wells be sunk to connect with deeper one, to give the necessary supply.

That the president and clerk be instructed to enter into a contract with John J. Mason, of Bay City, at prices he gives, provided no responsible person bids lower previous to May 1st, 1892.

Miss Dr. Dowse.

The friends of Miss Dr. Dowse, of Petoskey, who recently made herself conspicuous in Grand Rapids, say she was not of sound mind at the time, having not fully recovered from her serious illness. A lady of this place has received the following letter from an intimate friend of the Doctor:

"I know you have heard in regard to Dr. Dowse and would like to write and ask me concerning it, but fear I may think it intrusive. Not so. I am glad for all the interest and sympathy her friends manifest. Doctor had been a very sick person, the pain in her head at times being unendurable. She was very weak bodily and mentally. Her strange freak, even by Dr. Owen, is looked at as a result of her illness.

She is still with friends near Grand Rapids and very sick. Dr. Farnsworth told me to-night that by the symptons described, he should not be surprised if she never recovered. Soon as she realized what she had done the nervous shock completely prostrated her.

They try to keep it from me really how very sick she is. I should not be surprised at any time at a dispatch to go to her.

You are at liberty to let any of our friends read this."

—Wm. Vaughan, of Mancelona, is here visiting his brother Hugh.

—The Democratic county committee is in session here to-day, appointing delegates to the State and other conventions.

—Boyne City had a re-count of the vote on Supervisor this morning. Mr. Chase election was confirmed by one additional vote.

—C. R. Bellinger has painted his front brick-work, and is finishing off the upper story.

—The Highway Commissioner is figuring on putting new joist and deck on the bridge.

—Mrs. Annie Lobdell is expected here from Buffalo, and it is reported that Sam will soon follow her to remain.

NOTICE.

A special examination will be held at the school house at East Jordan, on Friday, April 29th, 1892, for the benefit of those who desire to secure teachers' third grade certificates.

HOUSES WITHOUT NAILS.

On the coast of Mosquitia, a recently created department of the republic of Honduras, there are few houses better than the watia of the Carib or the Waika Indian, says the New York Journal. The frame of the watia rests upon eight or more posts firmly set in the ground and are usually of Santa Maria wood, which resists decay.

In the short crotch at the top of the post lies the pole, five or six inches in diameter, which is the "plate" on which rests the long, slender rafters, which meet high above the ground. The rafters are held in place by light poles, which run around the ends and sides of the roof. Cross pieces serve to strengthen the whole.

Not a nail, not a bit of iron of any kind, is used in building this cottage, but the whole frame is held together by bajucos or tie-tie vines, which are found in unlimited quantities in every forest, and which, when green, can be used as easily as cords could be for lashing the pieces together. As they dry they shrink and bind the whole most firmly.

While the men are putting up the frame of the house the women are preparing the covering, which is made of a kind of leaf called "monkey tail." This they attach to strips some ten feet long and an inch wide, split from bamboo, the whole making a fringe about sixteen inches wide. Beginning at the lower ends of the rafters, those fringes are lashed firmly in rows extending entirely around the edge of the roof. The second row laps over the first and the third over the second, and so on, until the house is covered by a thatch which will turn the heaviest rain, and will last eight or ten years.

The walls of the house are made of the trunks of pauta palms, three or four inches in diameter. These are set upright and close together in a trench and tied with bajucos or poles running from post to post; or bamboos cut in pieces of suitable length are flattened into broad sheets or "crickerlies" and fastened upright to the frame, thus making a smooth, clean and attractive wall, through which the refreshing breezes draw steadily from morning until night.

The daughter of a New York judge has for more than two years made her home in such a watia, the walls being draped with muslin and the ceiling with pink mosquito bar in plats radiating from the center. The Japanese decorations harmonize with the walls and the shelves of bamboo, filled with choice books. Moreover, there is a floor of pine lumber, pictures on the wall, an easel in the corner and tables whereon baskets of oranges, mangoes, bananas and other luscious fruits in their season tempt the visitor.

Wanted Encouragement.

"Got any weddin' clo's here?" he asked of a polite clerk in a Woodward avenue clothing store, according to the Detroit Free Press.

"Plenty of them," replied the clerk with a winning little grin.

"How much are they?"

"All the way from $18 to $50."

"Good stuff in 'em and ginuine store clo's?"

"Nice enough for a millionaire to get married in. We make a specialty in that line."

"Let me look at a few, won't you?"

"Certainly. Walk right back this way, please."

After about a half hour's investigation he found something that he thought would suit.

"I'll be in next week, I s'pose, and take 'em," he said, moving off.

"Let me wrap them up for you now," urged the clerk.

The customer gave a nervous start.

"Geerussalem, mister," he exclaimed, "I hain't got the gal yit. I'm jist doing this to gimme sand in my craw so's I can pop."

As to Your Clothing

There is a new Clothing Store in town, and I am glad of it. I am aware that a good many were dissatisfied, thinking I had it all my own way, and was overcharging for my goods. I have always tried to please my customers, and to do so I have been adding to my stock until I have the largest stock of Clothing and Furnishing Goods that I have ever had in my store. All I ask is for you to give me a show, and don't forget to look over my stock before buying, and if I don't give you prices and goods to do wn the world, I won't expect your trade.

I would like to see Mr. Ward the candidate for Register of Deeds, and believe a large majority of the people would heartily support him. John Ward has been tried and not found wanting." All which the SENTINEL most heartily endorses. John Ward is "a tower of strength.

—John Baelstein, a German wood-chopper in the employ of the Pine Lake Iron Co., at Ironton, was taken violently insane one night last week, and seemed determined to set fire to something. Three men brought him down here Thursday, and when Mr. McLeod undertook to arrest him, he grew more violent, and tore a handful of whiskers from his honor's face. It took several men to secure him, and only after a desperate struggle was he shackled and locked up. Yesterday he was adjudged insane by the Judge of Probate, after an examination by Drs. Lefevre and Kanagy. The Northern Asylum is full, and the man will have to be kept in jail until there is a vacancy.

DR. TALMAGE'S SERMON.

HE SPEAKS OF THE TYPE OF CHRIST'S TRIUMPH.

The Entry into Jerusalem—A Lesson for Christ—Christ the Type of the True—The Glories of Self-Sacrifice—Lessons of the Church.

THE GLORIOUS ENTRY.

How was that possible? How could palm branches be cast in the way of Christ as he approached Jerusalem? There are scarcely any palm trees in Central Palestine. Here the one that was carefully guarded for many years as a curiosity has been given over the very road by which Christ approached Jerusalem, and there are plenty of other palm and fig trees, but no palm trees that I could see. The most probable that the climate has changed. The palm tree likes warmth, but by the far long shows of the tissues, which are built purpose for rain, the sand is not soon soft beneath the palm tree. Perhaps some palm tree may have been green. Olives were crowned with palms. The Dead Sea has on its banks the trunks of palm trees that floated down from some more fertile palm grove, and prepared from decay by the salt which they received from the Dead Sea.

But, gentlemen, spare the Bread Association, if the climate has changed, since the climate and bring to the soil forces from instead of rotting. Thousands and the Legislatures for Arbor Day, which proclaim the value of trees, and the carelessness which has destroyed them. Yes, we need to be thankful for the condition of our country on the strength of this text, which shows that million people have come to Jerusalem to adorn the way of their king with branches of palm trees. Let the most fertile and the most cultivated land be thankful for the trees, and be thankful for the fruit of trees, and, as and on over the hills and the valleys of the land, and the processions coming out from the towns in the morning and in the evening. He comes toward the city. There is a turn in the road, where Jerusalem and Bethlehem and Jericho and Jordan and Jerusalem, and the city and the road from Jerusalem, and the road from Jerusalem to the city of Christ, and the road from Jerusalem to the city of Christ, and the road from Jerusalem to the city of Christ

The Democratic newspapers are still talking as glibly as ever about "tariff reform," but not one of them dare attempt to give a clear and definite idea of what is meant by this cant phrase which they are bandying about so freely.

In sympathy with the decline in the price of foreign wools, caused by overproduction, American wool is cheaper than it was, but comparison shows that the tariff has kept the price of domestic wool about the level of foreign wool by nearly the full amount of the duty.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

The news from Wales is that there is complete paralysis of the tin plate trade in that country. And yet we are using as much tin plate as ever in the United States. Where does it come from if not from our own factories? The question is one that American free traders may answer as best they can.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Four out of every five Republicans it is safe to say would prefer John Tilich as the Republican candidate for governor before any other man who has thus far been prominently mentioned for the nomination. Mr. Rich is in every way capable and deserving. His great strength in the convention two years ago showed in what esteem he is held by the Republicans of the state. If nominated, Mr. Rich would be elected by a crowing majority.

The American Protective Tariff league is doing a splendid work in the completion of "the McKinley census," which shows in detail, the number of new manufacturing plants established and the old ones expanded under the tariff of 1890, giving in each case the location, name of firm, company or individual proprietor, with amount of capital invested, number of hands employed, hours of labor, wages paid, amount of output and character of product. The first installment of the census is now ready and it makes a formidable showing.

During June, 1891, just before the tin plate clause of the McKinley bill went into operation, there were enormous importations of tin plate to postpone the effect of the law on the tin plate importers as far as possible. The total value of the June importations showed an average of 2.55 cents a pound. In February last the importations were valued at an average of 2.03 cents a pound, a decline of 0.62 cents a pound. As the duty was raised on July 1 from 1 cent a pound to 2.2 cents a pound an increase of 1.2 cents the price has already declined more than one-half the increase in the duty. Why? Because the American supply of tin plate is increasing.—New York Press.

Our Democratic congress was bold enough to hit a sleep in the neck but when it came to the issue of injuring the democratic state of Virginia, Tennessee and Alabama by passing a bill for free iron, they wavered and finally decided that they had gone far enough for this session. Their record now stands about like this:

Ordered one new cruiser.

Refused soap to West Point cadets.

Flinked to the face of free silver coinage.

Hit a sheep in the neck.

Subsided.

It is said that the sun never sets on American soil. When it is 6 o'clock p. m. at Attoo, Island, Alaska, it is 10.36 a. m. the next day on the eastern coast of Maine.

The latest trick of Democratic "reformers" in Congress is to have free trade literature printed in the Congressional Record, the official paper of Congress, and thus have it circulated at the expense of congressmen as part of the Congressional Record. Congressman Burrows, of this state, called the attention of the house to the trick last Thursday, showing that by a concerted action of the "reformers" the whole of Henry George's book on "Protection and Free Trade" was being published in the Record as extracts, quoted in speeches never delivered in the house but printed under the rule of "leave to publish." The representatives implicated in this disgraceful procedure arose in their places and acknowledged their guilt, but tried to justify themselves by saying that they believed that they were performing public service in disseminating free trade literature in this manner. Their plan was to have half a dozen speeches made containing consecutive chapters of the book, have them printed in the Congressional Record and afterward have them printed in pamphlet form and bound for distribution as campaign documents, the entire print and distribution through the mail to be at the government's expense. The motive of Mr. Burrows to refer this matter to the committee on printing was laid upon the table by a strict party vote. This decision of the house, like the recent rulings of Speaker Crisp, will come back like a boomerang to touche its advocates.

Northern Michigan News.

Northern Michigan is booming and just now the sojourns of all eyes. The extension of the of the C. & W. M. Ry. through its rich valleys, and along its inland and navigable waterways, not only brings through it a flood of travel, but opens it to the operation of enterprise and capital, and discloses to the home-seeker that here exists every advantage for agriculture and salubrious climate. Amusement follows investigation of the boundless resources of the region. Its wealth of timber, clear streams, beautiful lakes; its fertile soil, and thriving towns, are attracting more than ever before, and, with the improved markets which railroad connection gives us, our favored section must make rapid strides in material advancement.

The Toll Cadets, of Petoskey, 32 strong, will have an equipment of rifles soon.

Traverse City business men have pledged $5,000 which will be used in boring for salt.

Mrs. E. K. Robinson, of Boyne Valley township, died at her home last week, aged 49 years.

A Frankfort man is willing to take oath that the severe storm there recently wafted him into the tree tops.

Up near Traverse City two boys have a cat nursing five young fox squirrels. The little things are thoroughly domestic.

Peace Ayers, of Mancelona, 82 years old, got a couple of scratches from a dog last week. Blood poisoning set in and he died.

Steps are being taken for the location of another large resort on Grand Traverse bay, near Traverse City. Options are already secured on the lands needed.

Steamer "River Queen" is nearly ready for the season's business. She will have two screws driven by two engines, and will ply between Holland and Big Rapids.

James Wardell, of Mancelona, lost a pocketbook containing $20 in bills and $4 in silver in the woods last winter. Recently he found the bills in a woodmouse's nest and the silver on the ground near by.

At Sutton's Bay the pupils of the school run a little store, the profits being devoted to the purchase of books for the school library. During the past winter they made enough to buy twenty three volumes.

The prospects are that when the M. & N. E. railroad is completed and trains are running to Traverse City there will be two boats running between Leland and the head of Carp Lake to connect with the road.

The busy little town of Slights, near Traverse City on the line of the G. R. & I. road, was entirely wiped out by fire Thursday. Loss, $25,000. This is the worst fire that region has experienced since the big fire at Fife Lake in 1884.

Pasha Baumgarden, a brother from the Cross Village convent, was taken to Harbor Springs lately and placed in the county jail, having recently become insane. He is perfectly harmless. He is afflicted with a peculiar hallucination. He will not wash himself nor comb his hair and says that he does not wish to interfere with nature. He entered the convent in 1863.

The Methodist ladies of Kalkaska, have been revelling in the Otsego fad and when they came to together to harass their husbands experience a Leader reporter was present and gave an entire page to them. The money was rounded up in a diapan. Here's a sample paragraph from the Leader's reporter: Miss Borden went first to bat, in base ball parlance, and gave a graphic description of the way in which she accepted say honorable work that came along, however disagreeable, and it ranged from cleaning out spittoons and sweeping out offices to peddling popcorn, and cast her mite—$0.25, in silver—jingling into the diapan.

There is but little room for doubt that John T. Rich will have the support of a liberal majority of the delegates to the Republican state convention. His nomination and election will follow as a matter of course.

Excursion Rates.

WE Have Been Too Busy to write an Advertisement.
We could not begin to say what we would in the small space we have. We will only call attention to a few of our specialties-
IN SEEDS
Our trade is growing and we handle only reliable kinds. Can supply you with seed oats, wheat, corn and all field and garden seeds.
Implements
The "South Bend chilled" and "Gale No. 110" lead the world in plows. The Black Diamond, and Gale Lever, are the best harrow.
The 'Champion' and "Farmer's Favorite' grain drills are "on top."
We went to headquarters and got the best wagons and buggies. Our "Cyclone" fanning mill will clean you up.
It is natural for a dealer to say his wares are the 'best' but we think we know what we were doing and found the BEST of everything before buying.
"Chew our string," and you can decide our pudding.

WHY DOES THIS BOY RUN?
He is Late for School. The old clock stopped and he didn't have a watch. He has been late before and will probably be suspended, and may grow up in ignorance the rest of his life. This might have been avoided if his parents had purchased one of Bellinger's clocks. He will give you your choice for $5.00.
He is also selling a first-class watch a perfect time-keeper, in nickle-silver cases for $6.00. Just receiving an elegant new stock of JEWELRY and SILVERWARE.

PROBATE NOTICE.
State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. The undersigned, Fred W. Mayne, Judge of Probate in the matter of the estate of Frederick Lewis, late of said county, deceased. On the 18th day of March, 1892, the administrator of said estate filed in said Probate Court his final account and petition for the allowance of the same, and for the assignment and distribution of the residue of said estate, and for the payment of the inheritance tax. It is ordered that Monday, the 25th day of April, 1892, at ten o'clock, a. m., be appointed for examining and allowing said account, and hearing said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the probate office in the village of Boyne City, in said county, and show cause why a license to sell the interest of said deceased in said estate should not be granted, and why said account should not be allowed, and why said petition should not be granted; and it is further ordered that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.
(A true copy.)

HE WANTED ADVICE.

He Didn't Know Exactly What to Do Under the Circumstances.

"I want an opinion," said a tall, gangling young man, with a rural hit and carpet sack, as he stole into a lawyer's office in the big Neave building, and perched on the edge of a chair, says the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

"Very well, sir; state the case," said the attorney, reaching for his index to hunt for "Justice."

"State the case? Well, I guess not! I want an opinion. The case ain't any of your business. If you've got any of your business, trot 'em out; or if you balk say so."

"But no attorney gives an opinion without hearing the case."

"The young man reddened musically. "Well—er—you see I'm rorter in presidhe when I come to gale!"

"Very natural in a handsome young fellow," encouraged the attorney.

"Yes, I suppose so. But I got engaged to Sairy Smithers last spring, and to get the also of her finger for an engagement ring, I borrowed the best one to take to the jewelry shop."

"Ah, very usual mode. That's all right."

"Yes, I spose so. But afore I got to the store I met Samanthy Giggings, ansr, foolin' pretty kittenish over Sairy. I hadn't gone a mile before I had proposed to Samanthy, and been accepted, too."

"So Miss Sarah sued you for a breach of promise? Bad case."

"Yes, I spose so. But that ain't is. You see I was so discombobulated that when it came to being accepted by Samanthy, dogged if I didn't give her Sairy's ring for an engagement ring put it on her finger."

"Temporary aberration will cover that all right."

"Yes, I spose so. But you see, Samanthy told Jinny Jones that we were engaged, and Jinny told Sary Smithers, and Sairy she gittine the shaks.

"And you want to sue her for damages very late sore case."

"Ok, I spose so. But that ain't is. You see, Sairy wanted her ring back and when I went to get it from Samanthy Giggins she had heard of me and Sairey bein' engaged first, had gone into the traces, taken up with Steve Fairfax, and give him my ring that is Sairy's ring—for a keepsake."

"Oh, yes; I see. You want an attachment to obtain possession of the goods unlawfully detained by Steve. That's easily fixed."

"Yes, I spose so. But that ain't is. She ain't got the ring, and still loves that monsin', and had his neck broke."

"Oh, well, that will be all right. Just serve the writ on his executors or administrators."

"Yes, I spose so. But that ain't is nuther. You see, it was so hot that week they had to bury Steve afore I got over to see em, and the ring was buried with him."

"Hum-ummm-ha! That makes a very different case."

"Yes, I spose so. But can't I dig Steve up some night and git the ring?"

"No, indeed! You will render yourself liable to state prison or violence from the family. Now can you hold the family responsible, except through the courts, for the loss of a ring that you gave her the ring without laying yourself liable to prosecution for stealing it from Miss Sarah Smithers, and the fact that she filled you down for it only adds to your

"Gosh! And I have to get her another ring like that one?"

"I guess you do."

"Well, that do settle it. I'm no millionaire. If I can't find a shop where I can get a ring with bleedinna gels sell for two bits I start for my brother Ike's in Texas in the morning. If I walk it."

And he slid for the elevator.

The Crow.

The early Germans believed that the crow was a very crafty observing creature and a sly spy—whence the saying "to scratch out crow's eyes"—meaning to overcome cunning by cunning. Hence the honest ladies who were given to sorcery and gallantry were accustomed to put the eyes of a crow into their witch cookery, this, it was believed, closing the eyes of the female to the irregularities of their wives.

Quantities of Coal.

More than 25 per cent of the freight of the country is coal. In 1887 the average price per ton at the mines was 76 cents for bituminous coal and $1.44 for anthracite. The demand for coal in all parts of the country is improving, and it is taking the place of wood, as fuel in remote sections.

NO BABY ACT FOR HIM.

A Wounded Brakeman Does Not Cry Yet Expect to Do So.

Pat Conley was rear brakeman on a Southern Ohio railroad train that broke in two while he was on duty, according to the Omaha Bee. He made for the brakes and had to keep the rear section from dashing into the forward part of the broken train. The brake chain snapped, he was thrown off the car before the wheels and in an instant both legs cut off below the knee and one hand severed.

What was left of him was hurried upon the engine to the station, fortunately very near at hand. The stumps were amputated and dressed without anesthetics, the call being too sudden and summons too hasty to procure them, if the man's life was to be saved at all. Pat never uttered a sound. Quivering with pain, white and perspiring with agony, he never so much as winced. Gangrene set in and the arm had to be taken off above the elbow. But the brakeman uttered never a moan.

Late one night, when he was still weak from the second operation, the hospital cot on which lie shattered form lay broken down. The patient fell to the floor, the bandage was loosened upon his leg, the ligatures burst, and but for the quick action of the nurse Pat Conley would have bled to death. When the surgeon arrived the brakeman's face was drawn with anguish. He was so weak from the loss of blood that it grew doubtful whether life could be coaxed back into his frame. Every thing that could be done was attended to at once.

Fainting, sick, racked with inexpressible torture, the poor fellow looked up at the surgeon, who was compelled to stoop to his pillow to catch the feeble words. In a whisper that was inaudible to the rest of the room Pat murmured: "Doc, how—long—might a fellow stand it to believe he hollers? I can't stand it—much longer without—cry!" but I don't—want to do the baby act."

"For God's sake, Pat," cried the doctor, "cry if you want to. It'll do you good."

The tears for the first time in all these days of pain Pat turned his thin face to the wall and we like a child.

The Hessian Fly Pests.

Dubois—This is a strange case, isn't it? A wealthy man is found dead in his room. There is no wound, no sign of poison and not the slightest evidence of disease anywhere about him. But there he sat in his chair stone cold, his head still holding the paper that he had been reading. I tell you it is one of the most mysterious things."

Bilgers—What did you say he was reading?

Dubois—One of the Sunday papers."

Bilgers—Oh, well, that explains the whole thing. It was a forty-page edition, probably, and when beginning at its hour failed.—Boston Post.

His Sweet Revenge.

"I am sorry, Mr. Percollum, but I shall not need your services after this week," said the editor of "The Monthly Sparkler.

"I was about to make the same remark, sir," replied Mr. Percollum. "My uncle has bought this magazine and given the management of things to me. You will need my services. Mr. Able, but I shall need you. How would an advance of $50 a month in your salary strike you?"

(The author of this beautiful and touching little story sends a copy with it explaining that he has tried it on several other papers and all have rejected it as too wildly absurd and improbable.—Chicago Tribune.

Who They Were.

A clergyman had arranged with another to take his place for a Sunday. The day arrived, and with it the Rev. S. C., when for his text he took:

"Who are these arrayed in white, and from whence came they?"

Just then two young ladies came in very late arrayed in white.

He was again repeating his text, when a man thought indeed someone might tell the clergyman and not have him ask twice, stood up and said:

"Oh, sir, they are the Misses White, from the top of the road."—Combs.

Long Was the Word.

"Might I inquire, asked the city editor in a soft sweet voice, "why you discharge this late Mr. Billiger as being six feet eight inches long? Is not the word tall good enough English for your fastidious taste?"

"Not in this case," answered the new reporter. "Billiger was paralyzed and hadn't stood on end for fifteen years. Scat!"—Indianapolis Journal.

JAILED FOR CONTEMPT.

AN INDIANA JUDGE AFTER AN OUTSPOKEN EDITOR.

A Colored University Burned—Michigan Republicans Will Nominate Governor Jackson from the Main Knocking—Being a Keenly Intellectual—Lionmaking Sheriff.

At Washington.

In the Senate the bills were passed as follows: Appropriating $2,000 for the Pendleton improvement; a concurrent resolution of Washington's birthday as a legal holiday; a joint resolution for a pedestal for the statue of Ethan Allen, to be placed in Statuary Hall, Capitol, Washington; the Quincy Pontoon Bridge Company to construct a pontoon bridge across the Mississippi at Quincy, Ill. To authorize the Grand Rapids Water and Electric Power Company of Grand Rapids, Mich., to construct a dam across the Grand River, and to grant the privileges of the use thereof of both the cities and towns with a population of 10,000 or less, and where the possible cross roads for the purpose of the improvement of navigation of the rivers, bounds of the Grand River Valley Railroad Company, to the Mason, Shoo of Sesquicentennial of Washington Johnson of Ohio, and Bowman owed publish in the House of Representatives, and distribute under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, 5,000 copies of the report of the Indian Commissioner entitled to have the House Congressional Record, which has been published practically in fact in the congressional Record. The remainder of the day was consumed in the consideration of the new apportionment bill.

Judge Taylor Is on His Dignity.

W. M. Taylor, editor of the Nevada Herald-Express, was sent to jail for 10 days and fined $100 by Judge Taylor, of the Circuit Court, on a charge of contempt for publishing a cartoon of him, which the court claimed to be libelous, besides ridicuing the judge. He is the Lincoln Republican and editorially a keen, lively, fearless, Democratic paper. The cartoon represented the judge as a jackass, with the Chicago Tribune and editorials in the Chicago Tribune, Indianapolis Journal, and Cincinnati Gazette, the Republican press of Indiana, and the Tribune correspondent of the Tribune, Times, Times-Herald and Inter-Ocean by the grand jury of investigation into the Congressional Record, Mr. Taylor's editorial comments on the Judge, being the cause of his being put in jail. He is well known on the county by the status of his paper, which is a vehicle, and has given private instructions to stop the livelyhood.

At Washington.

In the Senate the bills were passed as follows: Appropriating $2,000 for the Pendleton improvement; a concurrent resolution of Washington's birthday as a legal holiday; a joint resolution for a pedestal for the statue of Ethan Allen, to be placed in Statuary Hall, Capitol, Washington; the Quincy Pontoon Bridge Company to construct a pontoon bridge across the Mississippi at Quincy, Ill. To authorize the Grand Rapids Water and Electric Power Company of Grand Rapids, Mich., to construct a dam across the Grand River, and to grant the privileges of the use thereof of both the cities and towns with a population of 10,000 or less, and where the possible cross roads for the purpose of the improvement of navigation of the rivers, bounds of the Grand River Valley Railroad Company, to the Mason, Shoo of Sesquicentennial of Washington Johnson of Ohio, and Bowman owed publish in the House of Representatives, and distribute under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, 5,000 copies of the report of the Indian Commissioner entitled to have the House Congressional Record, which has been published practically in fact in the congressional Record. The remainder of the day was consumed in the consideration of the new apportionment bill.

Judge Taylor Is on His Dignity.

W. M. Taylor, editor of the Nevada Herald-Express, was sent to jail for 10 days and fined $100 by Judge Taylor, of the Circuit Court, on a charge of contempt for publishing a cartoon of him, which the court claimed to be libelous, besides ridicuing the judge. He is the Lincoln Republican and editorially a keen, lively, fearless, Democratic paper. The cartoon represented the judge as a jackass, with the Chicago Tribune and editorials in the Chicago Tribune, Indianapolis Journal, Cincinnati Gazette, the Republican press of Indiana, and the Tribune correspondent of the Tribune, Times, Times-Herald and Inter-Ocean by the grand jury of investigation into the Congressional Record, Mr. Taylor's editorial comments on the Judge, being the cause of his being put in jail. He is well known on the county by the status of his paper, which is a vehicle, and has given private instructions to stop the livelyhood.

Building Association Money Gone.

At Philadelphia, the shortage of $92,000 in the funds of the Beneficial Building and Loan Association has been discovered. James T. Clegg, the Secretary, in which leaves the shortage is said to have occurred, and he is reported, account for the deficit.

Will Court-martial Sheridan.

The twenty-eight Chinese Mandarins in the Minneapolis Convention will be court-martial Sheridan for his remarks in Algoe. After that twenty will go to President Harrison, and if he asks the question but the remainder will follow.

Fraudulent Government Bonds.

The Indian building of Clarke University for colored students, near Atlanta, Ga., was destroyed by fire. Loss $100,000.

BREVITIES.

HENRICH SAYTER, the Austrian sculptor, is dead.

THE professors will start a magazine called the Yale Review.

THE investitures of Egypt's new khedive were celebrated at Cairo.

BARNY HOCKETT, one of the soldiers captured at Kingfisher, Oklahoma, was shot and fatally killed by a gambler named Lewis.

WASHINGTON correspondence. Who is destined to succeed Mrs. Harrison as the lady of the land, which will it be Mrs. Wilkinson Morton, Mrs. Stanford, Mrs. Cleveland, Mrs. Blaine, Mrs. Lincoln, or Mrs. Logan? Mrs. Morton, Mrs. McKinley, or Mrs. Reed? Mrs. Cleveland, or Mrs. Gorman? Mrs. Whitney, or Mrs. Carlisle, or Miss Rebecca Pennoyer? Will they take a somersault, as some think they will. If not any of these women, will it be the wife of the dark horse, or will that make-land prove a wife, or not having a wife, will he want to wed anybody with a country estate? In this puzzle will supply a great public demand by asking the lady, the next president be in the field in United States Senator David B. Hill. But because he is in that lamentable condition, his case can be discussed at first. Mr. Hill comes to the White House unmarried, and he will have to gain experience that preceded Mr. Cleveland's wedding. It will not make the slightest difference whether or not Mr. Hill enters the White House with a bride company, he will be the only officer of society, and of course he will do just as the other gentlemen from New York did, and he will be called to himself a wife. That point settled, will the adjacent lady be a blonde or a brunette? Well, he need not lose sleep over that, for he will be able to choose one that would suit the taste and the good opinion of the million infinite equally. Mr. Hill's wife will be a lady of the assembly of fashion cautious will is the combination to be found in the executive Mansion. —Read the advertisement of the South Side Planing mill in this issue.

—About 1:30 Thursday morning, during a high south-west wind, an alarm of fire startled everybody almost out of their wits. It proved to be the Sweetland "sanitarium" house, formerly the Swallow residence, on the south terrace. The south wing was already enveloped in flames, so that all efforts to save the building were fruitless. The factory of the Enterprise Manufacturing Co., J. M. Clark's store, and a residence, caught fire from flying embers, and for some time it looked as if Charlevoix could not escape a serious conflagration below the terrace. But both engines and a bucket brigade prevented further spread. The house was unoccupied and uninsured. Cause of fire unknown.

Common Council.

At the Council meeting last Friday evening the village attorney was instructed to draft an ordinance regulating speed of steam-craft in the harbor channel, and covering other matters pertaining to the harbor.

The street commissioner was instructed to clean up the rubbish on the street through the park, at a cost not to exceed $20.

At a special meeting held on Monday evening it was ordered that bids for the construction of water works be received up to Tuesday, May 17, 1892, and the clerk was instructed to advertise the same in the New York Engineering News.

CURRENT MARINE NOTES.

On the 26th, the steamer Cummings, while on he way to Traverse, met with another accident which will lay her up for some time. A bar came loose in the cylinder, springing the follower, knocking out the cylinder head and smashing the engine generally. Captain Emery lowered a yawl and sent back to Torch Lake, a distance of about five miles, and telephoned to Traverse City for assistance. Captain young, with the Crescent, went to the rescue.

Last Saturday the editor of this paper received a package by mail from Elk Rapids. On opening it there was disclosed a tin tobacco box, containing a sparrow's nest. In the nest was a note from the sender, Capt. John Freer, of the schooner Badger. The note informed the editor that the bird's nest was found in the mizzen gaff-topsail, after towing out of Charlevoix harbor, where she loaded.

The steamer T. S. Faxton put in here yesterday on her way north from Traverse City, to repair some defect inher engine.

Capt. A. G. Aldrich will rail the propeller Ossifrage this season, between St. Joseph and Chicago. He is now in Bay City fitting out his boat, and is expected to stop here on his way to Chicago.

Nine vessels entered the past week, and 25 cleared.

Hayings from Hayes.

Charlie Struthers plowed five acres of ground in one and three-fourths days last week. We call that good work.

Everything is quiet in Hayes this week, no wives been knocked in the head with a club by their husbands; no daughters had their noses smashed all over their faces by their fathers; no sisters been knocked down by their big brothers for nearly a week. Things are getting monotonous. We hope the black-flies will soon put in an appearance, so that our minds may be kept occupied.

Sylvester Minier had a sale of his personal property on Tuesday. He will take up his residence in Petoskey.

M. Moore will occupy S. Minier's farm the coming summer.

The law will allow a man to fish for suckers now, except Sundays.

Several of our citizens are laid up with rheumatism, or spring fever, or some other malady; we have not had time to properly diagnose their cases.

Michael McDermott has built a fine substantial farm-house to take the place of the house burned some time ago.

Several of our Hayesites were in attendance at the tax-sales last Monday. Hayes has over $1,500 stored up in delinquent taxes.

Clarence Hewitt has been spending some time looking over Nebraska.

Boyne Falls News: The other day a careful estimate was made of the amount of money coming into this township in pensions yearly, and revealed the goodly sum of 3,204.00 or an average of about $9 per day.

F. P. Myers is vanishing. He has lost 24 pounds in two weeks. He says it has already become necessary to have his pants remodeled.

From Toledo comes an announcement of the purchase of the Toledo, Columbus & Cincinnati Railway by the big Four. The road runs through the main part of the Ohio oil field, is seventy-two miles long, and connects Toledo and Kenton. It is stated that the road will be extended into Michigan, or will assume intimate relations with the Toledo, Ann, Arbor, & Northern Michigan. The latter road has just purchased the Frankfort & Northeastern, twenty-three miles, connecting Copemish and Frankfort. From this point the company's vessels will transport loaded cars to Kewaunee.

Railroad Notes.

The freight house is completed, and Burns & Cameron, the contractors, are erecting two hand-car houses, one on each side of the river.

The gravel train is at work on the north end, and a force of about sixty men are putting the track into shape. The steel is being laid to Bay View, and as soon as connections are made with the G. R. & I., the bridge material will be brought down.

Mr. McLane was here Sunday and said the steel would be here from the south in two weeks. Five engines, two steam-shovels and the necessary force of men to operate them, are following the steel gang closely. As soon as the steel gang gets there, a steam-shovel will be put into the gravel pit on the Hull place, in Marion. Mr. McLane still asserts that the road will be ready for trains soon after June 1st.

War On the Fishing Grounds.

A Soo dispatch Monday to the Detroit papers says: "The A. Booth Packing Co., of Chicago, erected a dock at Whitefish Point the past winter, costing $10,000, and yesterday Andreas Brothers, fishermen at the Point, took possession, as the improvement turns out to be on their property and not on Booth's, as was thought. The tug Hunter arrived this morning and took a gang of men to the Point to recover possession for Booth. Andreas' agent loaded up another tug with men armed with Winchester rifles, and the tugs are racing for the Point. The Andreases notified Booth to remove the property, and say they will never give up possession as long as there is one of them left."

Additional Local.

—The grand jury adjourned last week Wednesday, subject to recall. There is little doubt that the returns in September, will furnish material for an unusually long term of court, and be a bonanza for the lawyers. But if Charlevoix county can be brought down to its normal status of moral rectitude, the call of the grand jury will have been justified.

—The question now agitating the minds of the city fathers, is that of the relative merits of iron and wood water-pipe. Mr. Wel's, representing the Michigan Pipe Co., of Bay City, is on the ground, ready to demonstrate that, all things considered the Wykoff wood pipe is best. He claims that it will stand more pressure, is less liable to freeze, and, in proof of purity of water conveyed by it, refers to the fact that the fish commissioners throughout the country use it. It can be supplied from 10 to 15 per cent. cheaper than iron. The water committee and the clerk are looking up the matter thoroughly.

—The mention by the SENTINEL of Robert A. Miller, of Eveline, in connection with the next nomination for Sheriff, was done without consultation with Mr. Miller, or anyone else, and with the understanding that there was no aggressive candidate in the field. Mr. Miller informs us that on no account would he accept the nomination. Friends of F. P. Myers, of Boyne Falls, say Frank is in the swim to stay. Mr. Myers has been a deputy sheriff under several administrations, and is now Under Sheriff. No person has ever yet intimated that he was not a capable and efficient officer. Frank is "training" for fighting trim, with success already apparent, and with his well known popularity throughout the county, there is little doubt that he will be nominated.

THE FIELD OF POLITICS.

TARIFF TREATED IN ALL ITS VARIOUS PHASES.

A Short Tariff Talk Which Makes Some Very Pointed Hits Before Industry Under the New Tariff—Protection Discussed.

100 Tariff Questions Answered.

Question No. 2. Cannot American make as good steel as foreign?

Butler. For example, the American guns used in the recent artillery tests proves far superior to the best guns of foreign make, while the armor plates made from American steel were demonstrated to be the best in the world after the British both sides for aide with English and other European plates.

Question No. 27. Why is it that American shipping has been declining during the period of protective tariff?

Of course the question refers to ships plying the foreign trade. It has declined because it has been the single one having all our tariffs imposed upon it, which has prevented our ships from competing with those of other countries, free of duty, employed in the coasting trade, has flourished and flourishes today equally with our other protected industries.

Question No. 28. If the duty is not added to the cost, wherein does the benefit accrue to the man who buys the goods?

Butler. In many instances it is found by comparing a unit of labor in foreign manufactories and labor in the protected industries, that the foreign labor is much cheaper.

Because there is so much better and cheaper labor in Europe than there is in America, the protective tariff is levied upon the importations, while the American labor is so much cheaper than the foreign labor that it is found that the American goods are sold at a much less price than the foreign goods, and yet the American goods are much better than the foreign goods. The

IN BATTLE.

Man Was Finally Cut a Man and Should Miss Down.

Here is a brigade of us in battle line across an old meadow; our right is left into other brigades. We have crept down the rail fence, gathered up old brush and sod and erected a breastwork. It is only a slight one, as the Massachusetts Fireman, but enough to shelter us while lying down.

A division of the enemy breaks cover half a mile away and comes marching down upon us. The field mice behind us open on their solid column, but they are not shocked. Under the smoke we can see the work of the shells, but they cannot halt the ranks of men. The grape and canister does awful execution, but it should be a dozen guns instead of one.

They are going to charge us. The officers cannot prevent that. Orders go along the line and we are waiting for every bullet, no matter if fired by a soldier with his eyes shut, must hit a foe. I select my man while he is not beyond range. I have eyes for other.

He is a tall, soldierly fellow, wearing the stripes of a sergeant. As he comes nearer I imagine that he is looking as fiercely at me as I am at him. I admire his coolness. He neither to the right nor to the left. The man on his right is hit and goes down, but he does not falter. I am going to kill that man! I have aim for my gun on the breastwork, and when the order comes to fire I must miss him. He is living his last minute on earth! We are calmly waiting until our valley shall prove a terrible flame of death. Now they come up the gaps and we can hear the yells of their officers as they make ready to charge.

My man is still opposite me. He seems to be looking at me and at no one else. I know the word is coming in a few seconds more and I aim at his chest. I could almost be sure of hitting him with a stone when we get the word to fire. There is a hill of flame—a billow of smoke—a crash, and 4,000 bullets are fired at the compact mass of advancing foes. Not one valley alone, though, worked horrible destruction, but another and another, until there was danger a living man to fire at.

The smoke drifts slowly away—the clouds and yellow corn are the billow beyond heaped with dead and wounded men. We advance our line. As we go forward I look for my victim. He is lying on his back, eyes half shut and fingers clutching at the grass. His gaiters drawn up his legs and straightens them out again, and I stand as I pass on. I have killed my man! My bullet alone struck him, saving that ghastly wound in his breast, and I am entitled to all his honors. Do I swing my cap and cheer? I point high out and expect to be congratulated? No! I have no cheers, and no station. I feel that I murdered him, war or no war, and that my ground-glass face will haunt me through all the years of my life.

SOLD (HIS DEVIL BOX.

Island Was Seized With an Epidemic.

The little Equator dropped us on the island, around the king's people to build and fit out our canoe, and sailed away, leaving us for a couple of months,—writes Andrew Lang in Longman's. One day Mr.—— was gone away to a devil-dance, where a gentleman was enraged in Sequoh-town with the assistance of this invalid's box. With British gold Mr.—— succeeded to get the box from the devil-man. First one sovereign was offered, then another, with the promise to allow the old gentleman to think twice before refusing, this sovereign did not move him, two shook him; at the third he began to smile and his eye to bulge out, and he crept, and a huge alliance of upon the assembled populace, at this there was the intensest excitement, and a dozen fellows were hauling the box, in very fear lest it might be away of its own accord. Then the king's slave arrived on the scene—dramatic and little wife anyone made a little speech. "What sort with your children's health, your wives, your mothers, peaceful old age, etc.—and completely shelved them all. Seven sovereigns—an incredible sum there, the value of a gun—failed to change the situation. And you'll let your children die for seven sovereigns?" said the king's sister. A little after returning to the start up came King Tautanoka—groaning and blowing—with a servant carrying the box.

"I like make present," said his Majesty serenely, and laid the box on the sand. "You like devil-box, more better you take him. Man plenty kill—kling no frail—kling make consult."

Mr.—— thereupon informed the king that as the man had made such a fine fight and had resisted temptation, it would be the handsome thing to give 5 sovereigns to the worthy workman.

This quite staggered the king. "No be said. All belong me, belong me, people, they all belong me; what belong people belong me. I like you too much; I make present."

"Let it ——instated.

"Perhaps more better," said the king reflectively.

"I suppose (supposed) you give money." I think you good man. You no give, all right, and no like give, all right, same."

And so 5 sovereigns were handed to the dazed devil-worker. On return to the island lately I heard the king would have bought the box for £50. Meanwhile had passed the group and hundreds had passed.

A Panic Experiment.

When I proposed to her I thought I could see in the last word, and this is why I think so:

"Tell me something my condition and proposals I said: "Will you have me?"

"Yes," she said.

"Thank you," said I.

"You're welcome," said she. "You are very kind to say so." I said.

"Not at all," she answered.

"I am very grateful," I added.

"Don't mention it," she said.

"I let go at that. I saw it was up.—New York Press.

AMONG THE LEPERS.

An American Captain's Noble Sacrifice of Himself at Molokai.

M. Souvin, writing to Le Correspondent of a visit made to the good Sisters of Kalaupapa, the successors of the martyr priest, Father Damien, of the Lazaretto of Molokai, Kingdom of Hawaii, says:

"We should not know what to do," said one of the sisters to me, without the exciting Mr. N.*

"Who is Mr. N?" said I to Father Vandelin, when he had left the sisters.

"You shall see for yourself," he replied, sullingly.

We stopped a moment at the door of a cottage similar to all the others, and as we disappeared a man of at least 40 years of age, tall, with a long, black beard, high forehead and intelligent glance, appeared in the shade. Notwithstanding his blue linen clothes, he had a fine appearance and distinguished manner. His hands were white.

"We have not seen you to-day, Mr. N.," said the priest.

"I have taken advantage of the holiday to rest. I have not left the house."

Mr. N employed correct English, but seemed little inclined to permit much investigation with regard to himself. As he replied with great brevity to the various questions I asked him I saw that he was not fond of such indiscreet interlocutors for which reason I made a sign to the priest to return to Kalawao.

"What do you think of Mr. N?" said my companion.

"He appears to be a very good man, but rather melancholy and silent. Is he a leper?"

"Certainly not. Mr. N. was a captain in the United States army; one day he left his quarters without saying a word to anybody, and scattered these islands and asked permission to visit the lazaretto. Upon arriving here he succeeded in having his service accepted. This was six years ago, and he does not think of leaving. He never speaks of his past life. He is profoundly religious and I presume that, wishing to retire from the world for some reason connected with his heart or conscience, he chose the only suicide that is allowed a Catholic—sacrificing his life for these poor unfortunates. The agent for the government has several times desired to appoint him to some administrative office, but he has always declined to accept it. He treats the sores of lepers in the last stages of the disease, buries the dead and assists the sisters in the boys' asylum. Here is also a Japanese, without ever relaxing his abnegation."

"Do you think," I said, "that he may be living under a slight delusion?"

"Not for a moment. He is a very serious, well-balanced man, who has imposed a duty upon himself. With regard to delusions, my dear sir, they pass very quickly from among us. We are too far from the world for the sacrifice to make much noise, and the sad monotony of the lazaretto is the most efficacious of antiseptics. Mr. N. shows, moreover, such modesty that even in Honolulu the greater number of people are ignorant of his existence."

I shall take care to respect the incognito of Mr. N., but from the innermost recesses of my soul I send him a tribute of my admiration.

NOTES FROM JAPAN.

Life in and Near Yokohama—Books and Art in the Mikado's Empire.

There are items of interest in every number of the Japanese Gazette, published in Yokohama, and one has to be found in a copy that has recently come to America.

On the front page there is an advertisement in which Hirop Bisp, who is probably a Chinaman, announces to Yokohama that he has just "established himself as a portrait painter, and keeps a large stock of cigars at lowest prices."

The Yokohama and Kobe Association of Golfers gives notice that its members belong to the Kaiyusha and are at the service of tourists.

There are many steamers advertised to run from Yokohama to Chinese and other ports.

In a fire at Anjer sixty houses of plaster and bamboo with slap roofs were burned and "became a seething mass."

When Count Itagaki arrived in Shinjo he had a triumphal reception and fifty men in armor welcomed him by shouting "Viva Banzai!"

The Jiji Shimpo gives the ages of the seventeen members of the Japanese privy council. Two of them are nearly 70 years old; four of them are over 60 and the others are about 50.

The home minister, Shinagawa, publishes the census of the cities and towns of the Japanese empire. The largest city in Japan is Tokyo, which has a population of 1,141,971, and the next largest is Osaka, the population of which is 476,309.

During the month of June there were 5,075 persons who took books from the Tokyo free library, nearly all of them in the Japanese and Chinese languages. Among the 24,657 volumes drawn 7,482 were books of history, biography and geography, 6,703 of law and politics, 6,602 of "literature and language," 5,877 of "natural philosophy, medicine and chemistry," 4,174 of "engineering, the arts and industries," 3,637 of "philosophy and education" and the rest were of a miscellaneous kind.

Sir Destined.

Young Woman—I met you to draw plans for a nice, cosy home. My husband's mother will live with us and I—

Architect—Madam it is impossible.

Young Woman—Why, don't you do such work?

Architect—Sir, madam; no architect has yet been able to draw plans for a house that is large enough for two women.—Judge.

Only One Necessary.

When the great musician Frederich Chopin was young his personal appearance was the last thing he thought of. In a letter sent to his parents from Vienna, in 1831, he says: "I have left a whisker only on the right cheek. They grow very well there, and there is really no occasion to have them on my left cheek. I always sit with the right one toward the audience."—Argonaut.

MOCKING-BIRD JOKES.

How One Bird Sent Twenty Crows to Flight.

No one who has watched the ways of birds can doubt that many of them have a keen sense of humor. They play jokes upon each other, perhaps even on us, and they "see the point" in an astonishing way. The catbird is a notable example of the feathered joker, and the mocking-bird is little, if any, behind him in this regard.

A droll exhibition of his love of fun was once given by a mocking-bird confined in a cage that was separated only by a network partition from a large flock of canaries. When first placed there he seemed to be struck dumb by his various neighbors, while the truth was he was simply biding his time.

Several days he remained silent, taking notes meanwhile, their song, and suddenly without, so far as is known, any preliminary rehearsal, burst out into the canary song in a loud, ringing tone that struck every little yellow throat speechless for a time.

After that it was his favorite amusement to keep quiet until half the 200 canaries were singing at the top of their voices, and then, without warning, break into the melee of music with their own trills and quavers, so nicely delivered as completely to eclipse them, and compel instant silence. Then he hopped precedingly back and forth on his perches flirting his tail and pecking his wings to show his relish of the consternation he had caused.

A similar exhibition was given by a free mocking-bird toward a playful bear, in the zoological garden. He his place on a tree almost directly above poesy, leaning far over, jerking his tail and uttering a peculiar sound like the "duff" of an excited hen. This is in fact, the birds warcry, and for the little fellow to delivery upon the hereditary enemy of his race, even in infancy, was very droll, and his amusement showed plainly that he intended it as a joke.

On one occasion in the South says Youth's Companion, a mocking-bird had attracted to a certain spot beyond the bars a crowd of enormous turkey-buzzards native to that part of the country, a hideous and disgusting to notice the unusual gathering. His singing ceased, he flew across the yard and perched on the fence close by where they were busily engaged in the food.

For moments he stood motionless, looking at them, then the bolder of the loud war-cry, dropped down among them.

Consternation fell upon the spectators. Would he be killed? They started to go to his assistance; when they were amazed to see the buzzards instantly rise in a panic—twenty of them. The mocking-bird knew them better than we did and undoubted intended a joke for the next moment he was perched upon the fence and was nonchalantly his wings, wriggling his little body and fitting his wings in a suggestive way.

SEA-GULLS.

Dumb Creatures Helping Each Other to Food.

"One bitterly cold day," said the old traveler to a Seattle Morning Journal representative "we—the pilots and I—were lying at the wharf at Astoria. The river was frozen; we were waiting for the ice to break. Astoria, on the Columbia, is a pretty place with its fine store houses and its scattered houses straying up the hills among the trees; but it does not offer many attractions to the tourist at any time. When it is buried in snow it is dreary. The long days were unbroken by any event. The pilots seemed to be getting frozen. We were partaking with them. That is how we got to watching the crows. The poor things were so cold that they seemed to be in a condition to yield to the temptation to lower absolute.

"They could not get the food out of the water, but stood on the blocks of ice and looked down into the waves at the drifting bits of refuse. The poor black creatures could not stand still on the ice or their feet would have frozen fast, so they shifted from one leg to another in a manner which gave them the appearance of dancing.

"All about, with acres as and flapping of wings, flew a flock of gulls, snatching the food from the water and fighting like fiends. Soon a peculiarity was noticed. A few of the gulls were sitting between the black birds and the white ones. For awhile the white birds pressed and dances surrounding them, picking up bits of food and dispelling them within reach of their starving neighbors. And we all looked and wondered to see dumb creatures helping each other in their sore distress and pondered on the language of these creatures we arrogantly call dumb."

AN OLD-TIME PRIZE FIGHT.

The Way a Fued Began and the Way It Was Ended.

At a log-rolling on the farm of James Lowry, near Milton, Wayne county, Ind., in 1851, the dinner was over and something of a domestic nature had offended Horton Furgason, who, as he passed out into the yard, told Lowry he was going to whip him. He attempted to carry out his threat, but friends interfered, says the Indianapolis News. A Mr. Wallace took the matter up, saying to Furgason: "I will settle this with you on election day."

This was announced and the event looked forward to with more interest than the election, and drew a big crowd in anticipation of the important "settle."

Both men were well known in the vicinity. Furgason was a heavy-set, raw-boned man, larger than his opponent, who was an active, wiry man, but altogether they were well matched. Furgason kept out of sight that election day, avoided his rival and did not want to fight. A horse race was on hand near by, outside the town, during the afternoon of that memorable day, where the crowd had collected, and Furgason got his horse out to go home. In the meantime word was sent out to Wallace at the races that Furgason was seen in town. Wallace started for town and the crowd followed, stringing out nearly a quarter of a mile in length, with a shout and hurrah, on a run, like so many wild animals.

Wallace had the seeming advantage of a preponderance of friends on hand. The advance of the rush met Furgason as he was coming out of an alley on horseback, and Wallace cried out that he "as thereto settle that matter." Furgason sat off on the opposite side of the horse and made an effort to mount on the other side, but Wallace struck and knocked him down before he could get his coat off.

The crowd soon swalled to immense proportions. A ring was cleared and at it they went like savage brutes for over an hour without cessation. Furgason was getting the best of the battle when friends separated them. There was scarcely a rag of clothing left on either of them, and both men were so bruised and bloody as to hardly resemble human beings.

Thus ended a fued that was increasing in bitterness and, as the result, so savage in its nature, was to disgust sensible people. It had the effect of breaking up, in a great measure, the boisterous and lawless holidays of settling troubles on election day by public exhibitions of prowess and skill in the unmanly art.

A READY WIT.

The Persecution of Which Saved the Life of Anne Stacey.

A famous proof of Maury's readiness was his retort on the brutal Parisian who wished to hound him through the streets of Paris with the shout "A bottle! A bottle!" "Why, what is lacteous?" "And when you have hung one a lacteous will you see any better?" A retort which saved his life. On one occasion, a wretch, armed with a cleaver, pursued him. Maury recognized him, saying: "Where is that Abbe Maury? I will beat him to my mass in bits!" The ruse stopped, and seizing his pistols, cried: "You but you shall come and serve me there, son, here are my crosts" (the two vessels for the water and the wine). he populace applauded heartily, and he walked off triumphant. In the tribune he exhibited the most undaunted composure, in spite of the vehement interruptions of his adversaries, the yells and cries of those who popularity-hunters designate "our masters." "Obtain me a hearing" he shouted to Mirabeau across the tempestuous sea of tumult. "If you believe you can really triumph over my principles, for in the midst of this tumult you triumph only over my lungs." Mirabeau, shaking his fist at him, vociferated: "Thou is the greatest rogue I know!" "Oh, M. de Mirabeau," replied Maury, "you forget yourself!"

Copper Coins.

Of other metals which are used in coinage in civilized lands copper is used to quite an extent in Africa. The cassiterite Nian-Nian especially like the English bar copper of cruciform diameter. Expeditions to the territory of the Niam-Niam therefore, have generally been forced to include several copper-miths and these must, as soon as the Niam-Niam land is reached, applied themselves to transforming the bars of copper into rings of size varying from that of a bracelet to that of a tiny finger ring. And so great is the love of the Niam-Niam for these baubles that even one of the small copper finger rings (value less than a cent) would purchase a fat chicken at Dem.

It Stopped the Wedding Ceremony.

At Menasha, Wis., John Arnold, 28 years of age, was arrested as he was about to be married to Mrs. Wanner, a widow of 40 years. Several months ago Arnold was arrested for shooting at Mrs. Wanner's son, who objected to his mother's marriage. Arnold was released and sentenced to one year's imprisonment. The Supreme Court appeal to the Supreme Court he was released. The Supreme Court sustained the verdict of the lower court, and the papers were returned to Judge Hinkley, a warrant was issued for Arnold's rearrest, and he was served just as the marriage ceremony was about to take place at Mrs. Wanner's home. The ceremony must necessarily be postponed for a year while Arnold serves out his sentence.

CHARLEVOIX, MAY 4, 1892.

The announcement that last week 300 men began work at rolling steel sheets and converting them into bright tin at a new manufactory in Baltimore. Here is one single establishment employing 300 men that would not have had this work to do only for the McKinley bill. These tin plate manufacturies are hard nuts for the free trade liars to crack.

Henry Waterson, editor of the Louisville Courier Journal, in an interview in Washington last week gave it as his opinion that neither Cleveland or Hill would be the nominee of the Democratic National convention. He says faction fighting has gone too far and the candidate must be Carlisle, Russell, Slocum, Boies, Palmer, Morrison, or some other good man of that sort. He iterates his belief in Hill's loyalty in 1888 and in the tariff reform soundness of both Cleveland and Gorman, the straddle platform of 1888 being as much due to the former as the latter.

The Democratic majority in the house having refused to expunge from the Congressional Record Henry George's book on free trade, which was published by a concerted action of the reformers for the purpose of circulating at the expense of the people an free trade campaign literature, the Republicans have concluded that what is "sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander" and have given the House notice that under "the leave to publish rule" they propose using copious extracts favoring protection and have them published in the record so that they can be circulated at the expense of the people, the same as Democratic, free trade literature.

Free trade makes the rich richer and the poor poorer. Capital which is rich buys labor which is poor. Free trade reduces the price of labor, the only commodity the poor have to sell. Free trade also reduces the demand for labor and likewise reduce the price of this only staple article which is the source of the poor man's income. These conditions tend to make the poor man poorer. Free trade increases the purchasing power of capital. A given amount of capital will buy more labor, and than the rich are richer. There is clear as the noon-day sun, and within the comprehension of any intelligent voter, and it cannot be controverted except by sheer sophistry.

Those free-trade gentleman who advise us much the financial policy of England, and express the measure of their contempt for their own government by continually screeching about extravagant expenditure and a billion dollars congress, may be interested to know that the expenditures ordered by the British parliament last year were $495,300,000. For two years this expenditure would reach as nearly to a billion dollars as did that of the on. gress of the U. S. Now consider the fact that Great Britian has a population of 35,000,000 while the U. S have 64,090,000 people, and it will be seen G. B. expenditures per capital were almost double those of our country. Where does the howl come in.

David B. Hill, of New York, may not be much of a Senator, but he is an influential member of the lower house. In the face of the recommendation of the majority of the committee on elections, he forced the Democrats in the House lately to seat Stockwell, the member from Hill's home district. Neither the proof of fraud that sent him there; nor the uselessness of increasing the overwhelming Democratic majority now in the House, stood any show against Hill's orders and his vote in favor of free silver on the Arnoux funding bill the other day. It was Cleveland and sound money against Hill and a 70 cent dollar. The cheap politician and the cheap dollar captured the Democratic party in the house, three to one. Detroit Journal:

Railroad Notes.

Division Engineer Northrup drove through from Central Lake to Petoskey Saturday and Sunday inspecting the work.

The steel at the Petoskey end has all been laid, and connection will be made with the G. R. & I.

The steel gang is at Ellsworth, and coming north rapidly, followed closely by the ballasters. It is expected that the construction train will be at the gravel pit in the Hull farm inside of ten days.

Mr. Seymour, the C. & W. M. bridge man, was down from Ellsworth yesterday, and reported that the "lower stak hole" had tumbled in again.

A representative of the Detroit Iron & Bridge Works was here yesterday looking over the ground, and says the material for the railroad bridge will be here next week.

The following are the particulars of the Booth-Endress trouble at Whitefish Point: Whitefish Point is one of the best whitefishing grounds on Lake Superior, if not the best. It is where the shore line of the lake takes its rectangular turn to the westward. The fishing rights there have been controlled for years by Endress & Sons and Emil and Richard Endress. They retained them for a time and by judicious and careful management have made a snug fortune. Their fishery is a large one, employing a number of men, many nets and quite a fleet of both steam and sail boats and tugs. All of these seemed to have attracted the A. Booth Packing Company of Chicago, a powerful corporation which controls the oyster product of America and has fisheries from Astoria to Ketligoche and Sitka to Mobile. Among other fisheries they have on at Manistique, from whence they have diverted the productiveness of Whitefish Point with a longing eye. Desire with the Booth people means action, and the manager at Manistique, Capt. E.D. Coffey, investigated the Whitefish Point situation. He found that G. W. Booth controlled what seemed to be valuable fishing rights adjoining the Endress grounds. These were speedily purchased and preparations begun, consuming the major portion of last winter, looking toward active fishing operations at the earliest moment. This spring les boom, boarding houses, warehouses, other necessary buildings and a dock were constructed, entailing an expenditure of several thousand pollars. Endress Brothers viewed these preparations with a proper degree of equanimity. But all the time they worked they were thinking. And they reached a partial conclusion that the Booth people were off their base and were building on the Endress land. Finally the Booth men encroached upon a line that was cut out four feet wide. This looked like inexcusable and wilful trespass to the Endress people, and to make doubly sure they obtained County Surveyor Brown to run out their lines and sought the legal advice of J. W. McMahon, a Soo attorney. The surveyor's work confirmed their judgment, and the legal advice was to take possession of the new improvements. This was acted upon and it is reported here that the buildings and dock are being torn down and that lively times are prevailing up there. An ice gorge above prevents the obtaining of news by water and the only communication is a private-telephone line from Eckerman, a railroad station thirty miles west of Soo. The Booth people will probably not fish much at Whitefish Point this season but they can only be temporarily restrained, which, however, means a loss of many thousands of dollars. They have ordered the finest fishing tugs on the lakes for their business there and also contemplate the erection of a refrigerator. Moreover they look forward to making the Soo their headquarters instead of Manistique. How the Endress attack will rebut their policy is uncertain, but one thing is not to be doubted, whatever they hereafter do it will be upon their own land. The war among the rival fishermen is the sensation of the hour and will not end to-day.

Curious Home Dances.

Flossy it was who invented the dances, which seemed to us such wonderful performances. We danced every evening in the great parlor, our mother playing for us on the piano. There was the Macbeth dance, in which Flossy figured as Lady Macbeth. With a dagger in her hand she crept and rushed and pounced and swooped about in a most terrifying manner, always graceful as a fairy. A sofa pillow played the part of Duncan, and had a very hard time of it. The Julius Cæsar dance was so less tragic, we all took part in it, and stabbed right and left with sticks of kindling wood.

One got the curling stick and was happy, for it was the next thing to the dagger, which no one but Flossy could have. Then there was the dance of the "Four Seasons," which had four figures. In spring we sowed, in summer we reaped; in autumn we hunted the deer; and in winter there was much jingling of bells. The hunting figure was most exciting. It was performed with "knives" (kindling wood), as Flossy thought them more romantic than guns; they were laid close to the side, with point projecting, and in this way we moved with a quick chassé step, which coupled with a savage frown, was supposed to be peculiarly deadly.—St. Nicholas.

Quite a Surprise.

Mr. and Mrs. Peterby have been married several years. They live very peacefully, as is usual with married folks, but occasionally have a falling out. A few days ago she put on her things and said she was going to her mother. When Mr. Peterby asked the reason she said:

"That was not a nice way to treat me. To-day was my birthday, and you did not surprise me with a present. Every year since we have known each other you have given me a present on my birthday, and I counted on your doing it this time."

"But, my dear, where would there have been any surprise if I had made you a present? I didn't give you anything on purpose, so that you might enjoy a surprise. I knew you wanted to be surprised, so I determined to surprise you even at the risk of your getting angry.—Texas Siftings.

CHAPTER XII.

"Mr Beverly, have you ever stairs, and he wants to see you. Have what you have done?"

"No, your fault, Jeannette. You wake so suddenly."

"Well, who thought you was going to jump up in that style. You might have killed the kitten, besides putting a crease spot on the carpet, and breaking the saucer."

"Yes, I know; but I didn't, you see. Which one is it?"

"It belongs to the best set, and there isn't one left."

"Well, I don't mean the saucer. I'm talking about the man. Is it—

"Mr. Beverly. The Mr. Beverly, if that's what you mean. Don't jump again now, and I hope you'll soon be going down to, or I'm afraid you'll be carried with his walking. He don't seem also to be spry still.

"Angry," thought Mary, dashing some cold water on her face, "I wonder if I had not better change this dress. Jane made it so well."

This change of costume was a longer one than she had at first anticipated for, many wrong limbs got into so many wrong ways, that little time and patience were required to set them right, and after the dress was finally accomplished her face was sorted and made as to receive another application of cold water.

"I hope he is angry," she said under her breath, as she reached the upper hall and heard the rapid walking that Jeannette had rather disparaged, for he is angry, he may say something which I can answer back, and then I may get rid of this dishing sort of feeling.

"Good morning," she said, aloud, though in a slightly unusually subdued tone, as she came to a stand-still in the doorway. "Have you waited long?"

"Yes—no—just long enough to come and see him. Will you come in, Mary, and sit down?"

"I was pleased, Mary took possession of a chair near the door, and Jack retained his standing position in the center of the room.

"I received your grandfather's letter," he continued after a second, during which her face had turned various colors under his glance, "and your message—that is, the message in the letter was a thing to add to it, Mary."

The blush, more than the words, gave Mary a touch a spasm of contrition that she felt almost vehemently.

"I do want you to forgive me, if you can," said.

The next second Jack had lifted her burning face to his light.

"I believe I can," he returned in a tender tone, "though you have been so cruelly hard upon me. How could you acknowledge—what, Mary?"

"Why, I—I—I—

COUNSEL FOR BOTH SIDES.

Was 1776 General Would Pay His Debts When Sued.

General Rawlins W. Judson, a veteran of the war of 1812, died not long ago in Harrisburg, a pretty little city on Lawrence river, in New York state. The general, whom everybody and everybody knew the general, the Hotel Clement says. During the last years of his life he was haunted by the ghost of many a whisky bill he had seen and conquered, and the weight of these many victories bowed his shoulders.

By profession General Judson was a lawyer and a time-stained and worm-eaten shingle at the foot of twenty steep and narrow stairs showed that an office above belonged to.

HOSPITIS W. JUDSON,
ATTORNEY.

The old man drew a pension every quarter, and when it was gone he got trusted. The "trust" reached such proportions that the government money for two centuries would just about wipe it out. Most of his creditors rather liked the old man, and moving that the accounts would be too long be blotted out never to be opened, continued to trust, but Jackson Boyd, who had a bill of fifteen life a burden to the general. He was a gentleman, but always just little short of cash. Nate would amount that bill and change his luck from fishing off the dock or would on him when looking at the bottle in a grocery store.

One day the general met Boyd on the street, and before the well-worn bill could be found, said:

"Nate, there's just one way that can be collected, for I've decided to pay it unless I have to."

"Didn't think that," said the Scotchman.

"Do you really want to know?"

"Yes."

"Well, you see, one, I always pay judgment against me."

Boyd, within the hour, found a horse of the peace and brought suit for his $5. The summons was served on the old warrior came to court, his arms laden with dust-covered volumes. He stated his case and showed his bill.

"Do you acknowledge this?" asked the justice.

"Yes, sir."

"Then why should not a judgment be rendered against you?"

"Because I have a bill against Mr. Boyd."

Boyd was surprised and declared that he owed nothing.

"I have a bill for professional services a bill for $5."

"I don't owe it," said Boyd.

"Didn't you ask me how to collect his bill against myself?"

"Yes."

And didn't I tell you to sue, and didn't you follow my advice? I am sure, sir, as your lawyer to collect that bill and charge you $5 for advice and counsel. A barrister, sir, doesn't ask his opinion for nothing," and Judson presented a written statement of the account.

The general left the courtroom with in his pocket for a suit brought against himself.

A MODERN CHILDE HAROLD.

His Came to Leave He Was No Longer Misunderstood.

Harold was a strange child. He was quite understood him. Harold was alone. Sometimes he inwardly sighed. But he kept silent. Harold was young, if he did visit his aunt Brooklyn once a week. He biked a time. One day Harold's mother went into the nursery. Harold was sitting in one corner. She saw at once that he was in one of his moods. He held in one hand a hammer and in the other a drug store gum drop. She knew at the sight that she must deal gently with him. Harold saw this. He did not look.

"Harold" said his mother, softly, "I want to speak to you seriously for a moment. You know this is the hour your practice lesson. For three days, sir, the piano has been silent. Your father and I, Harold, are proud of your talent, and hope some day that you will be a great musician. But, Harold, dear, do you think this is fair to us?"

Harold's mother was no slouch herself by the latter strong point on his sympathies.

For a moment Harold was motionless. He was tense, and taking his hammer gently by the arm, he led her to the window. There was a man on the opposite corner. Harold pointed to the man to his mother. The man had a double-barreled gun in his hand. Harold's mother took in the situation at a glance. Then Harold said that he was no longer misunderstood.—Puck's Library.

A Wrong That Needs Righting.

It only five states has a mother any legitimate legal right to the custody of her children. These are Iowa, Nebraska, Oregon and Washington, where both parents have equal rights to the matter. In other states a mother has no control over her children, not even if driven from home by her husband's cruelty, unless she applies to the court for the custody. In fact, in words the father by right of fatherhood, can claim his child, but motherhood is not enough, the court must be appealed to before the mother has an absolute right to her children. This injustice is so tangled with legal technicalities that it would be unwieldy to unravel the snarl, but since it has been done in five states it can be done in others.

A Rare Collection.

An old China is becoming a well-developed fad, collectors will be interested to know that Mrs. Ollie Jones, of Stoneitwater, Ma., has one of the finest collections of old china in New England. In her collection is a Washington plate, one of the thirteen manufactured by an eccentric manufacturer, who refused to pursue his calling any longer, and thus it has been brought by collectors that once of the thirteen were in existence. Her Chinese tea sets were brought over in the vessels whose tea was thrown overboard in Boston harbor early in the Revolutionary war. The sideboard is a family island and was once owned by Captain Means, an officer of the revolutionary war. When Lafayette visited Portland after his reception, his dress out to Stroudwater and visited his old friend, Captain Means who was served with toddy from his sideboard.

UNLUCKIEST MAN EVER BORN.

How an Unfinished Sentence Kept Him a Bachelor.

"Talk about luck," said the weary-eyed man with the long face to a New York Tribune reporter. "I'm the unluckiest man that ever was born. No other man in the world ever had such hard luck. I was born on Friday, on the 13th day of the month, and I was the thirteenth child in our family. On my thirteenth birthday I fell out of a three-story window and knocked out all my teeth. Afterward I had all the maladies known to man. I went out West and had to walk back. My father left me some houses and they burned down. I bought a share in a schooner and she sank on the very next trip. I went to work on a railroad, and in three days was knocked 400 feet in a collision and was in a hospital for six months."

"You do seem to have had your share of hard luck," said a sympathizer.

"Luck!" said the man. "Why, look at me when I wanted to get married. I fell in love with a girl, and I thought she loved me. I went to her, and I said: Elizabeth, were you ever married?"

"Why, no," she said blushing. "You know that."

"Well, Elizabeth," I said, "you are a good girl, and since no man—"

"Then she burst out crying and ran out of the room so that I could not finish what I wanted to say."

"Well, that was a funny way to ask a woman to marry you," said the man of sympathy.

"What way?"

"Telling her that you were sorry that no man would have her."

"No man have her?" said the unlucky man. "I never said a word about that. I was going to say since no man could be good enough for her I hoped she would forgive my failings. Wasn't that hard luck that she wouldn't let me finish my sentence?"

"Why didn't you go back and explain it?"

"Well," said the unlucky man, sorrowfully, "I was bound to get married, so I went and proposed to Sarah Smith, and she took me.

"At any rate you got married."

"Married? Not a bit of it. Sarah Smith had made that mistake and she got cool and broke the engagement."

"Then you had your chance to go back to your first love?"

"I did."

"Didn't you get her?"

"Got her? No! I tell you, man, I'm the unluckiest being alive. I went back and asked her plunkout to marry me, and found that after she heard about my engagement to Sarah Smith she'd gone and promised to marry a fellow which been begging her to marry him for five years."

"Why didn't you wait then to see if she didn't break her engagement?"

"Thing is man, I did."

"Did you go back again."

"No, I didn't."

"Why not?"

"Because I'd changed my mind about getting married. Didn't I tell you I was the unluckiest man in the world."

WOMAN'S QUICK WIT.

Diplomatically Sacrificed One Thousand Dollars to Save Twenty Thousand.

A woman's quick wit saved her, when she has the courage to act upon it, a valuable aid in an emergency. Some years ago, in the days when "road agents" abounded in Montana, a woman was traveling by coach to join her husband, according to the Saturday Evening Post. One day a passenger said to her, "I have one thousand dollars in my pocket-book, and feel uneasy about the road agents. Would you mind sewing it in your dress and returning it to me at the end of your journey? If the highwaymen do so, I'm sure they will be less likely to search you than me." She acceded to his request and the money in her dress and the stage drove on without meeting a road agent until towards evening. Then the shout "Throw up your hands!" was heard. The driver promptly pulled up, as four men on horseback, with masked faces, appeared in the road and covered him with their pistols. Two of the highwaymen then rode to each side of the coach and ordered the passengers to give up their arms which they did promptly. "Now shell out!" said the robbers. The passengers handed out their pocket-books—even the man who added the woman's aid gave up a few dollars. He was congratulating himself upon his caution, when he heard the woman say in a quiet way, "I have a thousand dollars; but I suppose I must give it up." Shifting the action to the word, she handed over the man's roll of greenbacks.

The robbers rode away, and then the man gave expression to his feelings by abusing the lady and accusing her of betraying his trust from sheer fright. She smiled mysteriously. "You will see, sir, but I can't explain now." At the end of the journey she asked him to stay all night at her house, and said that her husband would be glad to see him. "Yes, ma'am, I will come to your house," he answered, in the tone of an injured man; "it's the least you can do, ma'am, seeing that you have left me without a cent in the world." At the lady's house he was treated as a distinguished guest, but neither host nor hostess offered him one word of explanation that night, and he went to bed a sad, irritated man. The next morning as he entered the dining room, the host shook hands with him and said, "Here are your thousand dollars, sir, which my wife ventured to borrow in an emergency. She had twenty thousand dollars which she was bringing to me concealed in her dress, and the thought by giving at once the thousand dollars intrusted to her by you she would save herself from being searched by the robbers. Her quick wit saved me from a heavy loss and I am much obliged to you for the use of the forced loan." Breakfast was a far more cheerful meal to the man than the supper of the night before.

And all Northern Points.

A—Chicago Summer Resort and Depot.

CHARLEVOIX—on the C. & W. M. Railway, at the foot of Pine Lake, embracing a country about 10 miles, navigable for steamers a length of more than 6 miles. Population, 1,200. Has five church organizations, village hall, fine school building, five large waterworks, two large steam, flouring-mill and manufacturing factories. Is situated on Lake Michigan, with good harbor. Pine lake, embracing four-fifths of the shoreline, connects with Lake Michigan, and our steamer handles here eighteen on the Detroit and Green Bay route. Several great steamers touch at our docks daily. Summer hotels and cottages are in demand. Lumber enough remains to keep our mills busy for years. Our farmers find a ready market for all their products at home. Farmers find available sites for manufacturing, with water and railroad facilities. Timber enough to hardwood, ash, hemlock and cedar timber, and facilities for manufacturing unexcelled. Excellent agricultural lands in adjacent region. Rail and water routes Charlevoix the natural center of a vast territory.

HOW HE SAVED HIMSELF.

He Remembered What Another Man Said He Would Do.

Presence of mind and bravery in the face of peril was being discussed in the office of W. E. Bissenhank general manager of the Maple Leaf route, one morning, according to the Chicago Herald. The capsizing of a yacht of the idea from the day before suggested the theme.

After listening to the thrilling experiences which each of the group present related—and somehow on the occasion of an exceptional accident people are prone to talk thrillingly of what they have passed through themselves—Mr. Bissenhank told a story. He did not need to call our fancy to his aid to give interest to his tale. He had been a central figure in the well remembered burning of the Newhall hotel in Milwaukee, being the only person above the second floor who did not perish in the terrible fire.

Referring to the manner in which he escaped, he said that he owed his life to the fact that a man who was burned to ashes in the flames the same night told him how he would try to save his life in case of fire.

"This is how it was, boys," said Mr. Bissenhank. "I got orders from my road to meet one of our agents, named Ware, who was to be transferred from Detroit to Milwaukee, and introduce him to our patrons in the Cream city. I joined him here in Chicago and we went to Milwaukee together. It was the day of the Newhall hotel fire. On the trip, by a strange coincidence, we became talking about fires. Ware, I think, brought up the topic. Yes, it was Ware, who started him on the subject was the fact that he had witnessed a big fire in the Western Union building at Detroit, at which five lives were lost. Isn't it curious, Bissenhank, how Ware so much how common sense will desert a man in the hour of danger. I saw the big fire in Detroit yesterday. A number of operators could be seen standing helplessly and in will despair at the windows of the Western Union building. There was a perfect network of iron work outside, and they kept fast of them, by jumping on which they might have saved their lives. But they didn't jump and they perished. What is puzzling is that the telegraph wires are a means of escape for the poor fellows did not occur to them even after it was too late.

"As accounting for these things, Ware," said I to the Detroit man, and then we talked about other matters.

"I got to evening Ware arriving at Milwaukee, we went to hear Minnie Palmer in My Sweetheart—I remember it was the night before yesterday. About 11 o'clock we reached the Newhall and were conducted to adjoining room. When I was awakened by the heat and stifling smoke I pulled Ware out of bed and the poor fellow dashed out in his night shirt toward the staircase. I never saw him again, alive I rushed to one of the windows of my room and stood for full half an hour, gasping for breath. Right under the window was a network of telegraph wires. Poor Ware's story of the Detroit incident flashed across my mind. I jumped toward the wires, and all that I remember is that I grabbed them. They told me afterward that I hung on for about a minute and then fell to the pavement below. I was put among the dead in the old bank across from the hotel, but I revived, and two months later I was able to talk.

"Ware inspired me with the idea that saved my life, and while he had the same opportunity as I had he did not avail himself of it.

"It is idle, boys, to talk of what one would be sure to do under given circumstances. There is no accounting for what a man will do when he is looking into the jaws of death."

The story was listened thoughtful and agreed that it was so.

Its Own Cop.

A Western congressman, who has been in Washington for a month, has been "doing" society with more or less success. The other night he was talking to a lady who has aspirations, and she turned the conversation into the grain yield in various states. After mixing her subject with the Washington politics, society and other items of interest, she suddenly inquired:

"How large is your corn?"

"Well," he said, beginning and with much confusion. "Since I've been in Washington, wearing tight boots and walking on hard pavements, it's about as big as a walnut and getting bigger every day."

Now he's wondering what made the lady look so peculiar and change the subject.—Detroit Free Press.

A LIVING WALL.

How the Ancients Employed Elephants in Battle.

Alexander was one of the first famous kings of history to tell of fighting against an elephant host, says a writer in St. Nicholas. His invading army had reached the River Hydaspes, and as the warriors looked across they beheld the opposing army of King Porus, who had not only chariots and an enormous army, but "the huge creatures called elephants." These great animals which stood on the further river bank, shrieking and trumpeting, filled the soldiers of Alexander with terror and dismay.

The two armies watched each other for several days; then Alexander succeeded in crossing the river, and the two forces drew up in line of battle. The Indian king placed his elephants in the front rank, 100 feet apart, thinking in this way so to frighten the horses of the foe that the entire army would be put to flight. Between the elephants were foot-soldiers, and at the ends of the line were large elephants bearing strong towers filled with armed men. King Porus himself was born upon an elephant of unusual height, probably as large as the famous "Jumbo."

When King Alexander, who was a very brave and valiant man, saw the orderly foe he said: "All last I have met with a danger worthy of the greatness of my soul." Evidently he had due respect for the elephant soldiers that opposed him.

Alexander moved his forces to the attack, and poured in a shower of arrows and spears. The elephants stood like a stone, wall, trampling the foot-soldiers beneath their heavy feet, seizing them in their trunks and delivering them to the soldiers upon their backs, or tossing them high in the air. The elephants were evidently the main hope of King Porus, and perceiving this Alexander directed his armies to shy spears and knives to attack them.

These arrows chopped at the elephants feet and tender trunks until in the great creatures turned and began a rapid retreat, was disastrous to the foot soldiers of their own side, as they trampled upon them, and in their own flight moved them down like grain. Alexander followed close after the elephants upon his wounded charger and finally the battle was lost to Porus because of the elephants unmanageable. King Porus being wounded during the hurried retreat, desired to alight. The driver ordered the elephants to kneel to allow some of the elephants having been accustomed to obey in concert, did the same, and Alexander fell upon them and gained a complete victory.

It is said that elephants which survived this fatal battle were covered for years by the Indians and honored much as were the veterans of our war. In an ancient book, called "Laws of Ionics of Tyana," he is said to have written a town of India an elephant which the people held in the greatest respect as having been owned by King Porus. It was performed with sweet music and decked with garlands white upon its tusks were rings of gold inscribed with these words: "Alexander son of Jupiter, dedicates Alex to the Sun." The elephant Ajax, according to Apollonius, was the old war elephant of Porus in his battle with Alexander and had survived and lived in honorable idleness for 350 years.

While Alexander defeated the elephant corps of Porus he saw they were good fighters and created the office of Elephantarch, or Chief of Elephants, and afterward visiting monarchs found him surrounded by the large elephants magnificently harnessed.

On the Judge's Side.

A story is told of a well-known judge who is noted for his fairness for overweighing his jurors in his charge to them, his own opinions in regard to the merits of the case. In one case he had done so with great plainness, but to his amazement, the jury rendered verdict for the defendant coming to an agreement. The judge inquired of the foreman and learned that one juror was holding out against the other eleven.

He sent for the jury at once, and stating to the jurors that he had plainly instructed how the case ought to be decided, said he understood that one juror was holding out against the other eleven. He proceeded to rebuke the juror sharply. The obstinate juror was a nervous little man, and as soon as the judge was done he rose and said: "Your honor, may I say a word?" "Yes, sir," said the indignant judge. "What have you to say?" "Well, what I wanted to say is I am not quite below on your side."—Detroit News.

The Sweet Clerk Thought He Was After A Wife—Wanting Cigars.

Jumping at conclusions often results in embarrassments to all concerned, remarks the Youth's Companion. Perhaps nobody knows this better than a certain clerk in a Cambridge law office. He was sitting at his desk writing busily, one afternoon when the door opened and an old negro put in his head.

"Say, Cap'n, don't yoh want yoh windows washed? Boy looks kinder like dey needs it."

"No, not to-day; they were washed only last week."

"Bettah let me touch 'em up a leetle, Cap'n."

"No, no," replied the clerk, going on with his work; "come around in a couple of weeks."

With another intimation that the windows were susceptible of considerable improvement, the anxious caller withdrew.

But the window-washers were evidently on in full force that day, for five minutes had not elapsed when the door opened again and another sable head popped in.

"Good afternoon, boss."

"Well, what now?"

"Want yoh windows cleaned?"

"No, not to-day."

"Do, lif cheap, boss; bettah immediatah, yes."

"No; just engaged a man."

Three minutes later the door opened again and a dark face surmounted by a rusty hat popped in.

"Well," asked the clerk looking hastily up, "I suppose you want to wash windows, too, don't you?"

It was difficult to tell whose surprise was the greater—the newcomer's or the clerk's—when the member of

DOWN IN THE CELLAR.

A SAN FRANCISCO MUSICIAN BADLY RATTLED.

A Villainous Graveyard Insurance Scheme Inaugurated in Nebraska—Strange and Fearful Fortune Telling—Whitney Asks Jail Without Bail, Indiana Household.

He Was Determined to "Stage Fright."

SAMUEL FLEISHMAN, a young pianist and composer of San Francisco, Cal., who has been recently removed from a quiet room in the music centers of the continent, was to have greeted his friends in a concert Thursday night. A large and fashionable audience assembled in Metropolitan Hall. Fleishman was in the dressing-room attired in a sealskin tail wearing diamond studs. The scheme passed and no pianist Fleishman at Woodock the audience was dismissed, being informed that the young virtuoso had gone with a accident. His friends, fearing the worst, hastened everywhere for Fleishman, and beginning to fear he had gone to jail or had been dragged in knocked down by a street car, or perhaps worse, detectives took up the case and soon found the missing man in the cellar at No. 723 Bryan street, his parents. He was dusty and stupid, and had a lump on his forehead. There was a flute in his hand, which he was trying to play. He could give no account of his singular conduct. A physician called his trouble vertigo, but it was really an extraordinary case of stage fright, which had for the moment deprived him of his reason.

Villainous Insurance of Invalids.

JUDGEMENT in two important cases was given in the Lambton County, at Ottawa, Ont. The local agent of the Mutual Reserve Life Fund Association of New York issued policies to the value of $10,000 on two emigrant and invalid people at Ottawa for pecuniary considerations. The policies upon these were brought in the form of persons who had died in Canada, and applications to recover their claims. J. B. Wills, Vice President of the association, went on from New York and conducted the case. Ample evidence of the agent's villainy was adduced and the court gave judgment in favor of the association.

GRANT'S FAME IN STONE

NEW YORK HAS BEGUN ITS MONUMENT.

Ceremonies of a Most Elaborate and Imposing Character—President Harrison Wields the Golden Trowel—Appearance of the Completed Monument.

Honor to Gen. Grant.

The corner-stone of the nation's monument to Gen. U. S. Grant in Riverside Park, New York, was laid with becoming ceremonies. The weather was all that could be desired, a cloudless sky, bright sunshine, tempered by a moderate breeze blowing over the Hudson River, found before the time fixed for the dedication ceremonies the immense crowd stand, expected to close proximity to where the monument will stand and pretty surroundings the corner-stone, began to fill with citizens who had been invited and had tickets, and by noon it was computed that there were fully eight or nine thousand persons on the stand. The large number of ladies, in their bright and showy spring costumes, heightened the already brilliant spectacle. The crowded stand, with about three thousand veterans of the G. A. R. formed in line around and about the two improvised stands, with the dense throng of people behind, with the Hudson River and the Palisades for a background, with the Grant tomb, which has so much of interest for the American people, in the distance, the collection of the remainder, of the Grand Army of the Republic, the Sons of Veterans, the Sons of the American Revolution, the Union Veteran Legion, the Knights of Honor, the Knights of Pythias, the Knights of Labor, the Knights of Pythias, the Knights of Labor, the Knights of Pythias, the Knights of Lab

CHARLEVOIX, MAY 11, 1892.

It is stated as gospel truth that out in the newly opened territories you can go to sleep at night under the blanket on the open prairie and wake up in the morning in a room in a first class hotel and find yourself in the middle of a lively and bustling city. They rush things out there.

The St. Louis Republic says: "In 1880 there were in Missouri 102 woolen mills, in 1890 only forty-six." People are aware of the fact that business was dying out in Missouri. In 1880 Pennsylvania had 654 woolen mills; in 1890 771. Massachusetts had 271 woolen mills; in 1890, in 1890 she had 356. The party which is dominant in Missouri is opposed to industrial progress."

If the apologists for the Miner electoral infamy imagine that the people are deceived to any great extent by their pettifogging sophistry, they are greatly in error. The Miner scheme bears on its face the evidence of trickery as plainly as the ordinary criminal bears on its face the evidence. It is a simple, shallow piece of political chicanery, for which even the Democratic party should be heartily ashamed.

President Harrison spoke wisely when he said: One fool is enough for me. The gates of Castle Garden swing inward. And they do not swing outward to any American laborer seeking a better country than this. These men who have toiled at wages in other lands that barely sustained life, and spurred on by avenues of promise to them or their children, know the good land of hope as well as the swallows know the land of summer."

Free-Trade Democrats are, or profess to be, strongly in favor of excluding "Chinese cheap labor" from this country. Yet these same gentlemen are in favor of admitting to our markets, free of duty, the products of Chinese and other cheap labor. Importations of pauper goods are vastly more injurious to American labor than are importations of cheap laborers. Yet the Democratic party insists in the same breath upon the free importation of the one and the exclusion of the other. What a jewel in consistency.

An exchange thus defines a mossback: A mossback gentle reader, is a cross between the fifth century and Diogenes. He is found in fossilized form in nearly every city in the U. S. and still lives. He raises his rents, detests a boom, loves to have other people bear all the taxes, hates to have a new enterprise, despises anything which smacks of progress, and won't help a newspaper boom its own town. There are several varieties of mossback, but none are much use to a town. The species are as drones to a hive of bees, and like the industrious bee, the live business men should avoid these drones and patronize those who are an advantage to the place they reside in.

Norwood Notes.

Wm. Necklaus is now a smith at the blacksmith shop for a month.

Norwood will be a money order office in the near future.

E. A. Spaulding's horse died suddenly last Sunday.

Miss Ida Wood's horse Jim ran away with her down the Beach hill last week, throwing her out and bruising her considerably and demolishing the buggy.

The mill of G. V. Nash started in on shingles Tuesday. He expects to cut forty thousand a day and it hustle them to get through before Oct. 1st.

E. E. Harris has gone into the livery business.

John Merriam received a fine horse on the Lawrence last trip and C. H. Ferguson a beautiful piano.

The Norwood cemetery will soon have a new fence. There should be some shade trees set out around it also.

Memorial Day Observance.

A joint committee of Baxter Post, G. A. R., and the W. R. C., are arranging a very interesting program for Memorial Day.

They cordially invite all old soldiers and sailors to come out and unite with them on that occasion. Also the inhabitants of the adjoining neighborhoods. They would ask all who can to bring offerings of flowers.

A committee will bejready to take charge of all such offerings, and see that they are properly deposited on the graves of those whose memories we honor.

By order of committee.

—Grass and winter wheat are doing finely; farmers are preparing ground for planting.

The Traverse City potato planter Co made a shipment to Russia last week.

Wilbur F. Gill, a wealthy and prominent business man and politician of Leelanau county, is dead. He was a Republican.

Wexford county supervisors will pay no attention to the mortgage tax law except in cases where requested to do so by mortgagors of incumbered land.

The Boyne Falls News says that Elder Wood, who publishes the Ensign at Boyne City, contemplates leaving that place and is already searching for greener pastures.

Cadillac has decided to become a little, and a committee of her citizens has been sent to Muskegon, Benton Harbor and other wide awake towns to learn just how it is done.

The Merrill iron furnace at St. Ignace, which has been shut down for a year, has gone into blast again and will employ seventy men. The St Ignace barrel factory has also resumed operations with a force of fifty hands.

A. F. Lamont of Alanson at the Park House in Petoskey one day last week was packing his trunk, when his revolver fell out of his overcoat pocket, and was discharged and the ball lodged in his ankle bone. He may lose his foot.

—A terrible accident occured at Boyne fall Thursday Hugh Cameron, proprietor of Cameron's handle factory, while at work in the mill was caught in a belt and wound around a revolving shaft, and before he could be secured and arm was torn from the body and both legs, several ribs and his spine broken. Medical aid was summoned from Petoskey but Mr. Cameron died before it reached him.

A Day City special to the Grand Rapids Herald says: S. O. Fisher has completed a deal by which he secures 7000 acres of land in Charlevoix county. The land is the Dodge estate. The price is not known. The land is covered with pine and hardwood timber, and considerable cedar, which is said to be the best in the state. The pine will probably be brought here to be sawed.

It is reported on good authority that the Michigan Central Railroad has entered into a contract with David Ward of Detroit to deliver at the Jay City mills all of the latter's pine timber now standing in the counties of Antrim, Kalkaska, Otsego and Crawford estimated at 1,200,000,000 feet. The performance of the contract extends over a period of several years. This tract of pine is known as Ward's Manistee tract and has long been regarded as the most valuable piece of timber in the state.

A daily dispatch from Cross Village to the daily papers says that big Beaver island, is adame over the teachings of the Christadelphia, a peculiar sect that has recently sprung up. Their prophet and leader is called Esther. Her name is Mary Dalamater. She lives with a man called Mordecai, whose name is Philip Barton. They claim to have been joined by the hand of God, as were Adam and Eve. Esther sees visions and Mordecai interprets them. They have announced that the end of the world can be expected next Tuesday, and the frightened people are preparing for the crack of doom. The Chicago men who are establishing a summer resort, drove a shewd bargain as a result of the craze and have secured many acres of valuable property for about one-tenth of its value.

CURRENT MARINE NOTES.

Engineer Briley is in the tug Avery.

John Martin, of this place, went as second mate of the Lawrence Saturday.

The steamer Ossifrage, which Capt. Aldrich sails this season, has been lengthened 30 feet, and supplied with triple-expansion engines.

A vessel knocked out one of the upper cluster of the railroad bridge protection piles last week Lights are now kept on the pier, under the care of Captain Edwards.

G. C. Giken has abandoned the wrecking job he took on the big Two Rivers log scow, ashore on Fox Island. She is completely barred in and will probably remain there.

The schooner Arctic, well known here, has been ashore at Golden Valley, Ont., for some time. It is an out-of-the-way place, and she is likely to remain there some time. She is 18 inches out and on a rock bottom.

The propeller City of Charlevoix left Chicago for the north Monday evening, and is expected here today. This fine steamer, with her increased propelling power, is expected to be a marvel of speed, is certainly a fine boat, and will be popular.

Monday, up the lake, the tug Parks broke her shaft, springing some of her planks starting so bad a leak that it was necessary to put her on the beach. She was patched up and towed down, and will be laid up some time for repairs.

The scow Lottie Mason, of this port, on her way here from Chicago Thursday, sprung a leak and put back to Chicago, arriving there with her hold full of water. A consignment of mattresses and furniture for S. M. See & Sons was badly damaged. She was pumped out and the leak stopped Friday

The steamer Atlantic, which was to have been here last week from Detroit, broke a bucket from her wheel in Cheboygan, and returned to Cleveland with a cargo of lumber. The will receive a new wheel, and is expected up this week. Capt. Grummond has decided to run the Dejore on the Green Bay route also, but it is doubtful if she stops here, owing to her deep draught.

Common Council.

At the council meeting Friday evening, Wm. Ferguson was granted permission to put in a sewer from his Ferguson House to Round Lake.

J. H. Martin was re-appointed a special policeman.

The contract for sinking an eight inch well was granted to the Nerman Water Works Co., of Chicago.

The finance committee have purchased of Lottie Mason the two lots adjoining Washburn & Ackert's machine shop on the west, for the water plant.

—The greatest chance ever offered in Charlevoix to secure a great metropolitan weekly, is our offer of the SENTINEL and the New York Tribune for the regular price of the SENTINEL —$1.50. Read the advertisement on our 5th page.

—Hotels are all full, and the streets present a busy aspect. In the next month we will have here the track-layers, Seymour's bridge crew, the iron bridge crew, the passenger depot force, the ballasters and the water-works men. The boom is on.

—Yesterday morning the Wilson Hoop Co.'s factory at South Arm had a close call. One of the steam-kins took fire and the flames were well under way. The tug 3d Michigan was lying at the dock and extinguished the blaze with her hose.

—A business man who did not owe the SENTINEL a cent, invaded our sanctum last Friday, and with words of commendation of the enterprise of the SENTINEL, planked a five dollar bill down, to apply on advance subscription account. His name is John Bell.

—James Ackert's livery barn had a narrow escape from destruction Thursday night. At a time when everybody was absent from the office a lamp exploded, and was blazing fiercely when some gentlemen passing discovered the blaze and extinguished it just in time.

—Capt. J. W. Barnland, late of East Jordan, died at his home in Englewood, Ill., on the 9th. Capt. Barnland was formerly owner and master of the schooner Haslind, which traded at Pine Lake points several years, and was known as the "preacher captain." He had prayers on his vessel every morning, calm or storm, and in winter did some evangelistic work. Two years ago he fell from grace and went into a saw-mill venture at East Jordan, where he lost everything.

—Dr. Lamb, our park dentist, has secured rooms over the Bank of Charlevoix, and will soon be ready to attend to your molars.

—Patronize home institutions. If there is a human virtue that is akin to religious devotion, it is loyalty to home institutions. We will buy what we eat in Charlevoix, if we have to live on Johnny-cake, and what we wear, if it be shoe-packs, but we can get as good here as elsewhere. If you want your town to prosper, buy your goods of home merchants. Employ home mechanics, home doctors, and home painters.

—Friday morning the SENTINEL's new improved Jones-Gordon job press arrived, and before eleven o'clock, steam was attached, and she was at work. Saturday night when the office was closed, the machine had worked off 10,000 impressions. It is the finest machine in Charlevoix county, and one of the best in Northern Michigan, and can almost talk. It was purchased of the Chicago Newspaper Union. Come in and see it.

—We have made arrangements by which we are permitted to furnish the SENTINEL and the New York Weekly Tribune at the regular price of the SENTINEL—$1.50. Of course, this offer is made to new subscribers, or to subscribers who pay up one whole year in advance. This practically gives that great paper, the New York Tribune, free. It is the greatest clubbing arrangement ever made in Charlevoix county, and, in view of the approaching Presidential campaign, should be eagerly accepted.

Since the beginning of the present school year, Miss Maggie Enos has been attending the Conservatory of Music at Olivet, and after her return about the last of June, will again give lessons on the piano and organ.

Hailroad Notes.

Fifty men were added to the ballasting force on the north end last week.

Engineer Harris has a force of men at work grading the roadway in the rear of the station and freight house.

The railroad company last week let the passenger depot contract to Pelton & Co., of Grand Rapids, and work on the foundation has been commenced.

Saturday night the steel was laid to the Cassidy place, in Banks. It is now in Charlevoix county, in the vicinity of the Wm. Stevens farm, in Marion, and coming rapidly northward. With good weather, the rails will be at the gravel-pit on the Hull farm, early next week.

Sunday evening, "No. 105" brought down several flats and a D. L. & N. box car, the latter containing a portion of the swing-bridge. Sunday afternoon the balance of the material arrived, and at this writing the work is well under way. Superintendent Hill says it will take a month to complete the structure, but that trains can pass over it in three weeks.

Hastings from Hayes.

Henry Ward moved to Emmet county last Thursday. He has rented the French farm, on the state road.

Mrs. Esther Hamlin returned home from Undine last week, after a six months absence, the longest time she was ever away from home during her life.

We would advise the Norwood correspondent of the Democrat to take his own medicine, stick to the affairs of Norwood, and not stretch around amongst the tan-bark of Hayes, or he will find that we are a first-class nursery, fully equipped, and will not leave a grease spot of his hide large enough for Bro. Inwood to wipe up.

The supervisor while taking the assessment also took the enumeration of ills the past year. One of our Hayesites wants to know whether, under the new tax-law "they be going to tax babies?" We answer, they be—as soon as they are old enough.

The material for a saw-mill and broom-handle factory has arrived at Bayside.

CURRENT MARINE NOTES.

Ben Campbell is making two spars for the schooner R. P. Mason.

The ferry steamer St. Ignace went ashore at Mackinac City, recently, and it cost $7,000 to get her off.

The twin steamers "Romeo" and "Juliet," which have abandoned the Cheboygan Inland route, were here yesterday on their way to Chicago, where they will run to Lincoln Park.

The steamharge W. P. Thew was damaged by fire Sunday to the extent of $15,000. The fire occurred while the boat was on her way from South Chicago to Chicago. The Thew was formerly in the iron ore trade here.

The steamer City of Charlevoix was in this harbor in the night both ways on her first trip, and but few of our people had the pleasure of seeing her. Those who saw her are enthusiastic in her praise. Later—She arrived on her way up this morning, and we have only time to say that she is a "dandy."

Religious Items.

Morning theme, "Conscience."

Evening, "We see through a glass darkly."

Norwood Cor. Michigan Christian Advocate: This is one of the best charges on Grand Traverse district, and as we have found, contains a loyal people. We have been on duty every Sunday since conference. We found the material interests of the charge well cared for, with a good clean church record and a comfortable parsonage, as neat as a pin from top to garret, thanks to our predecessors, Rev. J. W. Lent and lady. The charge embraces three appointment: Norwood, Atwood and Barnard; total membership at opening of conference year, 91. We soon found that the Lord had given us a large field of work, and one that was ripe unto the harvest for souls. We have labored in much personal weakness, but the master, whose we are and whom we serve, has never been near-en. His Spirit manifested in greater power to us than during the twelve weeks of special meeting. These resulted in great good in strengthening the churches. About 80 persons have professed conversion; 55 have united on probation, six by letter, three from probation. We have baptized 16 adult persons and 25 children. An Epworth league has been formed at Atwood, and is taking shape at Barnard. Financial claims fairly well met; one hundred dollars have been raised at Atwood, which obtains that church of debt. We find that it pays to exalt Christ, honor the Holy Ghost, preach the Word and have a loyal and appreciative people.

Program for Memorial Day.

The committee have announced the following program for Memorial Day:

Officer of the Day, H. Derdan.

The different societies and organizations will be assigned positions by the Marshal. March to the cemetery, where the following program will be rendered: 1. Music. 2. Prayer. 3. Ceremony of G. A. R. ritual. 4. Music. 5. Address by the Commander. 6. Music. 7. Salute. 8. Interment of great unknown. W. R. C.

In case of stormy weather the preliminary ceremonies will be held in the town house.

Conveyances will be furnished small children and disabled comrades.

Common Council.

Last evening the water works bids were opened. The following gentlemen made bids, and had representatives here:

Smith & Sykes, Milwaukee, Wis.
Conner Mulcaid & Bowling, Manistee.
R. W. Hunt, Philadelphia, Pa. (present).
Jos. Nash, Petoskey, Mich.
Michigan Pipe Co., Bay City.
Loring Pipe Co., Lansing, Michigan.
National Tube Works Co.
Nerman Engineering Company.
Henry Smith, Charlevoix, (Indiana.)

As the Council are yet considering the bids, figures cannot be given.

Five new mills down, and other stock, and farm implements, will be sold on May 21st inst., at 10 o'clock a. m., on the old Yonsomma farm, in Norwood Township, by E. H. Green, Administrator.

CHAPTER II.

WHITE VERBENA.

Maple Leaf Farm lay bathed in the golden sunlight of a late autumnal day. They had passed the place—well then, sturdy old Forsythes who, in their generation, had drawn from its soil the rich fruits of an inexhaustible fertility, reaping the hard crops from the stubborn, and fulfilling and repaying until the square miles of field, timber and brookside remained some minutes longer in view.

Where the many gabled home stood, the thirty mapleses had grown to be a sea flowed with golden-hued fallen leaves, and felon of a crimson hue, and independent to the mother elms, flaunting their gaudy livery of red and the brown nuts.

It was now, when the glories of the harvest said lingered, when each field bound like wheat, when each field was lain gleaned with golden straw, and barns, and sheds, and barns stood ready for a later battle with winter and storm, that Maple Leaf Farm looked its best, and it was upon that scenery, such as John Elliott, giving a sweet sigh of in pursuit of his hopes are ambitious, Paul Dalton proud.

Ten years ago, the farm had been left, by the death of their father, to the care of his eldest son, John Elliott, who was a bachelor brother.

"I wish for you," he said, and he spoke as one who knows whereof he speaks, "I wish for you, Paul, a good wife, and the ambition to redeem it. I am failing daily. I give you the keys of the place as virtual owner while I live. After that, unless you have fulfilled the at present-defined little farm—'acres small by my lonely, and but a lonely life, by my lonely, and but a lonely life, and—Paul, I have lived a life of toil, and I have lived a life of toil, and I have lived a life of toil, and

A LEGAL POINT.

The Lawyer Would Not Admit Too Much Even on a Claim.

When he had comfortably settled himself in a couple of the lawyer's deck he said:

"Attorney for the — road, ain't you?"

"Yes, sir. What can I do for you?"

"Well," said the caller, rather as if was coaxing down nine this morning, "there was an accident."

"You don't look as if you had been injured."

"I wasn't."

"Any of your friends hurt?"

"No."

"Well, what's the matter, then?"

"Now, want a minute till I get through," said the caller. "I had paid my fare to come down town—clear to the end of the line—but the company couldn't bring me down. It didn't bring me half way."

"What did?"

"Don't be impatient. I told the conductor I wanted some kind of a conveyance to get the rest of the way, and he refused to pay for one."

"Well, I should think he would."

"He also refused to return my ticket."

"Of course he did."

"But when I was wrecked between Jane and St. Paul the company whose train was wrecked sent me through by another road without expense."

"Certainly. Insured contract, you know. Agreed to take you to your destination when you paid for your ticket."

"But when I paid my fare to the conductor wasn't there an implied—

"No, sir; not at all! It's entirely different."

"I, your real doesn't have to do what it agrees to do."

"Look here. Perhaps you—

"Now, wait. Don't get excited. When such a man do to get any thing from your company?"

"Well, if your leg had been broken or if you had been killed in the accident—

"What then, sir? What then? Quite the color with interest.

"Why, then," said the lawyer negatively, "we would probably have proved contributory negligence and send you or your relatives to Siberia for the road."—Chicago Tribune.

HARDENED TO COLD.

Natives of Siberia Are Affected by the Weather.

How much usage will do in toughening the human body is well known by some facts about the natives of Siberia, as recorded by the author of "Religious, Dogs and Dogcarts." Cold, he says, seems to have no effect upon them.

Frequently, when we could see vapors our ears for two minutes a thought having them frozen, the natives would go for an hour or a time with their hands thrown back from their bags and when it required constant watchfulness to keep our noses from freezing, they did not appear to notice the temperature at all.

One morning in January I stood in perfect amusement at their disregard of the low temperature. They worked for at least an hour with bare backs, packing up the tent and chemisa, handling the packages and lashing them together with icy cold tongue without experiencing the least apparent inconvenience, while I partly froze my fingers and toes. Suddenly, having with a first and steel, the whole operation taking not more than three minutes.

The sight before happening to go out of the tent after our man had retired, I passed their camp, which was near by. Their fire had burned to a pile of ashes barely affording enough to distinguish the embers. They were lying coiled up on small deerskins, with their backs to embers and their fur coats thrown loosely over their naked bodies.

The coat of one of them had slipped almost entirely off his body, leaving his back and shoulders exposed to a temperature of eighteen degrees below zero, Fahrenheit, and, though his hair was frosted, he snored as soundly as if in comfortable quarters.

An Alcohol.

Scientific knowledge is not half so necessary in practical life as sound principle even though the latter, unaided, may not be a satisfactory guide.

There is a certain old gentleman in the country who is an ardent believer in the temperance movement, and one by his earnest counsel has helped many a man in reforming his mode of life. Yet this good man not long ago offered some guests cake and wine.

"Why, Uncle John," said a niece who was visiting him, "I thought you were temperance!"

"So I be!" was the reply, "strict temperance."

"But here you are givin' us wine."

"Correct wine, my dear, not strong wine. Made in this house out of my own currants."

"But, uncle, it's wine just the same."

"No, it isn't, my dear. There isn't a drop of alcohol in it. I see to its makin' an' you'd better believe I didn't have any put in!"—Youth's Companion.

A Monster Radish.

With the people, the honest, the industrious, the thrifty, and so many things on so small a scale in Japan, there is all the greater surprise when one finds anything there which has attained an unusual or gigantic size. The cosmos white radish, taking from six to ten feet in length, strikes one as a vegetable quite in the land of Lilliput. The giant in one fairy story once a fakiren for a club, and the street goblins lost their darkness up against the side of a tempest, as if they were whips or fabricators. One night very recently limited the price of radish by the yard when he goes to market.—St. Nicholas.

Made in the Uncomfortable.

Mr. Upholsterer. I would like to buy a nice reading-room chair. Something new."

"We have just the thing, madam. Here it is. Made especially for comfort. Take a seat on it."

"Gracious! Why, this chair is awful! I couldn't sit on it five minutes. I'm not an ostrich exactly uncomfortable thing is my life."

"Exactly, madam. That is just the idea. You see, it is made for callers."—Tid-Bits.

TWO MILES IN ONE MINUTE.

A Nevada Stagecoach of a Thrilling Ride Down a Flume.

Benjamin Edwards of Nevada was sitting in the lobby of the Windsor recently illustrating the early days of that state, when the stagecoach was changed to fast, riding days on flume tramways.

"You can talk as you like about the Vanderbilt specials and other trains that make phenomenal time, but if your never rode down a lumber flume in Nevada you don't know what it feels like to cleave through space like a meteor.

"Why, up in the Sierra Nevada range there are flumes from five to forty miles long, built on a regular engineer's grade, with a sixteen-foot drop to the thousand. They are built of heavy planks shaped like a V, and only eight inches of water in the mountains and discharge it at the rate of 100 miles an hour per minute.

"I was up at Lake Tahoe one day, which is sixteen miles from Carson, and after we got through our business Ed Pelton, the superintendent, said we'd better take a flying trip back to town.

"He ordered what he called a yacht, which proved to be a V-shaped canoe fourteen feet long. It had a broke when controlled two rubber pads on each side, so arranged as to lift the yacht and let the water run underneath when it became necessary. Without any more ceremony, we put our traps and don't get scared, boys' said Pelton, as we climbed into the machine. Then he told his men to turn on three inches of water. Holy Scott, but how that canoe did jump! Down we went through that thread-like flume, and the trees looked like spatters.

"My teeth tried to chatter, but I could not make it, and as I involuntarily opened my eyes and caught a glimpse of the landscape, it appeared to be only a blur in my vision.

"We shot around curves with a velocity that was fearful to contemplate, and finally Ed weighed anchor at Carson just eight minutes from the time of starting."

CRAFT AGAINST SCIENCE.

How High Walk the Medicine Man, Herbalist and Physician.

Captain John J. Burke says that during his stay in Arizona with General Crook a great deal of amusement was had at camp by means of an old electrical machine, according to the Youth's Companion. A silver dollar was placed in a pail of water and announcement made to the Indians that any one might become its owner who would take it out, while holding in his hand at the same time the insulated holding cylinder of the battery. Everybody tried, and every body was "shocked" and foiled. Then High Wolf, a great "medicine man," accepted the challenge.

High Wolf took one of the poles, and, of course, felt no shock. He looked at the glittering dollar in the bucket, and then at the extra price of $5 just contributed by the officers, and in a second his brawny arm was plunged up to the elbow in the water.

I am not prepared to say how many hundred thousand volts he received in the back of the neck, but he certainly had no therapeutic experience with electricity as could be his lot in any aboriginal, and the worst of it was he couldnot let go. Suddenly, however, he began kicking, and smashed the pole, rocking, kicking all to pieces, a proceeding which involved and lose to us.

He was neither conquered nor humiliated and boldly announced his readiness to repeat the trial a proposal which could not in honor be declined. The battery was patched up and we allowed him to try again.

This time the crafty rascal had expected the wheezy machine furnished almost no current, and to filch out the money, though the moisture gathered upon his face and neck and his fingers were doubled upon his wrists.

So High Wolf retained his reputation as a powerful "medicine man," since he alone, of all the Indians in the region, had been able to compete with the white man's mysterious "medicine box."

TOO LITTLE.

Fifty Thousand Dollars Too Small a Capital for Him.

Children very soon learn the ways of their elders and catching their methods of thought, use them, to childish fashion, to evolve conclusions of their own, ludicrous to the Youth's Companion. Sometimes these results show a baby wisdom, and again they are only worth a smile.

Freddy is the son of a millionaire, and has from his earliest childhood lived in an atmosphere of pomp and pretension. His father's great idea about money and what it will buy, and he is only the impression that "poor folks" really have very little business in the world at all.

One day his long-suffering governess gave him a little sum in pennies, the result of which would show how much capital a sum must have to gain a certain income. Freddy worked away with concentration, but evidently to no purpose. The answer would not come, and his face contracted an earnest scowl.

"Well, Freddy," said his teacher at the end of three minutes, "how are you getting on?"

"Not at all," was the reply. "I can't make it come out right. I don't know how I can do it any differently, and I keep putting the same answer every time."

"What answer do you get?"

"Fifty thousand dollars."

"Why, that's right; what made you think it wasn't?"

"Anybody would know it couldn't be right," said he haughtily. "Nobody would think of having such a small capital as $50,000."

The Prayer of a Poet.

"Here is a rather sad incident in the paper, my dear," said Peterby.

"What is it?" asked the wife.

"A Bohemian girl at Chicago committed suicide to spite her lover who had offended her."

"The foolish girl! I wouldn't have taken my spite in that way."

"What would you have done?"

"I'd have married him."

And Peterby went down town wondering how he had offended his wife before they were married.—Texas Siftings.

MARVELS OF ELECTRICITY.

Hardly Any Natural Phenomenon in Which It Does Not Play a Part.

Wonderful as the advances of our knowledge and use of electricity have been in the past few years, there is no reason to believe that we have yet fairly crossed the threshold of discovery in this direction, declares the Youth's Companion. Hints of what is to come occasionally escape from the laboratories and studies of the men who are now pushing on the outposts of electrical science, and these hints sometimes fairly take away the reader's breath. Men of science have yet not settled the question of what electricity is, but every new discovery shows more and more plainly that, whatever it may be, there is hardly any natural phenomenon in which it does not play a more or less important part.

Prof. Oliver J. Lodge thinks electricity is a mode of manifestation of the ether, that strange medium which is supposed to pervade all space and to carry light from sun to planet and from star to star.

In a recent address Prof. William Crookes points out some of the marvelous powers and possibilities that the continued advance in our knowledge of electrical phenomena seems about to place within our grasp.

Man is constantly searching for new and cheaper sources of energy by means of which he may drive his engines and carry on its last multiplying forms, the work that civilization demands to have done.

But men of science, like Prof. Crookes, say that in a single cubic foot of the ether, in which the earth is submerged, ten thousand feet tons of energy—that is force enough to lift one thousand tons a one foot—lies imprisoned, only awaiting the magic touch of science to be loosened for the service of man.

They tell us also that the latest researches give us reason to hope that these stores of energy may actually be opened and drawn upon.

Prof. Nicholas Tesla has already succeeded in producing in a room an electrostatic ball, into which, if a glass tube is shaunted the air is carried, the tube will glow with light and illuminate the room like a lamp. It now appears, as Prof. Crookes says, that a true flame can be produced without chemical aid—a flame which yields light and heat without the consumption of material and without any chemical process." Those who have studied the chemistry of the oscillator will appreciate what this means.

Imagine a blowpipe without fuel, to get light without heat, to make solid well by effect transparent—such are some of the strange possibilities after which scientists of electricity may now strive with fair hopes of success; and the attainment of such ends would mark but a single step in the advance of modern science.

DOGS AS FISHERS.

One Newfoundland That Had Great Sport Fishing Crabs.

I have seen mention in the Forest and Stream of one dog that caught fish for another with a prefer-ence for catfish, says a writer in that periodical. I do not for a moment doubt either of these dog-fishing stories, for I can know two dogs that took great delight in catching crabs, but soft crabs but lusty hard ones, capable of making a good fight. When about twelve years of age I used to spend my vacations at a large farm on a tributary of the Chesapeake Bay. Besides myself there was another boy and two dogs at this house. One of the dogs was a large Newfoundland, and the other was one of those medium-sized, pointing-dog combinations of short hair and no particular color—probably an all-around dog as concerned his breeding.

One day I noticed the large dog wading about in the shallow water at the foot of the yard and evidently searching for something. I found that he was looking for crabs. When a crab was discovered he would pounce around it, and after making several attempts, seize it in his mouth and bring it up on the bench and then play with it much as a cat does with a mouse, until the poor crab was either dead or helplessly exhausted. He seemed to do this for the mere sport of the thing, barking all the time in a tone that denoted excitement rather than anger. He never ate the crabs after killing them. The crabs fought back to the best of their ability, and no doubt inflicted many a nasty but pinchers and it would require much stalking before he would drop off.

SKINNED ALIVE.

Seal Hunters Do Not Take the Trouble to Sell the Poor Animals.

E. H. Wells this afternoon an incident which he had witnessed last spring while crossing the North Pacific, from Nelkai Island, to Sitka, Alaska, in a sealing schooner.

"We all gathered round the gaping creature as it lay upon the deck, while one of the hunters an experienced hand at skinning seals, bared his long, sharp knife and prepared to remove the pelt.

"He made several cuts about the flippers when I interfered. The seal was breathing heavily, its chest rising and falling spasmodically. Kill that beast," I exclaimed. "Before you skin it.

"He obeyed, or attempted to, by cutting a long gash across the creature's throat.

"Blood flowed forth in torrents and covered the deck. The struggling ceased and I thought death had ensued. The hunter proceeded with his skinning operations and the pelt was about one third removed when I was horrified by another loud gasp from the seal and a removal of the bearings of the chest. Evidently it was not dead and was undergoing torture.

"Kill it!" I cried, and a man with one long, slashing cut ripped the animal open and partially disembowled it.

"Then, with dexterous movements the knife he rapidly continued to remove the pelt and had almost separated it from the body when another noise came from the seal. Its mouth opened and its chest heavily rose and sunk.

"I could scarcely believe my eyes! There lay a creature alive, yet disembowled and with its blood lying in pools on the deck.

"'Can its heart out!' I ejaculated, unable longer to bear the sight of the apparent suffering.

"The hunter reached his hand inside and plucked forth the heart. It was warm and throbbed regularly. Cut loose from the body and held out in the hand, it continued to pulsate, the vessels opening and closing for fully three minutes with unfeeling regularity. It was a gruesome sight.

"But the seal was now dead. It no longer breathed nor moved. A feeling of relief swept over me.

"'Do they usually die that hard?' I demanded.

"'Oh, yes,' replied the hunter coolly. "They always act that way when we skin them.

"I felt like striking the cold-blooded wretch there and then. He had no compunctions when cruelty was concerned. He told me the truth, however.

"Thousands of seals are taken every year by schooners in the Northern Pacific and Behring sea, and are skinned alive by their heartless captors, who will not take the trouble to kill them. The creatures die harder than almost any other animal, and, as it is warm-blooded and sensitive, no doubt undergoes a torture equal to any that could possibly be inflicted. There is no sentiment to unconscious muscular activity in its case, as in the turtle.

QUEER USE FOR A COFFIN.

Turned Into a Cupboard After Frightening a Scoiting Wife.

At a collier's cottage in Staffordshire a coffin is used as a cupboard in which bread and cheese and other necessaries of life are kept, according to the London Times.

The coffin, it seems, was ordered eighteen years ago by the master of the cottage and has been in use ever since. He and his wife used to have a good many words, and she was quite exclaimed to her husband, "I'll never be content until I see you lies in dy coffin."

"Well, lass," returned the latter, "if that'll content thee, it'll soon be done."

Next day he gave directions for his coffin to be made, and in a few days, when it came home, he got into it and said: "Now, lass, art thou content?"

She began to cry at this, and wanted the horrid thing taken away; but his husband would not allow.

In the end she became accustomed to its presence, and, so that it might be turned into some account she was put into it, the cover hinged on, and it was thus turned into a useful and original sort of a cupboard.

And it is satisfactory to know that the collier and his wife have never quarreled since this moment—they have been in their home.

Jelly From Elephants' Tusks.

How many people says the Washington Star, have ever eaten jelly made from elephants' tusks? Yet it is very good indeed. In the English factories, where many tons of ivory are sawn up annually to make handles of knives and forks, great quantities of ivory dust are obtained. The dust is sold at the rate of 5 pence per pound, and when properly boiled and prepared it makes the finest, purest and most nutritious animal jelly known. Years ago, ivory jelly was a very fashionable remedy and much sought for

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.

When you want a certain article, you want the best made of that article, don't you? Has it been to determine which make is best to buy? Yes, we thought so.

And when the people is solved for you, by an impartial tribunal, cannot be questioned, are we pleased, aint'n you?

And one such tribunal is one of our puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?

Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle and its solution.

At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machine of the world, including those of America, were throughout the entire exposition, and the jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were by leading sewing machine manufacturers of France. They after extensive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson Manufacturing Co. Famous Lock Stitch Machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize of the Exposition, viz: "Grand Prix" to the companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.

The French Government, as a further mark of appreciation, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.

This is the machine, the best sewing machine in the world was fully solved by the Jury of Experts, the highest in the world in favor of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines.

The No. 9, for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing, are as the best in the world today.

And now, when you need a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.

Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive circulars and prices.

Five Shot for Grover.

The Wisconsin Democratic State Convention, held at Milwaukee, fairly bubbled over with enthusiasm. We will go to Chicago not to ask for the nomination of Grover Cleveland of New York, but for the nomination of Grover Cleveland of the United States, and if New York does not follow as we much wish the name for New York." Prolonged cheers followed these remarks of General Bragg, as they did all other references to Cleveland before the convention. The situation in Michigan is told by the following dispatch: "Grover Cleveland, New York Tribune largest Democratic State convention in our party's history elected a unanimous Cleveland delegation to Chicago and instructed it to vote for him as a unit. In this action the delegation will express the exact sentiment of the Michigan Democracy, which is for Cleveland and victory. THANKS, C. J. LARRABEE." "Chairman Democratic State Committee."

Destitution in Newfoundlands.

INFORMATION from the northern coast of Newfoundland depicts a wretched condition of affairs there. Owing to the ravages of the grip last year the inhabitants were unable to gather their usual catch of fish. Just before navigation closed the Government sent the people of Bonne Bay, who are by barrels of flour, which was free from prohibiting during the winter. For some time the ships have been cut off from the outside world by ice. Early in February the people searched with horror the consumption of the last handful of flour, while their families had not a crust of bread. There is not a barrel of flour in the whole coast between Bonne Bay and St. Anthony. Some people have already perished from starvation, and at the date of last advices, March 26, a terrible condition of affairs existed.

SIX of those injured in the Philadelphia fire are dead.

AT Boston, Mass., at the auction rooms of C. F. Little & Co., a copy of "Tamerlane," by Edgar Allan Poe, the only known copy in existence with the exception of the one in the British Museum, was sold for $1,850 to Dodd, Mead & Co., of New York. It is blue, with paper covers, has forty pages, and was printed when the author was a mere boy.

An east-bound freight train on the Pennsylvania Railroad was wrecked by a broken brake slipping near Coatesville, Pa. Both tracks were blocked. A westbound train, composed of cattle and the great stock of the Jacobs' circus, ran into the wreck. The loss of life of the latter train was thought from the track and trifled in an outlook. Frank Bacon, of Lawrence, and Harry Martin, Beeson, both of Philadelphia, were caught in the wreck and roasted to death.

WESTERN.

A FREIGHT train westward on the Vandalia railroad was wrecked six miles west of Greencastle, Ind. It is thought the accident was caused by the breaking of a pair of trucks. Eleven cars of merchandise were piled up in a mass and the loss was heavy. The train was running rapidly.

THE Minnesota Title Insurance and Trust Company, of Minneapolis, is the defendant in thirteen cases which were begun in the Superior Court in Boston. The aggregate amount sought to be recovered is $92,500. The suits are entered in by her alleged death in the sale of mortgage bonds on a tract of land in Minneapolis.

THE St. Paul Mun. Commercial Bank, which closed its doors Saturday, has been unable to secure help from the St. Paul bankers, has assigned to E. A. Bromley, cashier of the defendants' present bank. All the depositors of the bank are stockholders, and the stockholders are liable for the payment of their shares, all of them are wealthy.

THE Cross Creek Stone are dissatisfied with the way in which the government is treating them in the matter of money and supplies, and last Ward White wrote a letter to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs on the subject, in which he intimates that another uprising may occur unless there is a change in the policy toward the Indians.

THERE was quite a serious wreck of a passenger train on the Burlington route near Crete, Neb., in which Fireman H. Cooper was killed and a number of others who were stealing a ride were injured. Killed and a number of others more or less seriously injured, Wachusta, are the exact sentiment of the Michigan Democracy, which is for Cleveland and victory. THANKS, C. J. Tariff Questions Solved.

Question No. 41. Why do revolt all the intelligent people in the colleges, and the scientific schools of this country, on tariff consideration, isn't Bro. Dodd?

1. The questions slightly were in answering but broadly that the enforcement advanced schools of this country do nearly and teach anything relating to the question of free trade or protection, and the reason why is because the tariff is the chief century, yearly and all the large colleges do not teach political economy at all, most of those which devote some attention to it, teach it entirely through free trade text books. Yet it is the political economists have no common whatever on the question and doubtless that is why part of the business of economic teachers in the colleges are against the tariff question, the depreciation of silver or any other "missing question" which is the subject of party agitation. The American Economic Association is an association formidable to protectionist teachers, comprising over 1,000 of 500 members, which holds annually meetings, publishes a quarterly, a journal, and the American Academy of Social and Political Science. The American Statistical and Social Science associations represent the same class, but more of them than as so to know, ever discussed or published a paper on the tariff question, on that, free trade, Black, or on any current question which has been a political issue, or more than one on the silver question.

2. The public, discover and interest policy of American colleges is to produce intelligent, impartial, and independent concerning the tariff question, as being one of the greatest, if not the greatest, which cannot attract students and may repel students, follows in the wake of the American Economic Association. It is a fact that the Yale, Harvard, Columbia, City's which are, as to be neutral. Those who lectures quote the free trade and protection text books as supporting adverse positions. The chief expressions have been Yale, Harvard, Williams and Michigan, a later Sumner, Yale, Sumner, Laughlin, Taussig and Adams have agreeably advanced free trade, but of late in a more subdued tone.

3. Political economy as taught in the colleges has been mainly written and in consequence, being so written men like Stuart Mill, Brooks, Bastiat, Cooper, Carey, Amasa Walker and the rise, who never entered college, or by men who have taught, whose work is in the colleges has caused them to so labored treatises on free trade, which are not what they ought to be, so as to the case of tariffs, the spectacle maker, of Franklin and Edison, the electricians, it is the world that must teach, the colleges, finally great men first crew the threshold of a college, it all, either to found it or to teach it, and also on to learn in it. The business men of the country are learning the tariff in practical political economy, as the manufacturer of America are about to pit philosophers and theoretical chemists in making iron, steel, sugar, ink, paper or cloth, in refining oil, constructing machinery or utilizing steam, steel, light and electricity. Some of these people are in congress.

Question 2. Are not American ships on a par with English ships?

The ordinary American road steer is better than any other similar wheel in the world. Some American ships are fast, racing wheels; but then some people always prefer foreign articles to those of American make. So far as strength, durability and beauty are concerned, the American bicycle cannot be beaten.

Question No. 47. What is the difference between dollars and cents?

Dots is a sum of money required by the government to be paid on the importation of a foreign article. A tariff is a list or schedule of dots.

Question No. 48. When the duty exceeds the cents, what is the difference? Are we to be and pay so much a dollar?

Take a yard of calico for example, which you can buy anywhere in this country at 4 cents. The duty on such goods is 7 cents a yard—that is 175 per cent. Who pays it? Why, no one. It is not paid at all. Yet if the duty in this country an anglomaniac who imagine that a similar calico made in Manchester, Eng., is worth 7 cents a yard, and pays 11 cents for it, the duty is 175 per cent, duty, and he ought to. It is a fact, so, his admiration fashionable, but if the Manchester manufacturer is determined to sell some of his goods in our markets in open competition with our manufacturers, he will have to produce selling at 4 cents a yard, then he must pay the duty demanded by the United States treasury and sell the goods at 4 cents a yard, this leaving 7 cent on every yard. If he does not he finds his effort to enter this market as a matter of fact the Manchester manufacturer knows better than to dupe such a course. He looks elsewhere for a market for his calico, and leaves the American people in the enjoyment of the 4 cent calico, which they prefer to have imposed on them because of the earth.—American Economist.

History Coining Back on the Democratic Party.

The other day the Hon. Robert E. Dodds, of Ohio, created no end of merriment on the Republican side of Congress, and no little confusion among the free-trade "reformers," by quoting from a Democratic pamphlet circulated in his state during the campaign of 1892, the tariff act of that year, according to Dodds on wool were slightly reduced, but not enough to make a law, and the Democratic leaders called upon the people to accept the injury thus inflicted upon their great industry of wool growing, and trust the Democrats in power who promised to restore the old higher rates later.

It was generally an appropriate time for the Ohio Republican to remind the underlying three statements at a time when he himself was in the act of delivering the fine date of protection to some of Ohio wool growers against the free wool bill introduced by Democrats, championed by Democrats, and finally becomes a law by Democratic votes, which meant not merely a reduction of wool duties, but abolishing free trade in wool.

Mr. McMillin, in his speech in favor of free wool, January 1, 1894, said:

> The labor
>
> tax
>
> tariff
>
> on
>
> more for the
>
> clothing
>
> than
> tariff.

How to Fail.

If the Republicans had known and take it easy because of the victories in local elections last year, they would have failed to indulge in weak and timid policy. Yet the Democrats, who they next year, just as it was for the Democratic party, and the Democratic national convention at Chicago. He also the convention would have been held in March or April, so favorite, except that the last national convention peremptorily directed that it should be held in June, and the Democratic leaders, who have the free-trade convention. Therefore the bogus issue of the tariff, which was the principle ground of 1892, the last of June, and a deliberate merely and so make their programme of action in the campaign. The Canadian affair.

The number of tariff reform clubs increased during the year from 1,000 to nearly 400,000 in membership. There are 1,000 of them in the city of Philadelphia, of 1,700,000, a compact, organized, active and aggressive Democratic party, the largest of the home island of the party. These clubs have done educational and reformatory work. The Democrats are ready to turn into marching clubs for the campaign. It is a powerful political force made up of some of the highest character, of the most intelligent and most active citizens.

In 1848 it was thought for a time that Gen. Scott, a political idol of Webster, would be chosen by the Democratic party, and Webster was ready to turn into marching clubs for the campaign. It is a powerful political force made up of some of the highest character, of the most intelligent and most active citizens.

Free Trade.

There is no objection to the free trade text book ribbon to Cleveland, and a free trade text book ribbon to Cleveland, and a free trade text book ribbon to Cleveland, and proper, but the electoral slates will go to the Democratic National Convention in November next, all the same.

McMillin's Democrats illustrated very forcibly the debtor and creditor view of the tariff question, in his speech to the Republican State Convention, when he said: "Yes, we have 1,500 employes, 1,500 workmen. They are creditors. I am always in debt to them, they never owe me a dollar. Whenever we have a tariff bill, we get up to the tariff, on the railroad, in the mill or in the mine, there is a reduction to be asked, nay, compelled, to take 10 per cent off the wages of the men who will go to the ballot box, where he is a sovereign, and vote against the party that made him a sovereign. In 1890 we were defeated, and I received 31 cents less on the dollar for my labor." Yet he was next nominated in Massachusetts don't.

Wonders of a Mosquito's Bill.

Reelfoot lake ranch in New Jersey will probably not be interested in anything pertaining to mosquitoes, but the ranch's blood-letting apparatus is a wonder just the same. The bill itself is a big, long, sharp bill, and it is used to keep six miniature surgical instruments in good working order. Two of these instruments are exact counterparts of the surgical instruments used in the Johns Hopkins hospital, and the other two are a pair of lancets. The bill is a sort of a sheath, and when the mosquito is ready to take a drink of blood the sheath is thrust back, and the mosquito is equipped with a pair of lancets and a syringe to make up the complacement. The syringe is the largest part of the apparatus. It is used in the initial puncture; next the lancet or the syringe is used to keep the flow of the blood to flow more freely. In case the blood coagulates, the bill is destroyed either, the saw and the needle are carefully and thoroughly used, in a lateral direction in the victim's flesh. The mosquito's bill is made up of the instruments, is used in transferring the blood to the hive.—Mosquito Journal.

Hunting for a New Dress.

A very pretty custom is common among the little girls of the South. They search under the leaves of the woods for the first violets they find in spring. The violets appear very early spring, and if they find one they wish they have a new dress before another week.

DARK HORSES.

They Have Frequently Carried Off the Presidential Nominations.

Of presidential conventions it may be said that it has been said of juries that no one can predict nominally who they will do, says the New York Advertiser. With the exception of the great parties, they have been nominated, and whose selection was indicated many months before the conventions which nominated them met, and with the exception of two cases where the nomination of a president has been inevitable, it may be said that ever since the convention system was adopted, some dark horse, the action of the convention of all the parties has been in the nature of a surprise. It is the unexpected which appears to be most likely to happen with the national conventions. Nobody, for instance, expected that James K. Polk would be nominated in 1844. He was almost unknown. Martin Van Buren was regarded as the certain candidate, and he did have in fact a majority in the convention, but instead enough, a rule which he had himself drawn to secure his nomination in 1836, which required, that a two-thirds vote must be secured before a nomination could be declared nominated, prevented his receiving the nomination.

In 1848 it was thought for a time that Gen. Scott, a political idol of Webster, would be chosen by the Democratic party, and Webster was ready to turn into marching clubs for the campaign. It is a powerful political force made up of some of the highest character, of the most intelligent and most active citizens.

THE SENATE AND HOUSE.

WORK OF OUR NATIONAL LAWMAKERS.

Proceedings of the Senate and House of Representatives—Important Measures Discussed and Acted Upon—List of the Bills Introduced.

The National Solons.

The House reconsidered its Inclusive Bill, stating that the Bilsey tract bill, which has been dragging the bounds of private legislation for the last two months, was finally laid aside, and the Senate bill was taken up for consideration. The Senate disagreed to the House amendments, and the House adhered to the Senate amendments that Congress will probably be in session in September and October, and that the Bilsey bill, including bills of the first Bill, Senate bill, Senate bill, Senate

The first definite report on the progress of the tin industry under the new tariff law, which has just been prepared by a treasury agent, shows some sixty tin works, with an aggregate capital of $1,000,000, established or in process of establishment, and capable of supplying over one-third of the tin used in this country at prices no higher than before the passage of the McKinley law. When the present tariff law took effect the price tad tinplate actually began to reach per ton from the preceding January. In the next six months it declined thirty eight cents per box more and in the last three months still another six cents per box. Tin plates are therefore now $1.21 per box cheaper in Liverpool than they were Jan. 1,1891, six months before the present law went into operation. The increased duty is 1.2 cents per pound, or in a box of 108 pounds, $1.29; so that it is apparent that the foreign price has decreased nearly by the amount of the increase in the tariff duty. If the examination as to prices be extended so as to include the ten years beginning with 1880 it will be found that the lowest average price for the period was $6.85 per box, or thirty-one cents per box in the excess of the price of April 1,1892. An estimate of the capacity of the work already established and projected shows a probable output of more than one-third of the imports in the United States and nearly 31,000,000 pounds in excess of the total consumption of Great Britain.

Capt. Scott, of the steamer J. C. Ford which arrived at Cleveland on the 13th, declared that a huge sea serpent, such as has been described by the Buffalo Express, followed his boat for some distance near Buffalo on his trip the steamer was within about 50 miles of Buffalo, the captain says, when the man on the lookout discovered what he supposed was a large black log some distance ahead of the of the boat bow. The log seemed to follow, and on looking closely at it the wheelman saw the obstacle move, and at once cried out that it was alive. In an instant the cry of "the serpent, the serpent!" was heard on the boat, and all hands were at the side near the bow to catch a glimpse of the monster. The captain declares it must have been all 50 feet long and was of a very dark color. The serpent kept along with the steamer for nearly 30 minutes and most of the time only about 20 feet showed above the water. Several shots were fired at it, but none seemed to take effect, it disappeared several times beneath the water, and remaining down several minutes, and finally it stopped still and allowed the boat to leave it in the distance. Capt. Scott is confident that is the same sea serpent that was seen by other seamen last fall.

Wire nails of standard size and weight are sold for $1.95 per keg. The tariff duty on these same nails is 2½ per keg. If the tariff in this case be a tax who pays it? Perhaps some of our local free-trade hardware dealers can answer this question.

Andrew Stebbins, living near Torch Lake, recently found some specimens of iron ore near that place, which Prof. Jenkins, a geologist, analyzed and found that it ran forty per cent to iron and forty-five per cent to sulphur.

Brother Fred Geiser, itinerant magic lantern artist, maltreated Nellie Myers whom he had induced to leave her home in Kalkaska under promise of marriage. He tied her to a tree and beat her with a switches. Officers pursued him, but he swam the Betsey River, near Frankfort and escaped.

Father Lambert, a Catholic priest, whose pen is said to be tipped with lightning and whose wit is without the quality of mercy, has attacked Bob Ingersoll in behalf of the Christian religion. If Robert rejoins there is promise of reading in the near future that both sides of the controversy may enjoy.

It looks as if the popular "Inland route" from Oden to Cheboygan was to be abandoned, to judge from the following from the Cheboygan Tribune: The steamers Romeo and Juliet, the handsome and popular boats of the inland route, are to take their departure for Chicago, Romeo towing her companion.

At Grand Rapids seventeen Italian laborers on their way from Chicago to work on the northern extension of the C. & W. M. claimed to have no cash, and were given a plank to sleep on at the police station. Suddenly feeling that their couches were too hard for comfort they displayed well filled pocketbooks and went to a hotel.

East Jordan Enterprise: The Company has a full gang of men working on their new machinery at the Red Mill but it will be a number of days yet before they will be ready to start. The new boilers are all steel, and a considerable heavier than the old boilers. The piles driving is completed for the repairs and extension of their dock there and the carpenters are putting on the platforms etc.

The following additional particulars are given of the peculiar religious community settled on Beaver Island; Their prophet and leader is called Father. Her name is Mary Dalamater. She lives with a man called Morfeval, whose name is Philip Barton. They are not married but claim to have been joined by the hands of God, as were Adam and Eve. They are about 35 years old, but they have distorted their countenances so that they appear older. Father claims to talk with God, and often retires to a secret room for hours. Mordecai preaches, explaining Father's visions. Father seldom appears in public in order to give the people an exalted idea of her greatness and mysteriousness. Every night meetings are held in a rude tent called a tabernacle. Here Mordecai reads passages from the scripture, which he says has been explained to him by Spirits. He has announced that the end of the world will take place next Tuesday. The people are preparing for this event. V. B. Hawson, a Chicago speculator, who heard of the strange delusion of the people has brought from them $165,000 worth of land and buildings for less than $10,000. Mordecai advised the people to sell to Hawson, as he was an agent for the Lord. Mordecai fixed the price of each piece of property. The Jake of the world's dissolution was first announced on April 21, and on the day the people assembled in balconies and boxes arrayed in white. J. W. Higgins one of the fanatics, is called Abraham. He claims the Lord told him to kill his son like Abraham of old. It is said that he took his son, who is six years old and prepared to burn him. The fire was built so it is said, and the boy was slightly burned, when Father sent word that the Lord has changed his mind. Father professes to have the gift of many tongues and can talk in a dozen languages. The people have made no provision for the summer and a famine is feared.

A self-cocking revolver lying under a bed attracting her attention, she picked it up for a closer inspection. It went off, the bullet piercing her left forearm and shattering the bone.

—Memorial Day, next Monday, should be observed by every citizen and his household. There is no more eloquent tribute of affectionate remembrance than the flowers of spring, lifting them to the graves of the Nation's defenders, and testify your gratitude for their heroic deeds in the hour of our country's peril. In honoring the soldier, alive or dead, we honor ourselves. Bring flowers.

—Monday evening S. M. See, wife and daughter Mamie, left on the steamer Purtan for Oregon. They will remain away this summer, and possibly a year, but that they will return and build another home is generally believed. A large number of our citizens were at the dock to give the parting hand-shake to their expected neighbors and friends. Every citizen of Charlevoix hopes to see them back again. Charlevoix cannot afford to lose Mr. See.

—Andrew Hanson, a sailor on the schooner Horace Tabor, had a remarkable experience on Lake Michigan last week. While en route to Chicago with a cargo of lime, and 15 miles off Milwaukee, about midnight Thursday, a squall struck the vessel causing her to careen heavily. Hanson and another seaman were standing near the main rigging at the time, and went overboard with a portion of the deck load. Hanson succeeded in making a raft of ties, and found support upon it until Friday morning, when a heavy sea from the south broke it up. Hanson secured four of the ties, however, and by crossing them, found further support until assistance reached him from the schooner J. B. Newland, at three o'clock Saturday afternoon. The Newland landed Hanson at Racine, where he was placed in a hospital. His legs, arms and body were badly swollen from his thirty-six hours drenching in the cold waters of the lake. The other seaman was picked up by the vessel's yawl soon after the accident.

Common Council.

At the regular council meeting Friday evening, a communication was read from General Manager Heald, of the C. & W. M. Railway Co., accepting the proposition of the Village to furnish water for passenger depot, freight house and closet purposes, and a double fire-hydrant, for $200 per annum, for five years.

Washburn & Ackert were authorized to purchase 300 feet of 8 inch pipe, for the village, for well purposes.

Trustees Washburn and Nichols were appointed a committee to inspect the pumps of the several hydrants, and further consideration of the bids was deferred until their report is received.

Railroad Notes.

Friday night last the steel was laid to a point four miles from Charlevoix, and the whistle of the locomotive was plainly heard here. Pay day Saturday checked the work some, but to-day the rails are laid to the vicinity of the Hull farm, where a day or two will be spent in building a siding into the gravel pit. Before another issue of this paper the construction train will be at the foot of Pine Lake.

The contractors have a large force of stone-masons at work on the foundation of the new passenger station, and the Charlevoix Lumber Co. are putting the material for the building on the ground.

Work on the bridge is progressing rapidly. The central working gear is in place, and the immense structure is beginning to assume shape.

From Beaver Island.

On Saturday evening, the 14th, St. James was thrown into great excitement by the sudden death, of apoplexy, of Frederick Butts, an old resident and prominent citizen of this place.

The Martin Brothers, with their usual generosity and promptness, went to Harbor Springs with the tug Elliott, and telegraphed his sister, Mrs. Hysle, of Cleveland. The tug returned with a fine casket, and on the 17th the sister arrived, and the funeral was held on that day. He was buried in the Protestant cemetery, a large body of citizens accompanying his body to the grave, as a mark of their esteem. At the house a prayer was said, and a chapter in the bible read, and the burial service of the Episcopal church was read at the grave by Mr. Mayne, of Charlevoix.

Frederick Butts was born in Germany, but came to this country at an early age, and has been a resident of Beaver Island for over 30 years. He was 65 years and nine months old; was county surveyor and supervisor of Chandler township. He was an honest man, and respected by all. t. w.

In the morning, Memorial services. All other services as usual.

Congregational.

Rev. W. H. Macpherson, pastor. Morning, "A critical position; or, passing the boundary line." Evening, "Temperamental Religion."

Norwood Notes.

The Puritan, Capt. Finucan, sailed Norwood on her way by last Saturday evening.

Come out everybody to the school entertainment this week Friday night.

Geo. M. Ferguson is up from Chicago, and is helping his brother Larnie.

Charlie Ferguson Jr. has his new opera house completed, and the scenery hung.

Charlie Brown is back from Mancelona.

Three of the Ferguson dogs are dead. They expect five more from Chicago next week.

Arthur Meech came home from Boyne City last Friday and spent a few days with his new son, who arrived last Friday morning, and weighs nine pounds, and is just as good looking as his dad.

Geo. H. Van Pelt is home for a few days.

CHAPTER III.

A STARTLING AFFRONT.

"Something's wrong!"

Paul Dalton uttered the words more than once upon the day that preceded the meeting of two great rivals engaged in the Hidgelon victory.

The Bird family repeated them as they cast sidelong glances at their master.

"Paul's been off his feed lately," said the cooper, with a temper "exceedingly unusual in a man who has been invested like a sun-flower in his work."

All Dalton's friends spoke to Ruth; he treated Dalton with gruff incivility; and were faithful the latter's orders, caught shirking his duty.

"What's gone down?"

"No, Ruth, nothing in a bad business."

"Maybe it's Dalton. He's getting rather gloomy on the girl, and you know Farmer John has set his heart on a match with Ralph Prescott."

Thus and like gossiply explanations floated on the air—all very far from the true solution to the mystery of Farmer John's bad temper, however.

Meantime, with Ralph Prescott morning and developing his spite, and Farmer John sighing, which was a rear exception, there were two happy, unconscious souls that saw only gold in the dazzling sunshine, and fastened the songs of the birds the sweetest music, and the sighs with hearts vibrating to new and delightful emotions.

They loved, these two, Ruth and Paul; they had pined long and lonely, that in unexpressed fervor. Now, with revelation of the white visions, their eyes spoke, a telltale flush, an ardent glance at Ruth's cheek, turn of colour and tremulousness on the threshold of life's sweetest, holiest emotions.

If a morning of a false position, a mysterious past shadowed the lovers' sweet moonlight to them (it was), it only added to the charm.

Ruth's confidence in her lover was absolute; it was enough that he was the author of the letter which had so unjustly blighted it out with a realization of the green hills that had come into her life to overshadow it all.

As those two golden hearts, with unseen barriers already placed between them, glided on to the bitter fate that man's subtlety and the workings of a crazy, merciless destiny were weaving for them.

"I'll no speak," muttered Farmer John as he entered the house for supper. "I'll see make a mistake and accuse a decent man, and I'll see make special miles a penny the way I have good things, and I'll speak with the best thief who visits my room gets caught."

He was silent and unsocial all the evening; and, had he been less absorbed in his grim suspicious thoughts of Ralph Prescott, he would have noted the lurking figure of Ralph Prescott as he slide from the house and then stole out of it again.

The farmer supposed he had gone to his own apartment and set down to read the weekly newspaper.

At his task—for it was such that evening, with his mind torn with conflicting doubts—Farmer John moved restlessly, lay down the paper, took it up again, pondered, dozed and finally fell into sleep.

He was aroused about nine o'clock by the entrance of Ralph Prescott, apparently from an early visit.

The farmer, later Ruth appeared, her cheeks flushed, her eyes vaguely questioning the lover who had disappeared upon her.

About to ask her if she had yet been in quest of him on the same errand, Paul Elliott was interrupted by the entrance of two lines.

The last decided to leave his engine with the morning, and, according to agreement had come for their pay.

"Before you go to a man's business for the winter, boys," spoke Elliott, always considerate to his men.

No, the men were obdurate. They had quite a little money due, at wages, and their ambition was to try the attractions in the way of pleasure and dress, the great, magnetic city.

"All right, lads, do as I owe you!" quoted the farmer.

"He'll tell, he'll tell, get it all down in black and white," returned one of the men, with a sot in Paul, who, from figures never made a mistake in their admiring imagination.

Paul got down the books and stated the account. Farmer John took out his keys, and, hung in hand, proceeded to his bedroom for the money.

These boxes found a startled eye a moment later. Then the cooper rushed into the room to see, and John Elliott re-entered the room.

His face was white with passion, his eyes were terrible. Absorbed with some covert quiet, Ruth and Paul seemed on the verge of choking.

In one hand he bore the lame, in the other, a roll of bank-notes. Finding the lump on the table, recognizing the bed, a pen-tap volume of rage, he centred on several of the bills and scattered them to the astonishing Paul Dalton.

"There's your money, lad, I'm said, in a tone like grated on Ruth's alarmed ears until she shuddered. "Take it, pack your traps and go!"

"Mr. Elliott!" stuttered Dalton, in dumfounded bewilderment, "what does this mean?"

"Go!" snapped the farmer, savagely. "Go while young fellow, I'm no longer to speak! You know why. I've found you out. Go, while you may, before I forget that you were once honest, once a lad like myself!"

"Father, are you mad?" cried Ruth, astounded at the scene.

"This lad! Slippery-tongued to speak," interrupted the farmer, "and I'm paying her wage with his hand. Ruth! Ruth! I have no time to make a mistake. You're heard me—go!"

"Not until I know what this extraordinary accusation means," responded Walton Brady, and flashing with indignation.

"What does it mean? fairly roared Elliott, losing all control of himself. "You will have the truth, will you! You won't have matters as they are! What does it mean? Dare you ask me, ingrate, ungrateful!

Ruth Elliott turned frightfully pale, but an indignant flush appeared on either cheek.

"Father, I ask you respectfully, I'm not forgot that Mr. Walton is a gentleman."

"A gentleman!" blared out Farmer Elliott. "No, I will him—a thief!"

CHAPTER IV.

DENOUEMENT.

The scene that caused to the wild declamation of Farmer John was a startling tableau.

Somewhere back in Paul Walton's life there had been a time when that proud spirit of his would have sprung to the defense of Ruth, at the crude charge of injustice.

His flashing eyes, his quick-rising breath showed it now, as with clenched hands he stood—not a coward, as if he the author of the daring accusation at his feet.

Then, with superb control, and remembering that the accuser was the father of the woman he loved, the young man faced his aged antagonist, but in clear, steady tones.

"Mr. Elliott, you will regret these unjust words. You are labouring under a terrible mistake. I am no thief!"

Then, firm in the conviction that audacious hypocrisy deserved no fate, with merciless roughness he laid his plot.

He had missed various sums of money for a month past, he said, then quite a large amount.

Some one was in the habit of frequently entering his room and rifling the cabinet in which he kept his money.

At six o'clock that evening he had visited his room, assured himself of the exact contents of the cabinet, and had locked it securely.

Since then, no one had gone into the upper portion of the house except the accused.

At this statement, Dalton's lips moved as if to speak. Then with a start and a glance at Ruth he allowed it to go uncontradicted.

When he went up stairs to obtain the money for the men, Farmer John perceived to his amazement, as he signed the cabinet, that two packages of bank-notes, representing nearly four hundred dollars, were missing.

Ruth and Walton understood grave complications of his supposition. Impulse drew Walton to the room, and deep regarded pillow on the bed directed a search. Ruth, in the hands of the owner of the packages, the one now in his hand.

More than that, on the floor of the room he had picked up a key. It fitted to the cabinet. Paul Dalton was an acquaintanced thief.

"Let criminal my room tonight," was the unswerving accusation; "you stole the money."

"John Elliott," he spoke firmly, almost sadly, "some day you will regret your rash, unjust accusation—the truth concerning this will come to light. Soon. As to Ruth, a heart of stone could not help loving her. Vindicate me from your dread, reputation and happiness. I love your daughter. In troubled spirit I wait. I can stand before all men, by your side, with the proudest moment of his life to change you to bring against me."

"That will never be, Paul Dalton," interrupted the farmer, "I have something to say to you."

The impressive tableau was rudely disturbed by the jeering, lentering words.

The door had opened, and, his face distorted with hate and exultation, the malevolent eyes glowing with the certainty of a mean and crushing triumph, Ralph Prescott entered the room.

"What's this? Dalton, dismissed Farmer John, his brows knit troubledly.

"I've heard your talk from the outside," explained Prescott, glibly. "I've been! The highly indignant gentleman's high-flown jaila, too. He's innocent, is he! Then he's changed from what he once was. Time to find him out, Mr. Rich-its—how to get him out of the house where he's hatred, a hypocrite, a serpent, so long."

"What do you mean?" demanded Farmer John, doubtfully.

"I mean," replied Prescott, his face aflame with concentrated delight and malignity, "that Paul Dalton is worse than a thief!"

"Worse than a thief!" repeated Elliott, excitedly.

"Yes, I repeat it—and I dare him to deny it—with being an eye-witness!"

"Mr. Prescott, I—"

"Infamy's Home.

The Chinese de Chavantie is on a high hill, and in the near background are the slopes of Mount Lome, Lagnet and Cantal. A lovely place it would be, if it had not been cursed by the Fallingent. The avenue to it from Faulingent. The avenue is bordered by poplars, ash and elm trees, all of which were planted by the General. The chateau itself is a rather new building, for it stands on the place of one that was burned in the eighteenth century.

It forms a parallelogram, each side of which is seventy-five feet long and with a height of about forty. The principal front has three lines, each of which is twenty-five feet long and three stories in height. The ground floor is occupied by the dining-room, the salon, the library, the billiard room, the kitchen, the office, and the chapel. The upper portion of the building contains the apartments of the family and the guests, and the lower floors are only used by the servants, who occupy the attics.

The chapel is a small place, with a stained window, representing the Virgin and Child, and a few pews, which are occupied by the family and the guests, and the upper floor are the bedchambers, most of which lady, however, remained unoccupied since 1829, when Lafayette made his last visit to his native place.

The most important room on the floor is about forty-two feet long, and has served in turn for dining hall and ball-room. In it are the family portraits, most of them modern, and several busts, among which are those of Washington, Franklin, Jean Jacques Rousseau, Montesquieu, Voltaire, Cicero, Brutus, Cicero and Socrates. The library has perhaps a thousand volumes, and the books still bear the "ex libris" of the General's arms, and "Qui non?" his proud device.

When He Came Home.

"Why, Jeremiah brown!" exclaimed Mrs. Brown, as her husband returned from a short absence, "is that you alive and in the flesh?"

"Why, in course its my" replied Mr. Brown, testily; "ain't this the place I ought to be, I'd like to know?"

"And you ain't been in no accident and injured?"

"Do I look as if I had?"

"Why, you ain't lost both legs and both arms?"

"No, I ain't."

"Not even one leg or one arm, or an eye?"

"No."

"And you didn't so much as get your head cut off? Why, I'm sure I'm in the house and not work for a month or so!"

"How many times have I got to tell you I'm not sick nothing happened?"

"Well, you do look all right. There you went and paid money for an accident insurance, and I'm sure I'm glad of it, and you haven't done anything to get your head cut off. Why, I'm sure I'm wasted for nothing! And you might have at least broken your leg, and I'm only got killed. Nice manager you are!"

The Indian.

The popular idea of the Indian hanging over the pointing, living on the fruits of the chase and just what he can gather, does not properly characterize all of the tribes. Some Indians of the South and Southwest were excellent agriculturists. In Georgia and Alabama, when the white man first went among the Natchez Indians, they had well cultivated maize, beans, sunflowers, sweet potatoes, melons, pumpkins, and a large number of the native fruits growing in orchards — persimmons, blackberries, mulberry, black walnuts and hazelnuts of the best kind were cultivated and planted by them. Many of the New Mexican and Arizona Indians were also far advanced in the agricultural art.

The Dairy.

In Scotland the dairy was, and in some parts still is, regarded as a drudgery, and it is only of late that can only put his foot on a fully organized dairy, he has hopes of recovery, just as in some other lands some mountain stream or quiet spring is supposed to possess magical powers. Faith, no doubt, has a good deal to do with the cure, and the thought that touching any given object would effect a cure would do much to accomplish the same. It is further hell, and that if the farmer kneels down and utters off the first day of spring a plentiful crop will be the reward.

This more we reflect upon the unspeakable usefulness of the man who stole a fine overcoat, belonging to a distinguished New York clergyman while he was preaching to a Chicago congregation the more firmly do we become convinced that the thief was some bitter and unforgiving St. Lonatan who committed the act in order to bring reproach upon Chicago.

The low volcanic island which rose so suddenly out of the sea near Palermo, Italy, and from which fire was emitted, has entirely disappeared, over the water that covers it having ceased to boil.

DR. TALMAGE'S SERMON.

A PRACTICAL DISCOURSE TO YOUNG MEN.

Lessons to Be Drawn from the Condition of a Man Who Dared Disobey a King—An Illustration of the Value of Character and Gentleness.

Daniel and Darius.

Dr. Talmage took for his subject the character of Daniel and drew from it lessons of sound practical value for the young men. His text was Daniel vi., 3, "Daniel was first."

When I remember can you find anything equal to what Daniel was in reading the Bible? Why, he was the man introduced into the most magnificent and most direction palace of all the earth. The king, wishing to make this young man a prodigy to astonish spectators, orders his attendants to see that he has plenty of meat and wine, and loaded ventures the delicacies and inches on a vegetable diet, refusing everything but pulse and water, wasting back all the royal viands, with a determined "No! I think, I know!" he surpasses all the sages and brilliancy. As the sun rises higher and higher in the firmament, it pushes out all other stars, and if there be any brilliant stars near it is the sun.

Daniel became so great that the king was jealous than on a number of men in promotion to be Prime Minister or Premier of Babylon. Two candidates for the Ministerial of the necklace. But the same over attained such high position without exciting the envy of others, and the same over and was always where the soul is jealously. You see it among self professions and occupations. As every to say you see it as much among the ministry. Some minister of the Gospel is a jealous bitter as hell and hide-bound as a mountain of ice. Even though it blinkers the man who thinks and the blinkers of all his earth. Bitterness and envy themselves.

There were magicians in Babylon, who highly appreciated of their own capacity, thought that they ought to stack a young man as Daniel. They dared not do it in open day, but in the dark. We could manage the public affairs, thought the magicians, if it were the idea of getting Dan. in such a place that we could get rid of him. We could manage the king Babylon. They began to plot his ruin. They began to plot his ruin. They rather the order the more apt to be strong. Ladies, if you have.

These demagogues asked Darius to make an unalterable decree that any man who within thirty days shall ask a petition of any one except the king, shall be put to death. Darius, not suspecting any foul play, made such a decree. The demagogues have accomplished their purpose, for they know that Daniel would stop sending up petitions to his God. Daniel, knowing the law, kneeling down to the decree, went three times a day to his chamber and prayed. Daniel was a man who is condemned to be devoured in the lions' den. Daniel was a man who in the beasts' mouths the best happiness of his life. Daniel was a man who in the law is hurried away toward the lions.

I hear in groan of the monsters, and they open their mouths, and I see their mouth is placed in the groans of the lions, and I see the lions in their bellow. The door is removed and Daniel stands in the pit. The king is all aglow with fiery excitable that sense of the demagogues. The king approaches the defenseless man. Their appetite was sharp with hunger, the stroked their paw, one crunch of their teeth and he would have been lifeless. The first thing a man wants is religion. The second is grit. If you do not want to face wild beasts you must never get to be Prime Minister. If you are one, as a young man, rising to any one respect, I think that you are a big nobodyness, but I wish to say before I quit this thought, look out, for the lions. Young merchants, young lawyers, young physicians, young ministers have much sympathy and kind advice to give them at first, but as you get more and more into manhood and begin to succeed in your different spheres, the sympathy and kind advice of those, young merchants, young lawyers, young physicians, young ministers, how is it there?

I am behind in our subject an exhibition of true decision of character. Hitherto I have remembrance can you find anything equal to what Daniel was in reading the Bible? Why, he was the man introduced into the most magnificent and most direction palace of all the earth. The king, wishing to make this young man a prodigy to astonish spectators, orders his attendants to see that he has plenty of meat and wine, and loaded ventures the delicacies and inches on a vegetable diet, refusing everything but pulse and water, wasting back all the royal viands, with a determined "No! ANOTHER WAY.

How Trouble in a Street Car Once a Big Fellow and a Small Face.

"Fare, please," said the conductor of a South Fifth street car one day to a passenger who was clinging to a strap.

The passenger took out his pocket-book, looked through it and produced a ten-dollar bill.

"It's the smallest I have," he said. "I can't change it, I'm afraid the conductor crafty.

"If you expect to ride you ought to be prepared to pay."

"I am prepared to pay, sir. You're not prepared to make change—that's all."

"The company doesn't expect me to make change for a $10 bill. I couldn't do it anyhow. I haven't $10 about me."

"Then what's to be done? I've got to ride."

"You've got to pay if you do."

"I've offered to pay you."

"And I've told you that I can't change that bill. You turn out something smaller than that or get off."

"I've told you my friend, that I haven't anything smaller."

"Then get off."

The conductor reached up to pull the bell-rope.

"Hold on!"

With the fire of honest indignation blazing in his eyes, the man turned to his fellow-passengers.

"Gentlemen," he said, "it's a shame to put a man off a car when he has plenty of money to pay his fare and is willing to pay it. If this conductor makes me get off car I depend on your love of fair play to help me see that justice is done." Just as sure as he put his foot on the ground with suit for damages and I'll need you for witnesses.

"There's an easier way out of it than that," suggested a sympathetic man in the exterior of the car, taking out his pocket-book. "I'll lend you five cents and it doesn't make any difference whether you ever pay me or not."

"No, no," replied the other, struck by an idea, "but I shall be obliged to you if you will give me change for $10. Any kind will do."

The sympathetic man in the corner counted out small bills and silver coins to the amount of $10, handed them over and took the bill in exchange. The passenger clinging to the strap paid his fare, rode a few blocks further and got off.

And now says the Chicago Tribune, the sympathetic man is hunting for him with blood in his eye and something heavy in his right-hand coat pocket. The ten-dollar bill was a counterfeit.

COMMON TO ALL RACES.

The Love of Finery For Personal Wear Found All over the Globe.

The love of ornament is inherent in the human race announces the Jeweler's Review.

Every body likes to deck his person, from the savage, who wears a round his neck a string of bones, to the society queen, who glitters with a thousand gems.

It is not an ignoble passion, this love of ornament, although there is a strong argument for the possession of reasoning power by animals in this very passion.

Take a dog, for instance. Have you ever noticed what a difference there is in the actions of a dog after it has had put about its neck a collar or ribbon? How proudly it struts!—and how it wants every one of its friends to notice the adornment!

The primal parent flower bird was born with a vain streak. This remarkable bird decks its home nest with all sorts of ornaments, feathers, bits of wool, etc., and when it is in captivity any object which its keeper may throw in the cage are utilized for ornaments—pieces of cloth, glass and other rubbish.

The horse whose trappings are few, steps more proudly than the animal whose harness is mean.

With human beings the desire to better appearance, to look "pretty" as the saying is, is just as laudable an ambition—has been carried out in good taste—as the lamentable fact the contrary and is one of the establishment of fortune.

The beautiful things of this world of ours were not put here for our harm; to love the beautiful is the highest education.

The Store Detective.

Detectives are sometimes like an orchid; they hide their official heads and imagine nobody knows them.

"Why, see those two men who follow us everywhere?" asked one of a trio of ladies of the highest respectability who were 'shadowed' during a crowded day in one of our large dry goods stores.

"Don't pay any attention to them," said the affable floor walker, "they are detectives, but I will see they don't annoy you further."

"I should not think they were very good readers of character," said the lady, indignantly, "or they would know they are wasting their time in following us."

Another lady wore a tight-fitting tailor-made suit, without pockets or hidding places of any sort. Being followed by a man whom she believed to be watching her, she stopped in front of an immense display case of great value and turned suddenly on her unwelcome follower:

"Will you help me secrete that vase and get it out of the store?" she asked in a shop-lifting whisper.

The man was the last and ceased his persecution.—Detroit Free Press.

Hicks' Mean Insinuation.

Mrs. Hicks—That girl I hired this morning is earned to me.

Hicks—That's too bad.

Mrs. Hicks—Why is it too bad?

Hicks—You must be able to keep her.—N. Y. Herald.

Apparently medicine and honesty did not go together in the old days, for the potency of some of the medicaments of old superstitious consisted in their being stolen. The negro still cures warts with a stolen piece of fat bacon, and a stolen potato was long believed to be a specific for rheumatism. Perhaps the strangest charm ever invented by the mind of man was the silver ring which cured epilepsy, the merit of which consisted in its being made out of sixpences stolen from the offertory.

CAPTAIN TRASK.

How One of the Last of the Old Sea-Kings Quelled a Mutiny.

Take, for instance, a commander like Captain Benjamin H. Trask, master successively of the Virginia, Yazoo, Garrick, Jamestown, Switzerland, Saratoga, Wm. F. Storer and Hamilton Fish, for whom when he died, on the 23d of December, 1871, like flags on the shipping in the harbor were at half-mast. "No braver or better man," said one of the newspapers, "ever commanded an American ship. He was about the last of the old sea-kings of the race." This was the kind of man he was. His good ship the Saratoga was about to leave Havre for New York at the time when, in honor of the birth of the Prince Imperial (son of Eugenie and Louis Napoleon), many convicts had been liberated from prison, says Harper's Magazine. None of these reptiles—the ugliest set of mortals he had ever associated with—slipped as soon as on board his vessel, their character and antecedents, of course, quite unknown to the captain. The first day out the new crew were very troublesome, owing in part, doubtless, to the absence of the mate, who was ill in bed, and who died after a few hours. Suddenly the second mate (now Captain) H. Trask, son of the commander, heard his father call out, "Take hold of the wheel," and going forward, saw him holding a sailor at arm's-length. The mutineer was soon lodged in the cockpit but all hands, the watch below and the watch on deck, came at, as if obeying a signal, with threatening faces and clinched fists. The captain, methodical and cool, ordered his son to run a line across the deck, between him and the rebellious crew, and to arm the second and the third mate.

"Now go forward and get to work," he said to the gang, who immediately made a demonstration to break the line. "The first man who passes that rope," added the captain, drawing his pistol, "I will shoot. I am going to call you one by one, if two come at a time, I will shoot both."

The first to come forward was a big fellow in a red shirt. He had hesitated to advance when called, but the "I will give you one more invitation, sir," of the captain forfeited him with the remainder constituted so large were his wrists that ordinary shackles would not go around them, and ankle shackles took their place. Shackled to the second and third mates to the cabin, he was made to lie flat on his stomach while staples were driven through the chains of his handcuff so pin him down. After eighteen of the prisoners had been similarly treated, the captain himself withdrew to the cabin and lay on a sofa, telling the second mate to wake him in an hour. The next minute he was fast asleep, with the stapled ruffians around him.

THE AMERICAN EAGLE

How He Came to Be the Emblem of the United States.

It has been proposed lately to ornament the tip of the flag-staffs used in the regular army of the United States with a representation in metal of the bald eagle, which is the emblem of our republic, says the Family Companion. The staffs of regimental standards now terminate with a pike. The eagle has already done duty in this way upon the standards of other nations, and particularly upon those of Rome and France. The American eagle, however, is of a different variety from the eagles of France and the Roman republic. It is of an American variety—the "bald," or white-headed eagle.

The ordinary name of the bird is a misnomer. It is not bald, but simply white-headed, the feathers on the head and neck of adult specimens being snowy white.

The honor of first naming this bird as the emblem of the United States belongs to John J. Audubon, the naturalist, whose name will be forever associated with our bird life. He called the bald eagle the "Washington eagle," because, he said, "Washington was brave, as the eagle is. Like it, too he was the terror of his enemies, and his fame extended from pole to pole, just as the eagle soars of the mightiest of the feathered tribe. If America has reason to be proud of her Washington, so has she to be proud of her great eagle."

The bald eagle, with wings extended, or "displayed proudly," as it is called in heraldry, was made the emblem of the United States in the year 1782.

Benjamin Franklin did not approve the choice. The bald eagle he declared, was a very evil-disposed bird, who would not earn an honest living, but got his livelihood by violence and deceit and pillage. He did not consider such a creature the worthy emblem of people who had valiantly driven out of their country all kinds of birds of prey.

Franklin's critical judgment did not prevail. It is true, as he declared, that the bald eagle lives chiefly by robbery and theft, swooping down upon the osprey and snatching from his industrious bird the fish that it has just caught. But the eagle on occasion, can take fish out of the water with great skill.

The eagle is moreover, a bird of dignity as well as of bravery and beauty, and its strong attachment to the young and to its home certainly recommends it as an American emblem.

Too Trusting.

Down on South Broadway, standing beside a stairway which leads upstairs to the office of an electro-medical company, says the New York World, there stands a little glass case in which is displayed the life-size figure of a human leg from the thigh down. The other day two very well-dressed young men were standing in front of the case. Two or three other people were staring over their shoulders to see what it was that made the noise.

Hastily the young man said to the other, very solemnly:

"I'm free to admit that leg will begin to grow."

His companion looked at him very wisely, pursed his lips and nodded his head. Then they both walked away. The other people stood in front of the case for half an hour waiting for the leg to move. Suddenly a thought spread to strike one of them. Then the same thought occurred to another member of the group, and so, one by one, they silently moved away.

MORTGAGE SALE.

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed by John W. Lloyd and Ella Lloyd, his wife, both of Charlevoix county, Michigan, dated the 8th day of December, 1888, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for Charlevoix County, Michigan, on the 10th day of December, 1888, in Liber 2 of Mortgages, page 400, upon which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date hereof the sum of Three Hundred Dollars, principal and interest, and no proceedings have been instituted to recover the money secured by said mortgage, or any part of it; Now, therefore, by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and the statute in such case made and provided, notice is hereby given that said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount due on said mortgage, with interest and costs, at public vendue, at the south door of the court house in Charlevoix, Michigan, on the 16th day of July, 1892, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of said day, which said premises are described in said mortgage as follows, to wit: The south one-half of the south-east quarter of the south-west quarter of section twenty-six (south half of lot four) in Township of Hayes, County of Charlevoix, Michigan, according to the United States survey thereof. Dated this 15th day of April, A. D. 1892. Subject to the claim that one map from date on the 15th day of April, A. D. 1892, the mortgagee, or his attorney, will take place at the front door of the Court House, in Boyne City, Charlevoix County, Mich., that the being the place of holding the Circuit Court in said County, on the 16th day of August, A. D. 1892, at the place and time in said notice mentioned, and that the said premises will be sold to the highest bidder

A Trip Eastward.

To traverse territory that is new to you is always interesting, but to explore regions strange to your eyes lying within thirty miles of your heathstone is an event by no means ordinary, especially when you do not cross the boundaries of your own county.

Such an experience was ours last week. On Wednesday evening we joined County Clerk Kerns at Boyne City, spending the evening at his pleasant home. On Thursday morning, in company with that official, we headed for Clarion, arriving there at ten o'clock. Stopping at this lively little manufacturing center but a few minutes, we crossed the railroad, eastward through Melrose township, stopping at Mr. Merrills for dinner, into Chandler and through the heart of that fine Township; thence into Springvale and around into Melrose again, drinking in the surpassing beauties of nature; now and then halting at some sparkling spring or rippling brook to refresh ourselves and the horses.

Charlevoix county embraces in her domain no finer territory than these eastern townships, particularly Chandler. Melrose has better advantages of water, as has also Springvale, but the forests of Chandler would entrance an artist. Much of it is as level as a floor, with very little undergrowth. In our imagination it resembled some vast well-kept wooded preserve. Tall, beautiful maples predominate in its wealth of timber.

But Chandler is by no means a timbered wilderness. We passed as fine farms as can be found in any other portion of the county—farms showing conspicuous evidences of thrift, and abundant returns of labor. The soil is rich and the roads creditable.

Although Chandler leads "the east" in these elements of natural wealth, Melrose and Chandler are not far behind. The entire eastern half of Charlevoix county has every natural element of a farming region, which an industrious people are fast developing.

Eight o'clock Thursday evening found us back at Clarion, having driven about twenty-five miles. At nine o'clock Friday morning we were at Alexander Milne's, on Bear Lake, fishing for pickerel, and, after a bountiful dinner at Mrs. Milne's table, we started homeward with a pounds of fine fish. At the foot of the lake we looked through the extensive bowl factory of A. K. Smith, around which is clustered a village of no small dimensions, and into which a branch of the G. R. & I. is already graded, and which will be in operation this summer. This project, which, in the din of C. & W. M. excitement in our own locality, we have given but little notice, promises much to that portion of our county lying contiguous to Bear Lake. Rail connection with that fine water-way, with its heavily wooded, sloping shores, must prove of incalculable benefit to the fortunate inhabitants of that favored section. Bear Lake will soon be something more than a charming resort for sportsmen.

The evening found us again under the hospitable roof of the Commercial hotel at Boyne City, weary, but benefitted by the trip,—benefitted not less physically than in an increased knowledge of the beauties and resources of our own county. The pleasure of the trip was greatly enhanced by the companionship of that most companionable and intelligent gentleman, Dr. Willis G. Kerns, who knows everybody from Pine Lake to the eastern limit of the county, and who is welcomed in every home as a skillful physician and true gentleman.

STRAYED.—Came to my enclosure May 25th, one pig. Owner will call and prove property, pay charges and take away. JOHN C. MILLER.

The anti-Hill movement in N. Y. state has attained large proportions, and is said to be gaining. But this same movement is in effect an anti-Cleveland movement, through its promoters do not seem to understand it in that light. The hotter the Cleveland-Hill fight wages in N. Y. the smaller will be the chances of Cleveland to secure the nomination. Mr. Hill's hold upon the democratic politicians of N. Y. is not going to relax because of a counter movement on behalf of Grover Cleveland. The boilers may send an anti-Hill delegation to Chicago and that delegation may be recognized, but the certainty that Mr. Hill's revenge will be a terrible one if he is thus ignored will defeat the nomination of Grover Cleveland unless the delegates to the convention go Cleveland-mad. David B. Hill is in a position to rule or ruin his party. He is evidently determined to do one or the other, and is not a man to be foiled aside by trifles. He has been camping on the presidential trail for to these many years and proposes to have the nomination this year or dictate it. He is undoubtedly the shrewdest political organizer in the country.

Isn't it strange that the tariff reforms press has quite avoided all mention of the fact that the Hon. T. Jefferson Coolidge, who has just been appointed minister to France, is a great grandson of Thomas Jefferson? Mr. Coolidge is a enthusiastic believer in Jeffersonian principles of Democracy, and always a member of the Democratic party until 1888; but in that year Cleveland's free-trade message drove him to the Republicans. Free trade never did harmonize with Jeffersonian principles.

The Boot and Shoe Recorder, discussing the results of reciprocity, observes that "the closest scrutiny of the markets fails to show the slight est changes in prices as a result of the imposition of duties ordered in the president's proclamation of March 15." Prices, if anything, are lower, although the duty imposed on hides imported from the countries in question is 1½ cents a pound. Another free-trade theory demolished!

Philip Howe had a barn-raising this week.

A. R. Struthers marketed his clip of wool at Petoskey.

Our farmers are about through planting corn.

We have commenced peeling bark, and hope our neighbors will keep still about it until we get through.

Some of our ladies have revived an old custom, that is obsolete except in the backwoods districts of Pike Co., Missouri, of holding surprise parties. A party was planned one day last week to be held at the home of one of the ladies, and when the surprise arrived they found everything as quiet as a country church-yard, a bull-dog chained to the front door, and a large card posted up, displaying the following legend: "Beware of the dog!" There was a surprise party anyhow.

Thirty years ago we bought the first kerosene oil that we used for illuminating purposes. We paid ninety-five cents a gallon for it. We still own the car we carried it home in, and it is serviceable yet. We had a five-gallon can filled by one of our merchants the other day, at nine cents a gallon; it was not squawbuck oil, either. Just think of it; a quarter of a barrel of oil for the price we formerly paid for one gallon! How would it do to lay it to the McKinley bill?

Northern Michigan News.

Boyne Citizen: His many friends in this vicinity will be pleased to learn that Ex-postmaster F. M. Abraham will shortly return to Boyne City and make this place his permanent home.

Four men armed to the teeth are cruising along the Lake Michigan shore between Sleeping Bear and Cat Head points, stopping at small places and carrying off property. The sheriff and a posse are in pursuit.

Henry Johnson is building a vessel Bennonia with which he proposes to navigate Lake Michigan. A fifty-foot keel and seventeen feet beam are the dimensions of the craft. He will float her down the Betsey river to the Lake.

A couple of trappers who came into the "Soo" the other day sold their catch for $400. They caught 65 beaver 2 bears and 2 cubs, 6 fishers, 20 martens, 15 minks and a number of muskrats. They say some kinds of fur-bearing animals are on the increase, particularly marten.

The gravel taken from the pit in this village goes north now, and the stretch between here and Central Lake is pretty well covered. The steam shovel which was located south of here has been loested north of Central Lake and the ballasting will follow the track-layers closely.—Bruce.

It has recently been generally reported through the State press that the Michigan Central railroad has made contract to carry all of David Ward's timber the amount being set at 1,200,000,000 feet to Bay City. This report is an error. The foundation however is that a son of Mr. Ward's, lumbering a piece of pine below Gaylord, on the M. C. Rj, of about 12,000,000 feet has contracted with the Michigan Central to carry his logs to Bay City.

The 20th Elk Rapids people were started by a terrific explosion quickly followed by the fire alarm. The hose companies were out in a twinkling and upon investigation it was found that an alcohol tank at the chemical works had burst, quite seriously injuring John Bowman, who was showing two ladies, Mrs. Larenger and Miss Duromme through the works. It seems that in going through the alcohol house he lifted the cover off from the man hole and held the lantern over it.

THE STEEL ALL DOWN.

The Iron Horse Creeps In From the South Saturday—A Trip to Inspect—Smallest Lake in the Cabs.

A continuous line of steel now connects Charlevoix with the rest of the world! Charlevoix is in touch with the outside, and has felt the pulse-throbs conveyed to her through the iron sinews of commerce.

At about nine o'clock Saturday morning, the construction train, pulled by C. & W. M. engine No. 144, with J. T. Cunningham at the throttle, S. Murphy at firebox, W. Hartford conductor, and Dan Kennedy in charge of the track-layers, slowly crept across the Stover bridge and toward the lake-front. At four o'clock the last rail was laid on the extension, excepting that required on the bridge and its approaches. The interesting event was witnessed by a crowd from down town, and was announced by the shrill and long continued blasts of the locomotive's whistle, and the joyful response echoed back. Why should not the welkin ring? Was not our deliverance wrought? The sight of a locomotive standing upon the grade in front of the Belvedere hotel, meant more than the landing of No. 143 upon the disjoined north side. HURRAH!

At eleven a. m. the engine returned to Ellsworth for a car-load of steel, and by invitation of engineer Cunningham, the SENTINEL scribe accepted a seat in the cab. Southward we hitched at a fourteen mile gait. Through Marion we sped, the whistle emptying the houses, likewise the pig-pens; the occupants of the former so joyfully acute the welcome monster, and the latter from astonishment or terror. Out past familiar landmarks; amid scenes old to our eyes, yet now viewed as in a dream. Through Marion by rail. Shades of Bert Bird Burns and Anthony D. Hardy! Out past "old Joe" and Johnny O'Neill's, in sight of the farms of John Ward, Wm. Black and Wm. Stevens, we are "home" to Banks, surrounded by no less familiar scenes. Down through the valley of the Orr creek; along the well-remembered hillsides, and across highways and byways we trod a quarter of a century ago.

At noon we pulled into picturesque little Ellsworth, nestled upon a beautiful curve of the beautiful Intermediate, but a short time ago a forest-bound lake. Ellsworth will be heard from. With a location of surpassing beauty; its grand timber and fertile soil, it has without doubt fair prospects for the future. At 1 p. m. Ed. Fox we dined in the boarding-car, and at one o'clock were on our way back, and, in less than an hour were at "the front" again.

There is inspiration in the thought that, practically, the last spike is driven that gives us unbroken connection by rail with Grand Rapids, Detroit and Chicago.

Now, friends and brethren, watch our smoke.

THE WATER WORKS.

The Contract Given to the Lansing Iron and Engine Works.

After careful investigation into the merits of the various competing systems represented in the recent water-works bids, the Village Council last Friday evening awarded to the Lansing Iron and Engine Works the Charlevoix water-works contract. The contract price is $19,975, which, however, does not include well or buildings.

The contract gives the Village the choice between three standard patterns of pumps, but a set of two duplex Worthington pumps, with a capacity of 1,000,000 gallons every 24 hours, will probably be selected. The two boilers will be of steel, each 14 feet long, of 60 inch shell. The mains on Bridge street, and to the pump house, will be of eight inch pipe, with ten inch pipe under the river. On all other streets the mains will be of four inch pipe. About 3½ miles of streets will be covered. No definite arrangements have yet been made for the erection of the buildings.

The work commence with Newnham & Co. has been cancelled, and the job given to T. Mason, of Bay City. Both contractors are expected on the ground next week.

CHARLEVOIX WILL CELEBRATE.

And the Style and Extent of the Demonstration Will Amount Too.

A project took form last week that will result in the biggest Fourth of July celebration in Charlevoix this year that has ever taken place in Northern Michigan.

From the railroad officials at Grand Rapids comes information that they desire to co-operate with us in making the day an "event of the occasion. Wm. Alden Smith, the Company's attorney, a speaker of State reputation, will deliver the address, and excursion trains will be run here from the south. A program of races, on land and water, and other attractive features will be provided for, and the event be made one of great glory for Charlevoix.

The Village Council, last Friday evening appointed a committee to take the initiatory steps, and a meeting has been called for to-night at the village hall to make a concerted move in the matter.

The occasion is one that calls for an unusual effort, and every citizen should inflate his enthusiasm and be present.

CURRENT MARINE NOTES.

The steamer Joe, of Muskegon, arrived here last week Thursday and at once began running on the north-east of the bridge, and work will be commenced at once on the track, with a view of putting it in comparatively good shape for the coming 4th of July.

The location is a most desirable one, and possesses every advantage for fair or racing purposes. The road to it from the village is as level and hard as a paved boulevard. The site selected is equally as level, and the soil of such a nature that no material bill that on the spot will be required. It is near the State road railroad crossing, and under the shelter of the Mount Macsawba range of bluffs.

Charlevoix may congratulate herself on having taken another big stride in the direction of progress. It is another link added to the chain of recent events of so great importance to Charlevoix, and the gentlemen who have so successfully consummated this enterprise are deserving of the thanks of the community.

Railroad Notes.

The steam shovel is at work in the Hull gravel-pit, and the Norrac outfit is hauling ballast.

No. 109, on the north side, is no good now. That's only a "crub" line.

No. 10 engine was up from the south Sunday.

The Iron bridge force went to Petoskey Sunday and put in a bridge across Bear River.

The big bridge will be ready for trains the first of next week, and Seymour's work on the south approach will not be far behind. If bad weather does not prevent, a crossing will be made the last of next week.

The frame of the passenger depot is up.

Hastings from Hayes.

Mrs. Peter Compo will start to Oklahoma with her family next Sunday evening.

Mrs. Jeanette Myers returned from Pontiac last week.

Miss Francis Rose returned to Chicago last Saturday.

Lilt.: Jimmie Sunderland fell on a splinter of piece of timber a few days since, and some of the splinters penetrated his left eye. Dr. Owen removed two small splinters from the eyeball. The probability is he will not lose his sight.

Sylvester Minier removed to Petoskey last Monday.

Mr. Garnire has squashes that he has kept by his cold storage process.

The total assessed valuation of Hayes is $1,048,0. Resident real estate, $64,565; non resident, $46,200; $3,865.

Decoration Day and Fourth of July always occur on the same day of the week.

Wm. Gray's team disappeared last Sunday evening—either strayed or stolen. He has had no trace of them since.

A Petoskey man has cultivated clove until he can raise the four, five and seven-leaved variety to order and has proposed to sell the plants to romantic maidens who want to surprise their friends by their skill in picking clover-leaves. This shows how all kinds of vegetables may be improved in size, flavor and quality by careful selection and development. The cabbage was once only an open-leaved, green-tasting collection of loose leaves. That delicious succulent variety was only a few years ago a poisonous wild plant, and so was the parsnip.

IT IS SECURED.

A Site For a Pair Ground and Racing Course Purchased Yesterday.

Quietly, but none the less persistently, a movement has been on foot for some time past, for the securing of a suitable piece of land near the village, for a half-mile racing track, and such other purposes as are suggested in the nature of the project.

Yesterday several prominent citizens, acting in the interest of the scheme, bought of Amos Fox the thirty acres of ground lying near the Waisna-guance hill, about a mile north-east of the bridge, and work will be commenced at once on the track, with a view of putting it in comparatively good shape for the coming 4th of July.

LIFE

There are a million things to scoop into this world to-day and to-morrow, and known only to God. Some will carry to success the corn, barley, the cotton, flax and silk, and others will carry to failure the same. And if we knew beforehand who this life race is caught in faster and in the, and who will be overtaken by the fleet, we could save much time and lost bread. Drain up our clock and gain to bed.

WHERE I SPENT MY MONEY.

BY MARIEL A. MARLON.

HAD been making up my mind for two years that I would go abroad, and, when a woman says making up her mind, it takes that length of time to do it, you can usually conclude that she means that she is making up her purse. This was just it. I had ten-cent banks, five-cent banks and penny banks, and all the little chance in a time those, and at the end of the month they were all complicated and the money locked up so that I had to hold to that which was to be used for going abroad. When I saw a lovely new material and felt that I should enjoy a Peck Brown Silk, I generally found the shoulders and say in a most contemptuous way, "Wait until I get on this other silk; I'll get these things for almost nothing."

Getting things for almost nothing is a feminine vice. Whether the average woman is not sufficiently relieved with honesty in early life, or just as the reason nobody knows, but a woman never stops to consider that, when things are gotten below their value somebody is being cheated, and therefore this is for almost nothing comes under the head of petty theft. But getting things for nothing on the other side of the water is, after all, a method of spoiling the Egyptians, and consequently serious traffic and piracy. After all the saving and the talking and the waiting and the hoping, the eventful day came when I sailed away, robed as people are sensible, and with the determination to come back possessing beautiful gowns, as well as those of her daughters, made of Irish poplin dresses, it might be got on the market again. And of the Irish poplin I shall speak in the next chapter. I do not think she is falling everything is her power to push Irish lace, and that the fashionable ladies have a trimming of it, while innumerable court dresses are decorated with it.

Determined to argue it out, I answered, "But you see things are cheaper over."

"Will you promise me not to buy any material that are cheaper than the same labrics would be in your own town?"

I promised without a minute's hesitation.

The very day after I reached London I started out for my shopping. First of all I wanted some pretty cotton dresses. You know the kind—calyces, sateens and a printed lawn. I found them pretty enough, but I clothed my pocketbook just a little bit lighter when I heard the prices. The one which I have sketched and marked No. 1, and which is an ordinary black and white cotton, I paid 12 cents a yard for. Of course, I prefer it in a color, black and white, pink and white, the cream effects and the dark colors, but I paid 12 cents a yard. I could duplicate this in Philadelphia for 25 cents, but in London for the same, and in New York, at one shop for 24 cents and at another for 19 cents, so I concluded not to fill my trunk with that material.

Then, as I had read in English novels of heroines who looked like angels in lawn dresses, I thought I would get one. I was the place for them and the one I saw in there those novels, I gotten drew in my mind's eye a sketch of a pink flower in a fine wreath upon it made to look like a sweetness of Americans, in usual lace and pink ribbon. I had seen just the sort of stuff I wanted the other side, but decided to buy it, preferring to wait until I found a "something" in London. The English sample is sketched at No. 2; the price is 18 cents a yard; that which I had seen in Philadelphia was light and sweet. After I got to my hotel, was tempted to buy the same, but I thought I would wait for a cheaper silks, but they were poor in quality, and would have lasted but a little while, and every woman knows how very, very mean looking is a shabby black silk.

We found handkerchiefs about the same price as in this country; that is, the nice ones.

Vellings, collars and cuffs, and the very small sleeves of the fashion, did not vary much in price, but as in London the Princess of Wales, or some great beauty, will set a fashion, make use style popular and lose a run on it for the season to the advantage of the Shop-keepers, they do not so often have great quantities of small belongings left on their hands which must be sold, no matter at what price.

In black materials—cashmeres, henrietta cloths, grenadines and lace brilliantines, I found a great variety and very low prices. Black cashmere I saw in London for 20 cents a yard and in Boston, in New York or Chicago it costs. White cashmere, 39 inches wide, pale blue, pink, and the various standard colors, sells for 75 cents a yard, and I can get it cents as good and for less money, in either Philadelphia, Boston or New York.

It was rather a sad experience, this going over and expecting to get more for little, this having in my belief in the great desire of the English people to sell one much for nothing, shabbed but, after all, I had to confess it was a good time, and I did have the most courage based on my word and bring my purchases home with me.

On the steamer I met the same man who had seven one such good advice on my way over. He looked at me and said: "Well?"

And I answered, "I am bringing my money back to the land of the free."

Being an American gentleman he did not say, "I told you so," but he could not resist asking, as he took my hand and bade me good-by, "Where did you get your gloves?"

I never had a lady friend crying a fortnight, but I looked in his face and said, "Boston."

"In New York. The English gloves are unshapely in the fingers and thumbs and they are not half so well made, and the prices are higher. I bought a French one, in New York you can get them to fit all kinds of hands, long fingers and short ones, broad and narrow ones. You can buy gloves in London for 50 cents a pair, but they are not worth wearing; they are old-fashioned in color, badly cut, and altogether undesirable. In Paris they make a great ado about making gloves to order for you, but they can do that in New York, do it just as well, and the colors are novel as those shown in Paris. Since I have been away I have learned what you mean by patriotism. I have learned how the women of a country can make it prosperous and great, and I have come home determined to do my share in encouraging home industries. There is no country in the world, I believe he can do anything he wants to, and I think it is anything that he knows how to do on the other side that we can do as well on this side, and we need to buy that knowledge and to have it taught in our manufactories. We can import knowledge and pay a proper price for it, but we can not import wheels in Philadelphia at a factory where they make the best wheels, and have to pay duties and rents, and yet be able to sell at a profit. I know perfectly good gold watch made in the famous Swiss watchmaking district, and it will cost a great more than one would on the other side of the ocean, and I want at home, that I may be able to have a pretty watch made in which to go walking. First of all we want to a famous tailor shop to see what they would make a suit for, because I think, all seriously speaking, we are lovely. We seem found at Paris, and I have learned that it is not always what their seem, for the simple, after all, fresh of the pictures was extremely dowdy in reality, and after looking around it was decided that the shop run by these same people in America had another branch, a much better make coat, and that the little Frenchman who had come to be more amusing, was probably the material to the female form divine. Why? Because American women are not willing to look on the streets like dowdies that the English women do. The check setting marked No. 3 in my picture will cost in London 15 cents a yard, in New York, Boston and Philadelphia it can be got for 50 cents; that's 35 cents difference on the yard.

"Gorge," said I, "We have always heard of it. We will give a dinner to it. If we don't of anything else, a dark blue serge, it is so ladylike and so neutral, so naive, and so altogether desirable." We gave quite a supper-party to it, and we were sure that it would be cheaper than any other dress we could get in Boston. We found it, not heavy in weight, not closely woven, indeed, one of the party called it "sheer." Its price was 25 cents a yard, and a friend who had been picked up on the way had on a silver gat like it, the material of which had been bought in Philadelphia for 37 cents a yard. Later on it was discovered that New York furnished it for 30 and Chicago for 35.

I did'nt want to go home without a single new frock, so knowing that the English were great on tennis, and as most every dressmaker you approached when you if you don't want a tennis costume, I determined to get one. The English sample is sketched at No. 1. It is a plaid, with lines of red and blue and brown going over its white ground. I met one friend with a vest, and at a fine class store at home I could get just the same thing for the same money. Now all these samples that I have drawn, and that I am talking about, do not come from extravagant places, but in small shops, the shops frequented by the great middle class, to which you and I, my friend, belong. Many of these wire samples quoted as bargains. Just what bargains they were you can see.

My experience as the experience of hundreds of women who do not stop to think that in going over and spending their money in a strange land, they are unpatriotic, and that they are actually fashionably taking the bread from the workers in their own country. As a people we are young, but we have all the air and energy, and we can make just as good, stuffs as we can buy, and we are side, but we won't make them until we are encouraged in it. It is a delicate thing the most sort to plant over material be, "imported" is a patrondom of the best to show a good fabric, and to claim that it was designed and made at home. The women of this country can do so much toward making it the greatest in the world, first by guiding the men in what they should go and next by encouraging home industries. There is no country in the world where the home and of there is anything that home industries if the factories were at work supplied with the energy and the ingenuity of the women of America would be as patriotic as were their great-grandmothers, and decline to wear anything that was not made or brought by American looms and sold in American stores.

I had written home some of my experiences about getting things for nothing, and in return a letter had come to me from a friend, a lady, a lady in silk, the black silk that almost every woman likes to have in her wardrobe for it is a good suited for so many occasions, and I quote from it: "Do you know that the Queen of England is going to visit Philadelphia? Yes, I know you do, and I will buy my gown at home." For the quality that in New York is $1.62 I should have to pay $1.70 in London; for that which was $1.70 there was $1.75 here; for the cheaper silks, but they were poor in quality, and would have lasted but a little while, and every woman knows how very, very mean looking is a shabby black silk.

We found handkerchiefs about the same price as in this country; that is, the nice ones.

Vellings, collars and cuffs, and the very small sleeves of the fashion, did not vary much in price, but as in London the Princess of Wales, or some great beauty, will set a fashion, make use style popular and lose a run on it for the season to the advantage of the Shop-keepers, they do not so often have great quantities of small belongings left on their hands which must be sold, no matter at what price.

The check setting marked No. 3 in my picture will cost in London 15 cents a yard, in New York, Boston and Philadelphia it can be got for 50 cents; that's 35 cents difference on the yard.

"Gorge," said I, "We have always heard of it. We will give a dinner to it. If we don't of anything else, a dark blue serge, it is so ladylike and so neutral, so naive, and so altogether desirable." We gave quite a supper-party to it, and we were sure that it would be cheaper than any other dress we could get in Boston. We found it, not heavy in weight, not closely woven, indeed, one of the party called it "sheer." Its price was 25 cents a yard, and a friend who had been picked up on the way had on a silver gat like it, the material of which had been bought in Philadelphia for 37 cents a yard. Later on it was discovered that New York furnished it for 30 and Chicago for 35.

I did'nt want to go home without a single new frock, so knowing that the English were great on tennis, and as most every dressmaker you approached when you if you don't want a tennis costume, I determined to get one. The English sample is sketched at No. 1. It is a plaid, with lines of red and blue and brown going over its white ground. I met one friend with a vest, and at a fine class store at home I could get just the same thing for the same money. Now all these samples that I have drawn, and that I am talking about, do not come from extravagant places, but in small shops, the shops frequented by the great middle class, to which you and I, my friend, belong. Many of these wire samples quoted as bargains. Just what bargains they were you can see.

My experience as the experience of hundreds of women who do not stop to think that in going over and spending their money in a strange land, they are unpatriotic, and that they are actually fashionably taking the bread from the workers in their own country. As a people we are young, but we have all the air and energy, and we can make just as good, stuffs as we can buy, and we are side, but we won't make them until we are encouraged in it. It is a delicate thing the most sort to plant over material be, "imported" is a patrondom of the best to show a good fabric, and to claim that it was designed and made at home. The women of this country can do so much toward making it the greatest in the world, first by guiding the men in what they should go and next by encouraging home industries. There is no country in the world where the home and of there is anything that home industries if the factories were at work supplied with the energy and the ingenuity of the women of America would be as patriotic as were their great-grandmothers, and decline to wear anything that was not made or brought by American looms and sold in American stores.

A STRANGE FACT.

Authors and Artists Prefer Publishers to Unfavorable Press Notices.

The dirging of newspaper notices for people whose names are frequently appear in print has gotten to be such a business that there are several firms in New York alone which drive a profitable business from this source to the harmless vanity of people.

A stand in one of the professional "clippers" a few days ago, says the Chicago Tribune, was visited by a number and twenty people in general notoriety and in the course of an hour the following conversation took place:

"You may be surprised, but we 'clip' notices for fully 95 per cent. of the famous authors of the day. You see it saves them the trouble of reading a great mass of papers, or of worrying their publishers to see if there are notices of their books. Some of the authors are peculiar in the orders which they give. "One of the best known writers of the day is important and his order is to send him notices of any book written about himself or his works, good, bad or indifferent, so long as they are not in the nature of libelous screeds. He will have to send everything that is printed kind and by a man of reputation, and the fact that he is a famous author is sufficient to make him read them. Some writers don't care to see what we have found notices and their orders call for only such of them as are talking about, do not come from extravagant places, but in small shops, the shops frequented by the great middle class, to which you and I, my friend, belong. Many of these wire samples quoted as bargains. Just what bargains they were you can see.

A PROFITABLE TALK.

OUR SPECIAL REPORTER SECURES THE FACTS.

He Determined to Thoroughly Investigate a Subject That Is Causing Much Comment, and He Was Rewarded.

New York Sun.

Two days ago one of the most prominent physicians of this city, who is well known in scientific circles, was asked to make an address at a gymnastic talk and a swinn much comment. Yesterday he was asked by a reporter to be the contents of the letter, and he fully consented to be a reporter. He said he did this, but he be continued a number of questions which he had put to the reporter, in which little has been a miracle had been performed.

So important was the entire subject, he says that I determined to investigate it to the bottom, and therefore I sent for the reporter. He, the physician, continued, "I have found that the physicians mentioned in my letter will be pleased to see the reporter." Mr. Eaves has made quite a name for himself in the profession, but the reporter, appreciative of art and the fact that he is a man of reputation, "Mr. Eaves, I want to know that your wife has had a best seller in the profession." The gentleman thought a moment, and the expression of pleasure passed over his face. "When I think," he said, "of what I have done in the profession I feel that I have gotten a little ahead of my fellow gratitude. Nearly three years ago she was the author of a little book called 'Hints to Mothers,' and, as I said, we want to be best sellers, and we want to be best sellers." The reporter then left Mr. Eaves and United States district attorney, and he said, "I am sorry that I have to be a reporter." Mr. Eaves said, "I am sorry that we will strive till the election next November to have the reporter do, for ever and ever. Amen."

"That is, we will fight in no better than the church on this subject of silence in a public way, but in other ways we are not so silent." Mr. Eaves said, "I have had a number of letters from the reporter." The reporter said, "I have had a number of letters from the reporter." The reporter said, "I have had a number of letters from the reporter." The reporter

The oldest living white resident of the Grand Traverse region is Lewis Miller, of Charlevoix, the subject of this sketch. If all were written that could be written of the life history of Mr Miller, there would be enough for a six volume novel. Mr. Miller was so long and so closely identified with the early history of the Grand Traverse region that his name frequently occurs in the "History of the Grand Traverse Region," by Dr. S. L. Lewis, and published in the Herald a few years ago. What is given below is largely taken from this history. Mr. Lewis writes:

In the fall of 1841, an event occurred that must have created a little flutter of excitement in the quiet and isolated settlement at the Mission. It was on a pleasant morning in September that the little schooner Supply came into the harbor, having on board as passengers, besides Mr. and Mrs. Allaughaby and their infant daughter, Kenilletta, two persons whose names have since become intimately associated with the events of the early history of the Grand Traverse country. Those two persons were Deacon Jos. Daisse and Lewis Miller.

Lewis Miller was an orphan, left alone to make his way in the world. His birth-place was Waterloo, Canada West; the date of his birth, September 11, 1824. The year 1839 found him in Chicago. From that city, in 1840, he made his way to Mackinac. Here he became acquainted with the Daisses. A strong friendship grew up between he and Mr and Mrs. Daisse. When, in 1841, Deacon Daisse received his appointment as Indian farmer, and commenced preparations for removal to his new field of labor, Miller, then seventeen years of age, resolved to accompany him, more for the novelty of the thing, than for any definite purpose with reference to the future. Except the children who came with their parents, he was the first white settler in the Grand Traverse country who did not come in consequence of appointment from the Presbyterian Board or the Mackinac Indian agency. At this time the fur trade, with headquarters at Mackinac, was still profitable. To carry on trade with the Indians successfully and profitably, involved a great deal of hard labor. Frequent journeys had to be made to Mackinac, and to various points along the shore, at all seasons of the year. When the lake was open, Indian canoes or Mackinac boats were used; when it was closed, there was no way but to travel on snow-shoes, on the ice or along the beach.

The winter journeys were always attended with hardship; sometimes with danger. Mr. Miller was usually accompanied by a man in his employ, and not unfrequently by two—half-breeds or Indians. Whenever overtaken by night, a camping place was selected on the shore, where there was plenty of fuel at hand, and where some thicket would do a measure, break the fury of the wintry wind. With their snow shoes for shovels, the travelers cleared away the snow down to the surface of the ground—not an easy task when, as was sometimes the case, it was three feet or more in depth. Then evergreen boughs were set up around the cleared space as a further protection from the wind, and a thick carpet of twigs was spread on the ground. A fire was built, the kettle hung above it and tea made. After supper the tired wanderers, each wrapped in two or three Mackinac blankets, lay down to rest. On one of his journeys to Mackinac, in the depth of winter, Mr. Miller and his companions waded Pine River, where Charlevoix is now situated, both going and returning. Stopping over at Little Traverse, when on a boat journey in December, Mr. Miller was informed by the Indians that a vessel had gone ashore, near the "Big Stone," of Little Traverse Bay. It was already dark, but, procuring a boat and two Indians to row, he lost no time in crossing the bay to the scene of the disaster. He found the vessel without disunity. There was no one remaining on board but a light could be seen from among the trees some distance back from the beach. Making his way to it, he found gathered round a camp fire the crew of the vessel, which proved to be the Champion, and eighteen passengers. Had he dropped from the clouds into their midst, the company would have been scarcely more surprised. He was immediately overwhelmed with questions as to who he was, where he came from, and especially where they were. Neither captain, crew, nor passengers had any definite notion of the locality they were in. Learning their exact position, they set about making arrangements to get out of the wilderness. The captain willingly sold to Mr. Miller, at a low price, such supplies as the latter wished to purchase. Some of them bought boats of the Indians, and made their way to Mackinac. A party, led by the captain, crossed Grand Traverse bay, landing in the vicinity of Omena, and proceeding south on foot, along the shore of Lake Michigan. As far as known, crew and passengers eventually reached their homes, but not without undergoing considerable hardship. Fortunately, there were no women or children on board the Champion.

The first bride who came to the Grand Traverse country on her wedding tour, was Mrs. Lewis Miller, whose maiden name was Catherine Kiley. She was a native of London, Eng., and, like her husband, had been left an orphan. Somehow she had found her way to America, and then to the outpost of civilization at Mackinac. During Mr. Miller's frequent visits to that place an attachment had grown up between them, which finally resulted in marriage. The wedding took place in September, 1845.

Immediately after the marriage, they set sail in the little sloop Lady of the Lake, for their home in the wilderness. Mr. Miller had chartered the vessel for the occasion, and had loaded her with goods for the Indian trade, furniture, and supplies for housekeeping.

The lady was but a bit of a craft, but she was a perfect duck on the water, and dest before anything like a favorable wind. The Fates, if the Fates have anything to do with regulating wedding trips, decreed a long and tempestuous voyage. It was the season when the god of the winds, on the northern lakes, delights to entement their surface with foam capped waves, and tantalize the impatient mariners with variable breezes and the most disappointing kinds of weather.

The 1st day they made the island of St. Ignatius, where they were compelled to seek the shelter of the harbor. For nearly a dozen days and more there, waiting, for a favorable change. Several times the Lady ventured out, but was so often compelled to put back. Finally, seeing the most favorable opportunity, she was able to reach Little Traverse. Here she was compelled to remain four days. The newly married couple went on shore and found comfortable quarters in an Indian house. The woman of the house had been brought up in a white family in Mackinac, and being able to understand the wants of guests; was in a degree successful in her kind endeavors to make their stay pleasant.

Leaving Little Traverse, the vessel reached the mouth of Grand Traverse bay, when she was again driven back. At the second attempt, she was obliged to heave to, in the mouth of the bay, the captain remaining all night at the helm. As Miller came on deck in the morning, dull, leaden clouds observed the day, and the air was filled with snow flakes. He proposed to take the captain's place at the helm, while the latter should turn in for rest. The captain gladly consented. Once installed in authority, Miller made sail, and let the captain sleep till the Lady was safely moored in the harbor at Old Mission.

A young bride, coming for the first time to the home of her husband, naturally looks with a great deal of interest at the surroundings. Sometimes there is disappointment. There was probably no serious disappointment in this case, but is a part of the traditional family history, that as Mrs. Miller came on deck, that gloomy September morning, and looked anxiously out upon the scene, beautiful in its gloominess, and saw only the forest skirted shore and the smoke curling upward from the log houses of the whites and a few Indian wigwams, the first question she asked her husband was, "Where is the town?" Mr. Miller's eldest son, Henry L., was the first white child born in the Grand Traverse country.

These incidents will serve somewhat to show the character of pioneer life in Grand Traverse fifty years ago.

Mr. Miller continued in the trading business at Old Mission until the mission was removed to New Mission, now Omena, 1852. Here he continued his business until his removal, in 1864, to Traverse City. During the twenty years and more he was in business at Old Mission and New Mission he was brought into close and constant communication with the Indians of the region, and he has always been considered by them one of their best and truest friends. Their language became as familiar to him as his own, and so much was it used in and about his home that the children, as they grew up, acquired it as readily as their own tongue, and so became national Indian interpreters. And today, E. E. Miller, one of the sons, who is with the Mercantile Co at this place, will hunt any Indian on the bay at his own language. The Indians gave Mr. Miller the name of Kit-ti-gis-wi-ense, meaning "Little Farmer."

About 1864 Mr. Miller moved to Traverse City, and was first with Mr. McLellan, in the shoe trade, in the building now known as the Backer building, on Front street. Following this he was with Hannah, Lay & Co. for nine or ten years, when he opened a shoe store on his own account. In 1884 he removed to Charlevoix, where he has been in the same business since. In 1885 Mrs. Miller died. Subsequently Mr. Miller married Miss Whitcomb. There were five children. Henry, Edward, Archie, George and William, the last dying some years ago.

Mr. Miller has lived to see the Grand Traverse region grow and prosper from an untroden wilderness to the splendid development of the present day, and last September his residence here rounded up an even half century.

A Little Girl's Experience In A Lighthouse.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Prescott are keepers of the Gov. Lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich., and are blessed with a daughter, four years old. Last April she was taken down with measles, followed with a dreadful Cough and turning into a Fever. Doctors at home and at Detroit treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere "handful of bones."—Then she tried Dr. King's New Discovery and after the use of two and a half bottles, was completely cured. They say Dr. King's New Discovery is worth its weight in gold yet you may get a trial bottle free at F. G. Hines & Co.'s Drug Store. 6

The Spot Where It Lies Proves a Very Sacred Place.

The lonatic hanged at Charlestown, Va., has more friends to-day than he had in 1861; he will have more more fifty years hence. He who fought a Hitlers for one blow can wait a century for immortal justice. When the Ossawatomie Brown is born he will find in Osawatomie Brown a hero worthy of his name. Once upon a time I camped out in the North Woods, says a writer in Kate Field's Washington, and before leaving a glorious region where nature has not been entirely robbed of her virgin beauty, I made a pilgrimage to John Brown's farm in Essex county, a few miles from picturesque Lake Placid. I saw the same of John Brown carved on the face of the huge bowlder lying at the head of his grave, as if cut for the purpose from God Almighty's foundry.

Flaunting roses and honeycrips that sprang from the giant's heart, I turned. What that humble, unpainted farm house John Brown's home? I stood upon the threshold and knocked in vain. Trying the door, it opened, and venturing to enter, I saw signs of habitation, but none of comfort. There seemed to be no angel in the house. A portrait of John Brown, a few memorial wreaths snatched from some recent grave, were the only visible remains of sentiment.

Several men were pitching hay in a field near by, and when I hailed them one sad man came forward to hi, me Friend, this was John Brown's farm for John Brown's homestead was no longer the property of his own family, although it had been his wish that they they should remain.

"I am Alexis Hinckley," said the thin, sad man. "My sister married John Brown's son Salmon, who went West and is now in California. Mrs. Brown was very lonely without any of her children, and, in order to join Salmon, she sold the farm to me for $800. She did not want it to go out of the family, and so I bought it, but I do not feel that I have any more any longer. I buried my wife last winter. The place is not what it used to be, and, in fact, I must sell it. I have spent money on it, and have offered it for $2000." "Does that part of land go with the farm?" I asked, looking from the window to the spot where John Brown's body lies a moldering in the grave.

"Oh, no! That is reserved by Mrs. Brown. There are 70 acres, and $1000 worth of timber."

So John Brown's farm was for sale! One month later I told this story in Philadelphia to a enthusiasm of youth. I imagined that the old friends of a rugged, historic character would vie with each other in rescuing his homestead from possible vandals. I applied first to Wendell Phillips, and received a kind note, but no money. Then I ventured to address Ralph Waldo Emerson who sent me an autograph letter, very interesting, but without a suggestion as to ways and means. Those two letters are now worthless, but where I've put them only a sour man tells.

Disappointed, but not crushed, I turned to Judge "Tom" Russell, whose face glowed with assured success. "Of course I can easily raise the money," he said. "I'll go to George N. Stearns, and will let you know the result in a few days."

Hope had whispered too flattering a tale in Judge Russell's ear. When he came back his face had the look of defeat. "Useless," he said. "I can not raise a cent."

And this was abolition Boston! The only person who gave me sympathy and aid was Mrs. Robert G. Watterson, who is ever true to the principles of her family, the Quincys. In disgust and despair, I wrote to Mr. Isaac H. Baily, of New York, and within forty-eight hours received this telegram: "Stock all gone and at a premium. Mr. Bailey put on his hat, went into the street and secured the necessary subscribers in fifteen minutes.

The farm was bought, a good tenant secured, who still remains, and when I revisited the adirondacks recently I found our property, worth three times what we had paid for it, the home in good repair and John Brown's grave the Mecca of all tourists.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED.
When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you?
But how to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, isn't it?
And when the puzzle is solved for you, by authority which cannot be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you?
And you would like to hear of one puzzle that has been solved for the people of the whole world, wouldn't you?
Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution.
At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the best sewing machine of the world, including those of America, were in competition. They were passed upon by a jury composed of the best foreign mechanical experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine manufacturers of France.
The jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged that the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded that company the highest prize offered, the GOLD MEDAL, leaving other companies only gold, silver and bronze medals.
The French Government, as a further recognition of superiority, decorated Mr. Nathaniel Wheeler, president of the company, with the cross of the Legion of Honor, the most prized honor of France.
Now, the merits of the leading machines in the world was fully solved by the most competent authority in the world in the year of No. 9 and No. 13 Wheeler & Wilson machines.
The No. 9 for family use, and the No. 13 for manufacturing uses, are the best in the world to-day.
And now, when you want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be your own fault.
Ask your sewing machine dealer for the No. 9 Wheeler & Wilson machine, and if he does not keep them, write to us for descriptive catalogue, prices and terms.

Congressmen.

In the House on the 13th, the Chairman of the committee of the whole outlined the point of order against Mr. Bland's amendment. Mr. Watson of Georgia sent up the Senate's fiat and had read the entire resolution that the committee on ways and means should report back forthwith the submission of the sundry special items contained therein for its consideration. Mr. Bartlett, Georgia, demanded the regular order, opposed as an objection. After a fruitless call of committees the House went into committee of the whole, Mr. Bland in the chair, on the Senate's sundry civil bill. Mr. Bland then offered his amendment with the proviso attached to it, that the cost of this passage shall not exceed $10,000; $8,000 of which shall be for the change of subsidiary silver and $2,000 for standard silver dollars. Before the point of order was decided, the House adjourned. On the 14th, Hawaiian affairs came up, and Rayner fell. The bill authorizing the Secretary of War to detail an officer daily in connection with the Hydrographic Office, was passed. Pensions occupied the attention of the House. The bill exempting American coastwise vessels plying between Seattle and Alaska by a United States pilot from the obligation to pay the pilot fees or tonnage tax enjoined was passed without a division. The consideration of the Senate's amendments to the Hitchcock and cabal of the Kenesaw three for their conservation was presented and agreed to. Mr. Hitch offered a resolution, which was agreed to, abolishing the office of principal executive clerk of the Senate, and placing the entire clerical force of the Senate in the Secretary's office.

Harvest a Large Flouring Mill.

The large flouring mill of the Albert Lea Milling Mill and Elevator Company has been burned with all its contents. The fire caught in the upper story. The mill has a capacity of 250 barrels a day, and was provided with ample. The loss will be $60,000, with no insurance of $20,000. It will probably be rebuilt. Fire broke out in the wing of the Northern Hotel, Fort Ann, New York, Monday, Thursday morning, Damage, $5,000. Several of the guests escaped in their night clothes, and four of them lost all of their personal effects. C. C. Thayer, the cook, was cut off from the third story, but was unhinged. At Hot Springs, Ark., the Metropolitan Saddle Horse Stable burned, with forty head or saddle horses. Thirty had been purchased for the Indian Stations of Oklahoma. Loss, $25,000; insurance, $15,000.

Pinner's crop report says. There is nearly the composition of the condition of the country to-day from a crop standpoint with those of a year ago or two years ago. We have now dragged out the June, through another week of rain, cold weather, cloudy skies and mud, and to-day we are no nearer the goal which we are trying to reach than we were upon the first of May. I doubt very much if east of the Mississippi River there has been a single farmer turned during the last ten days. In a word, everything has been at a perfect standstill.

By cable from Maracaibo, Venezuela, confirmation of the capture of the city of Bolivar by the insurgents and news that the city is in possession of the government forces, then Santiago, Bolivar, has been received. The thing which has delayed the progress of the revolution, has been the want of ammunition. Thousands of the Federalists are now armed with Winchesters, and rude weapons are in use in the sugar cane cutting season, troops understand our arrangements in the situation and saw that it was necessary to hold the place at all hazards, because of arms at the northwestern end of the road and in the southern section. But there is a large town, with landings, and fear for the safety of the place can now be landed there with safety. It is said to be very safe in Ciudad Bolivar to the revolutionary forces throughout the country.

CUT OFF BY THE FLOODS

OMAHA'S BIG BRIDGE PARTIALLY GONE.

A Portion of the Great Union Pacific Structure Washed Out. In Texas Sewing Ears—Unprecedented Rain Storm Causes Great Alarm.

Damage by High Water.

THE eastern approach to the Union Pacific bridge over the Missouri at Omaha has been washed out, and there are fears that the entire structure will go. The river is raging rapidly, and all the lower portions of the city are under water, while many small buildings situated on the flats have all already floated away. The damage done will be appalling.

WORK OF THE FLOOD AT OMAHA.

The bridge has put a stop to traffic, and it may be weeks before trains will again run from Council Bluffs to Omaha. If the worst proves to be true, the main portion of the big bridge will likely be carried away, as it has been greatly weakened by the washing out of the eastern approach.

People are becoming greatly alarmed by the prospect of still higher waters, and residents of towns along the river are hastening their planting and hoeing. It has been raining furiously, with the result that the streams in Nebraska have poured a flood of water into the Missouri. The Platte has been swollen to the western bank, and as a great portion of the sand has been blown by treeling filled in with earth and loose rock the river has cut a new bed out it away. All day long the gnawing at the filling had been going on, and in the evening it was noticed that the approaches were beginning to totter. As a result all trains were held in Omaha. At 7:30 the bridge began to show cracks, and a few minutes later with a roar and crash the south end of the bridge down the river, carrying with it the timbers and equipments on that side of the bridge. A large force of men was hurried to the bridge and commenced to throw all of rock in being emptied in, in hopes of stopping the washout. The bridge is one of the largest structures in the country, the embankment of the Union Pacific being one of the most formidable. It is feared that the swift current may break through the bank and carry away the bridge and roadway.

The Platte River has played havoc with the lowlands. All the squatters on the islands between the United States and Italy growing out of the war Peruvian affair had been adjusted less harsher satisfactory to both nations. In the dispute there was a great increase in the commercial relations between Italy and the United States and the great interest felt in Italy in the World's Columbian Exposition, the resumption of full diplomatic relations between the two nations is regarded with special favor by all classes in Italy.

DEATH-DEALING FLOOD

FEARFUL CALAMITY AT SIOUX CITY.

A Cloud-Burst Claims Upward of Thirty Victims and Exhausts $200,000 Subsidy—An Insignificant Stream Swollen to a Mighty Torrent.

Death on its Crest.

Wednesday morning the most fearful flood ever known in the history of Sioux City. It was the result of a cloudburst in the vicinity of the Floyd River. The loss of life is appalling, but its exact extent is not yet known. Fifty bodies have already been recovered, and it is feared the victims will at least double that number.

Reports of the missing show fully 100 persons are not yet accounted for. Many of them are children, and it is thought that the majority of them have perished a way in their tender arms and sleeping beneath by strangers.

The valley of the Floyd River, from the manufacturing suburb of Leeds down to the Missouri, is from one to two miles wide, flat, and includes the manufacturing and industrial districts of the city, the railroad yard and shops, and the bottoms of a large part of the business quarter of the city. The water coming down this valley is as big as the valley was a roaring sea from river to bluff. The river continued to rise, coming up Third and Fourth streets in the business district, and in the new blocks an hour and reaching across most of the business part of town.

The people were taken by surprise and had no time to make preparations to be ready to make a move to escape. One river is a sluggish stream and it is cause to Fourth street and was a great portion of the approach. Many others were unaware of the danger and were caught in their houses, and were snatched by the rescuers, placed in boats and carried to places of safety. There were many helpless, but most of them were saved by the rescuers.

Early in the day a woman was seen on the roof of a house floating down in a slope her head. A rescuing party went to her in a boat and succeeded in rescuing her, and the woman and child were taken to a place of safety. Later in the day a woman was seen floating down the river, in one of the public parks or resorts, and a man named Foley and three children were in the water, and the woman and her children were wildly waving a white flag. The woman had her children in a window as the house floated away. One of the children was carried in the roof of a house up to the eaves in water and was rescued.

A house containing a man, a woman, and a child floated down the river and down the center of the stream. It struck a bridge and was jammed against it and made for the spot and the woman was rescued after four days of hunger. One chore went up from the throats of the people on the bridge when the woman was rescued after four days of hunger. The woman and child were taken to a place of safety.

He turned to take the highway that bounded the Eden of his dreams, but passed sobbingly.

From the hedge a woman's form burst forth.

"Ruth!"

She swayed where she stood, her eyes turning up into his own.

"One word before you go," she wailed, piteously. "Innocent or guilty—tell me quickly, for I can bear it, or my heart will break!"

CHAPTER VI.

PISTOLS.

"I cannot, I dare not tell you!"

The words seemed to stand down, hanging in the air, and to darken the despairing misery in Paul Dalton's eyes crushed her.

She had pleaded for an answer to that will appeal to know if he was innocent or guilty, for the sake of the love that was breaking her poor, anxious heart, and he had replied to her thus:

"Ruth, you think it true when you ask me that question? Do you? Do you remember—"

"Stop!" repeated Ruth, drawing herself erect, her eyes affronted gone. "he is no blind, no coward, and he knows I love him."

It was out at last! Ralph Prescott sank back crushed. Ruth was dearer to the girl as if he adjudged her sudden.

"Your husband!" he gasped, incredulous.

"Yes, you drove him away—you and that woman! He told me he was a false, selfish, cowardly lover. He has gone to seek the proofs of his innocence. Ralph, I'm his wife! Hiss. We were hurriedly married last night. I wanted this world could come. Not be, but I place, a blow that, I, the girl, I, the woman, would rather have made on marriage a mockery, a crime, in taking my life to that of a man I loathe and despise."

He had never believed herself cleared of the courage to tell it all, but, as the truth had been revealed dauntlessly.

Farmer John regarded her in silence for a moment; then, a guttural, choking sob in his throat, he forked out:

"And this is true?"

"Every word of it!"

The hurly form trembled, the great shoulders shook, and, as the girl's fearless gaze, the bold eyes glowed with the spirit of a true, unselfish spirit.

"You girl" he almost yelled. "Out" and he flung open the door with a crash, "I'm no robber of minds you have chosen the jail-bird, the scoundrel, go to him. Go, go! Tell him I'm my child shall never again rest on the child who turned my heart against my boy. Go! Life, and broken my heart. Girl, I curse you! Go! Stop! Come back! Ruth, I'm sorry I spoke to you. Get you no child of mine!"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

An Unpopular Toy.

Col. McCrory was traveling on a railroad train as a plutocratic occupant of the Pullman car, when a boy came into the smoking room with a toy he was manipulating. One was Miss Rachel Sherman, who was accompanying her father, the colonel, and he threw away his cigar and walked over to the boy, sat down and introduced himself to the young man. He then began to talk on various subjects and were very much interested in the boy's observations. Finally Miss Sherman said:

"Father, I am much interested in the boy and want to know more about it than I do. What is the gun, and what is it for, and what is the curious sight gauge?"

"Why, Rachel, I'm surprised at such a stupid question," said the Senator, with a contemptuous glance at McCrory, "we are doing very well so far, with an accent on the 'now,' but sixty minutes more from your father went through the country, and you will be a fit companion for him." Minneapolis Journal.

Fulbotto's Arrowsh.

Jacques Lacoste, a native of France, began life in other and more pleasant fashions than falling in such a child. Lacoste had been sent into the world with a silver spoon in his mouth which, in after years, he set down in his will as the cause of his downfall. When too old and infirm to solicit alms, he was compelled to resort to the street, and as simulacrum in order that he might obtain a livelihood. Lacoste's "stock in trade" was then two years old. I was playing in the street one day, when I was accosted by a ragged, dirty, and disfigured beggar. The boy was begging for alms, and I was about to give him a few sous when I was struck by the boy's face. The face was a pretty one, but it was marred by a long, ugly, red scar, which ran from the left ear to the right cheek —More carpenters wanted here.

—A scaffolding at the depot fell down this morning, hurting two of the men.

—Last Wednesday General Manager Heald, General Passenger Agent DeHaven and Attorney Smith, of the C. & W. M. Ry. Co., were here over the work. They unite in saying that we will have trains soon after June 20th.

—Henry Barth took the contract to make and erect a second smoke stack for the Charlevoix Lumber Co. On Monday he had the stack about framed when a guy stake pulled out, and the thing fell to earth, badly damaging it, also cutting a severe gash on Si Alcock's head.

—Dr. J. A. Carlstein, yet a member of Baxter Post, G. A. R., sent a basket of beautiful flowers by steamer Petoskey to the post for memorial day, but the boat did not arrive until the evening of that day, and their beauty and fragrance could not contribute to the success of the days observance.

—Mrs. Catherine Weaver, for some years a resident of this place, died Monday morning last, at the home of Frank Kane, in Hayes township, aged 83 years. Mrs. Weaver was a widow, and leaves six children—George and Wm. Weaver, Patsy Flanagan, Mrs Pat. O'Neill, Mrs. John O'Neill, and Mrs. Dolan, of Sturgeon Bay, Wis.

—The Pine Lake Iron Co. have adopted plans for their new furnace at Ironton. The whole plant is to be of iron and steel, and be manufactured entirely in the east and shipped here ready to put up. The grade into Ironton is about completed, and the steel will be laid in July. The Iron Company are erecting a store at Ellsworth, and will have a battery of coal kilns there.

—The microbe, classified by scientists as the humpit-emerpiten, is getting in its work in Charlevoix, and there are very few of our citizens who have not been bit. Where it comes from has not been determined, but the belief is general that it germinates in the coal smoke of locomotive No. 144, from the south. We have got heard that it ravages extend to any other town north of Traverse City, but it is understood to be an insect that puts in its work with great vigor and effect, where the atmosphere and soil are sympathetic as they are in Charlevoix.

—A cyclone struck Charlevoix Monday. It was not one of the destructive sort, but one that came as a benediction and a blessing. Mr. H. H. Kitson during the day, exhibited at his Opera House mill to the farmers who came in town, and explained the process, and no one who saw Tuesday will doubt the fact that every variety of grain raised here, and reason wise necessary, can be absolutely or light to fit operating mills. It will clean anything from clover seed to onion sets, and separate in any desired manner. It will not only drive out poor seed from the good, but it will drive out old fashioned fanning mills. Mr. Kitson

Boyne Falls News: We are pleased to announce that our old friend E. P. Myers, who accomplished his pleasing task of putting down the late rebellion, has been granted a pension of $12 per month, to date from about a year ago. There is in his case a peculiar feature about his good fortune it must aid him to reduce his flesh whereas the duty of all pensioners is supposed to put fat on the ribs.

Cross Village cor. Petoskey Democrat: A cruel and terrible tragedy has just come to light through the admissions of the murderer. Two Indians left Middle Village with a sail boat loaded with potatoes for Northporte of Lake Michigan. On Monday one of them returned alone but in the boat was the coat of the man that had accompanied him. The Indian claimed that his companion had accidentally fallen overboard and was drowned. Suspicion was aroused by the contradictory stories which he told first saying it was near Naubinway and then claimed it was near High Island. Finally he confessed to some of his Indian friends that the death of his companion was not an accident, but a murder. They had been drinking heavily and under the baleful influence of "firewater" a quarrel arose. A desperate struggle followed and finally the weaker man was thrown overboard. Sobered by the peril he swam after the boat with desperate strength and energy, begging piteously to his companion to rescue him. But instead of doing so his victorious adversary kept the boat out of his reach, and steadily watched the struggle for life, until the poor wretch could no longer battle with the waves, and his last shriek was cut short by the waters that closed about his head.

Newaygo Notes.

Prof. Kathain, the piano tuner, was in town Tuesday.

Why He Hurried.

"Many of these men will go into the country and work on a farm," remarked a man who was observing them.

"Yes," said another, "and it is a great stagger they make at farming as it is carried on in this country. They seem to be wholly unacquainted with our implements and do not appear to understand the common principles of nature. My father had one of these men employed on his farm last summer and one day he took a load of grain to market. Returning home he drove the horses at a fearful rate and when he stopped at the gate they were covered with foam. My father was provoked at what he saw and asked the man why he had driven at such an unreasonably high rate of speed.

"I had to do it," said he; "day tire was running off day wheel and I drive fast to get layer before eet break me down."

THEY RISE TO THE OCCASION.

The Citizens of Charlevoix Demonstrate Their Ability in "Hump Themselves" Occasionally.

Lewis Grand Opera House was crowded last Wednesday evening, on the occasion of the Fourth of July mass meeting. Unbounded enthusiasm prevailed. Fred W. Mayne was called to the chair, and ringing speeches were made by several citizens, advocating an extraordinary effort, in view of the culmination of events so fraught with importance to Charlevoix

George Bates, W. E. Hampton and H. Lee Iddings were appointed a soliciting committee, and at once began their work. The sum of $250 was raised on the spot, Monday the amount reached $1,000, and the end is not yet.

An executive committee was appointed, consisting of F. J. Meech, O. E. Wilbur, W. A. Smith, J. M. Ackert and Lou See. Two meetings of the comittee have been held, with F. W. Mayne as Secretary, and a program for the day has been blocked out. Hon. S. M. Moore has been elected President of the day, and Wm. Alden Smith has accepted the invitation to deliver the address. The Third Regiment K. P. band has been employed to furnish the music.

The program, aside from the usual morning exercises, with the prizes offered, are as follows:

Band tournament: 1st prize, $100; 2d prize, $50; 3d prize, $25.

Firemen's tournament; prizes $100, $35 and $15.

Trotting prizes, $150, $50, $25.

Running prizes, $25, $15, $5.

Base ball, Charlevoix vs. Petoskey, special prize.

Bicycle race, special prize.

Double scull, $10, $5, $3.

Single scull, $5 and $3.

Foot race, $15 and $5.

The order of the day will close with the most expensive and beautiful display of fire-works ever seen in Northern Michigan.

The executive committee announce the following sub committees:

Decorations—A. T. Washburne, W. H. Vaughan, Chas. Gotham.

Band Tournament—A. W. Nelson, E. Carpenter, Robert A. Wilson.

Firemen's Tournament—William Lamarier, Chief and Foreman Hose Co., Chas. Gotham, Foreman Hook and Ladder Co., F. W. Mayne, Chief Engineer.

Bicycle Race—W. E. Hampton, Harrison Bedford, Chas. Dougherty.

Horse Racing—J. W. Wilson, J. D. Parsons, Joseph Sherwin.

Foot Race—Geo. Sherwin, A. Cook, A. Campbell.

Base Ball—A. Bennett, A. Johnson and Wm. E. Wood.

The executive committee is bending every energy to make the occasion one long to be remembered.

The Driving Park Purchase.

The Democrat stated Friday that the purchase of the driving park was not accomplished until that day. As a matter of fact, the deal was not consummated until Saturday last.

The exact amount of land in the deal is 35 acres, and in every particular is the most desirable that could have been selected. A pleasing feature is that it is but about 40 rods from the beach of Pine Lake, and affording a beautiful view of that grand sheet of water.

The general feeling of satisfaction over this last stroke of public enterprise deepens as the matter is investigated. It means more to Charlevoix than appears at first glance. Its benefits will multiply as the grounds are improved and the public spirit of our citizens further manifests itself.

The work on the half-mile track has been begun, and those in charge say it will be ready for business on the 4th. With a little widening, the road from the village to the grounds has no superior in Michigan. It is a race-track in itself.

Charlevoix can take a drink with herself over her good fortune.

THE SCHOOL EXHIBIT.

An Elaborate Departmental Classification of the School Work of the Year.

The writer of this vividly remembers the last school he attended as a pupil, thirty-ore years ago, in Malone, Franklin Co. N. Y., a place then of about 5,000 inhabitants. It was the principal school of the place, excepting the academy upon the hill. It was taught and governed by a typical pedagogue of those days, old Uncle Charley Palmer. There were nearly as many kinds of text-books as there were pupils, and no book figured more conspicuously in the daily routine than did the birch rod in the hands of Uncle Charley.

From behind his unpainted desk he surveyed his entire charge, boys on one side, girls on the other, separated by an aisle, at the exit end of which stood the big box stove, in winter fed at frequent intervals by the teacher with four foot wood, and used in summer as a dark-cell for rebellious boys. In this temple of learning were the infant class, struggling with the alphabet, and the algebra class, to which many were called but few chosen.

We were profoundly impressed, as in contemplative retrospection we passed through the beautiful high school room last Friday evening, in a throng of interested school patrons, and viewed the exhibit of school work of the several departments for the school year about closed. In methods of instruction; in classification of work; in system of government; in practical demonstration, "What hath God wrought!"

The elegant room was transformed into a museum of distinctly classified and tastefully displayed specimens of school work, from the simple numbers and penmanship of the first primary to the geometrical and topographical sketches of the high school; from the models in clay, the handiwork of the tots, to the theorems by the graduating class; from the composition on "chickens" of the intermediates to the artistic drawings of the botany class. A more complete exhibit of the curriculum of the school could not have been gathered, nor could any treatise on modern education more clearly demonstrate the progress of events in the field of learning.

Viewed in a local sense, the exhibit justified a feeling of gratification in the high standard of the Charlevoix public schools. Superintendent Knox seems to have written the legend "excelsior" in the cover of every text-book upon his desk, and imparted it to the heart of every teacher.

A detailed reference to the exhibit by departments would be laborious. It is sufficient to say that every school patron who visited the building Friday evening and Saturday afternoon went away proud of the school and proud of Charlevoix for having made the visit. Every pupil in the enjoyment of these grand educational privileges should share this pride, cheerfully obeying every rule, studiously striving to excel in proficiency and deportment, earnestly resolving that these blessings shall not have been in vain.

Charlevoix has many points of excellence that justify pride, but our fine school building, and excellent school administration should be the especial pride of every patron and pupil.

Religious Items.

Sunday morning pastor Barnes will give a big little sermon to little big folks about big little things. The Sunday school will give a program in the evening.

ALMOST COMPLETED.

Railroad Work Rapidly Approaching a Wind-Up.

Train Service to Begin June 20.

Last week a night-crew was put on at the gravel-pit just south of here, and all day Sunday the puffing of the engine could be heard hauling gravel. Two hundred ballasters will be camped at the pit this week. The ballasting is about completed to Ellsworth, and Mr. Scott McLean stated to the writer Sunday that with favorable weather the work will be done by the 15th of this month.

The bridge was swung for the first time Saturday, and at this writing is ready for traffic. Saturday engine 144 came up from the south with the signal-tower for the structure.

The ballasting on the north end is completed, or nearly so. On Sunday engine No. 105 ran from station 3983 to station 3708—5¼ miles, in 5½ minutes, timed by Scott McLean's stop-watch. The road from Charlevoix to Petoskey is in first-class shape. In July trains will be making the run in 25 minutes.

TRAIN SERVICE.

A letter from Geo. DeHaven, the General Passenger Agent, to Chairman Meech, of the celebration committee, states that regular train service will begin Sunday, June 26. Trains will be run as follows: Going north, 6:30 a. m., 1 p. m., and 3:30 p. m. Going south, 9 a. m., 4 p. m., and 11:30 p. m. In addition to the through service, there will be a local train between Charlevoix and Petoskey, to begin service at the same time.

Mr. DeHaven also promises a special excursion train from Traverse City on July 4th, to arrive at about 9:30 a. m., returning after the fire-works.

THE RIFENBURG FLOURING MILL

Its Value to Charlevoix as a Market and Manufacturing Plant.

Charlevoix has always laid great stress upon the need of manufacturing industries, as a means to promote business prosperity. It been and is yet, the chief need of our town.

Yet Charlevoix possesses an institution which, in the list of industries calculated most for the general good, may be classed at the head. A flouring-mill, in its influence upon a town's trade, is more far-reaching and potent than any other that can be named, of like outlay.

The Rifenburg mill is in the heart of our town. It is a first-class establishment, and manufactures first-class goods. As a Charlevoix institution it deserves the patronage of Charlevoix dealers and consumers, just as Charlevoix dealers deserve the patronage of Charlevoix people.

The SENTINEL has a hobby that home merchants and home manufacturers should receive home patronage.

The Rifenburg mill has recently reduced its prices below all competitors, and we hope to see its product in every Charlevoix household, and pushed by every Charlevoix dealer.

—Charlevoix was honored yesterday by a novel and interesting parade. The steamer Friant gave the Harbor Springs Indian Mission school a free excursion to East Jordan, and on their return they marched from Dunlap's to Wilmot's dock. The procession consisted of two priests, two lay brothers, six sisters of charity, and 160 Indian children of both sexes, the latter very neatly and uniformly clad. They presented a very fine appearance.

the lawyer. "He made a new will just after Mrs. Elliott died."

"Ralph Prescott Buttered too thick."

"To your daughter, Mr. Elliott, he has left this home and property, with the expressed wish that the name here, Mrs. Eastern, keep it in office till she decides to appear."

"Father John set his jibe savagely.

"To you, addressing Ralph Prescott, he has left four receipted bills—debts you contracted at the horse races last year."

The plaintiff turned white with rage and chagrin.

"Ralph Hazel Farm, Mr. Elliott, goes to you individually."

"And what of the rest of his fortune, the stocks, bonds and money in bank?" asked the lawyer, with a disappointed Prescott.

"All that he has bequeathed, for some strange reason best known to himself, to Mr. Elliott's former superintendent, Paul Dufoss!" was the lawyer's amazing reply.

CHAPTER VII.

MORE!

The affairs of Farmer John and his family had become a source of unwonted gossip for the gossips of Bridgeton, and the disappearance of Ralph Prescott and his wife of twoforty days constituted a veritable mystery in the place.

Ralph's wife seemed just as a epidemic, horrible, sudden and baffling, sweep over a sedate community and leave ruin and desolation in its wake. Ralph Prescott had left the home at Maple Leaf Farm, wrecking hearts, destroying his name for ever, and leaving a legacy of bitterness, hidden only by stubborn pride and the entombment of a secret.

People talked, but Farmer John gave no explanation; it all, only from his harm hands could they gain the pardon-seeking, and Ralph, ashamed, hung his head down to several very significant and startling rumors.

Paul Dufoss, an ex-soldier, had entered his employer's house, a beggar, and had left it a rich man, and Farmer John's daughter was the bride.

These two, man and wife, fugitives, banished, had undoubtedly met again, and for some reason best well known to themselves, had decided to make their own existence, that could only end in misery, miserable, and a shameless and a disobedient child.

Ralph Prescott's ruin, disappointed schemer, had come out at the unusual result and left the place.

Unmasked as a spendthrift, he had been left a pauper, and a cruel, cheated boy, revengeful man; he was hardened and bitter against the world, and sympathy for his double loss of bride and fortune.

As to Farmer John himself, he seemed to have aged a decade since the tragic or interest. John had been robbed of his treasured and his fairest possession, and, well-nigh incredulous, he was left to mourn the loss. He still remained at the former home of the runaway bride, and, if he had spoken to some Her position as protector of Ruth Elliott's estate was not to be disturbed, nor its return and claim her legacy withheld from her. Ruth, and Farmer John did not care enough about it to contest the right of inheritance.

Only one point electrified all the village and surrounding country, Ralph Prescott—the stranger will that Geoffrey Forsythe left behind.

Why had he left the bulk of his wealth to a stranger, and why had he left some income had indeed him to disinherit a beloved nephew, and yet leave Ralph Prescott only a dollar, for a man he had never seen, and who, if he ever had seen him, might not have known up to a few days previous to his death.

"There's trickery in it," said the gossips.

"The will cannot be broken," affirmed the lawyer.

"There's mystery under it all," said the Ralph Prescott darkly. "Why, and how did old Forsythe make that will?"

Over the solution of this double problem the baffled intelligence could not quite nearly worn out.

Ralph Prescott, for propriety, He coveted Dalton's good fortune. He had a fortune and a fair name. Even smoking, cordially welcomed, Ralph Prescott was fast becoming a popular character.

A co-partnership house was guaranteed and Ralph and Paul Dufoss, as long as he wished to remain there, but that did not suit him.

He wanted money for his gambling debts, and Farmer John was inexpressible.

He visited the tavern early and late. Seeking solace for his disappointments in the wine cup, he became a sight, endless devotee at the foetal board, drowning his cares in the hatefully and freely quaffed with the fired man who ever gave him a pleasant word.

At the end of the week he was no longer disturbed by the presence of the stranger will that bothered him.

Dufoss, the man that inherited him, generously offered to pay the money, apathy with a shrug, and each lived on his own, and the old, cheerful demeanor of his old friend was gone.

A great crony of his was a young fellow named Dunn, a clerk in the village post-office.

He came to the tavern to drink with his friend, and upon this especial evening he was in high spirits.

"I say, Prescott, that horse, Mrs. Eastern, or rather Farmer Jones's horse, is getting to be more of a mystery than ever.

"Is she?" growled Prescott, wearily.

"She came and went, yes, with that black veil of hers drawn down, like some spirit. To-day, though, she mailed a letter at the postoffice that I saw.

"Did she?"

"For a fact, and say, Prescott, who do you think it was directed to?"

"Well, who?"

"Guess!"

"Oh, don't bother me. What do I care about it?"

"Well, will when I tell you that the letter was addressed to your extended friend, Paul Dufoss."

Prescott leaned up from his pillow, and gazed at his companion with a stupefied expression.

"Yes, I tell Dufoss."

"What was the address?" he asked.

"I only saw the name. I was going to look out the letter later, but forgot it."

CHAPTER VIII.

MORE!

The news fell deep that night. It was the first watery stirring of the season, but the over-freighted clouds hovered low until dawn, and, fitful, frozen and barsh, by clothed in a robe of opaqueness where the day broke.

Where was not a tenant in the farm or Fairhaven, or Bridgeton, who, at the breakfast table, not the spoken of a mysterious visitor in his stormy face.

Farmer John was in a tempest in the form of a man, and, as he was wont, he spoke to his hands and to Ralph Prescott as if nothing in the world had happened to disturb the serenity of the home circle, as if the cement chair on his side did not exist.

If the iron had pierced his soul he had comforted the jagged wound with the pride, stubbornness and endurance that would have made of him an excellent martyr in the days when he was a Christian at the stake.

He gave his orders calmly. When he apprehended Ruth's customary work to be thirty-and there was not the token of a tremor in his voice.

Ambitious-faced Ralph Prescott appreciated his position as he basted to the door to his great cob.

"Mr. Elliott," he said timidly, "I want to speak to you."

"About that girl?" demanded Elliott, turning sharply.

"About Ruth—yes, You know—

"Stop! I forbid you to mention her name under this roof again. She is as dead to me as if she were buried fathoms deep in the sea. I'm sorry for you, my boy, but you and I must try and work some comfort out of the muddle a living child and a disobedient daughter have left us in.

"Ralph, Prescott looked glum and then said, "Affairs were bad, decidedly so, we had to pay for some money borrowed through my signature. It must just now, however, Would he lend us the Geoffrey Forsythe's money as well?

He wandered about restlessly that day, over the farm, through the village. There was no trace of Ruth. The storm might have whispered her up, but all the close the most persistent inquiry brought no to her whereabouts.

"She's gone with him," muttered Prescott, sourly. "They were married, sure enough and legally enough, for the minister says so. Paul Dufoss has won the prize, but if I can win the prize, too, without questions and without the trouble of a divorce, I'm the man as to her whereabouts.

"She's gone with him," muttered Prescott, sourly. "They were married, sure enough and legally enough, for the minister says so. Paul Dufoss has won the prize, but if I can win the prize, too—

He relented over that phase of the case for many hours. Old Geoffrey, as he understood it, had left the fortune equally divided between himself and Ruth. Right of reason, the disobedient daughter had left us in.

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR.

CHARLEVOIX, JUNE 8, 1892.

AFTERNOON England is a free trade country, 80,000 Durham miners are still on a strike against a reduction of wages. Portions to that there was a three month's engineers' strike over some trivial point. In Lancashire 1,000,000 cotton spindles are idle because of the dissatisfaction of the operatives. In Newcastle 10,000 miners' children are fed by charity every day. The loss of wages by the miners and engineers strike already amounts to $5,000,000. If this had happened in the United States we should have been treated to yards of Democratic editorial writing on the beneficent results of protection.

President Harrison's candidacy is handicapped more or less by the quite prevalent feeling against the election of a president for a second term. A failure to renominate the president would not by any means simply dissatisfaction with his administration. It would be rather a practical expression of the popular disbelief in the expediency on general principles, of nominating a president for a second term. But as these are exceptions to most rules, so there are cases in which a second term may not only be unobjectionable, but every desirable.

No man occupying the place of President and desirous for a renomination ever before so studiously avoided using the power in his reach for political purposes as has Benjamin Harrison. It is in great contrast with the opposition. The leaders who oppose him have had repeated meetings to lay out their plans and are thoroughly organized. They are advised—some of them unscrupulous and the results will be watched with great interest.

ABOUT two hundred thousand Democratic voters in New York state have signed the protest against the action of the convention held in Febuary, which indorsed the candidacy of Hill. The world seem to indicate that the New York Democracy is hopelessly "split up the back," and to prove conclusively the truth of Henry Watterson's prediction that the nomination of either Cleveland or Hill would inevitably result in Democratic defeat.

A COMMERCIAL DISPATCH writing from Guatemala to the British Trade Journal, declares that "at present British trade is falling off, its place being taken by the commerce of the United States and Germany." This seems to be the condition of British trade everywhere. The "great system of 1846" is beginning to "totter to its very base." Lord Salisbury's recent manifesto was not exactly calculated to strengthen its foundations.

The great English coal strike is ended, and has resulted in no advantage to the strikers and no benefit to anybody while untold suffering has been entailed upon the laboring classes of Great Britain. The Cobdenite press of America isn't saying much about the pitiable condition of laboring men in Great Britain which rendered them powerless to resist the reduction of wages which precipitated the strike.

JOHN G. WANAMAKER, who has been slashing around in the west in congress that McKinley once filled, has been put in a district with something over 2,000 Republican plurality and he ingeniously lies down and declines to make a run for re-election. When McKinley was put in a district with Warwick with 2,900 Democratic plurality he ran for re-election and cut down the national Democratic plurality over 2,000.

Says the Buffalo Express: When the McKinley law put a duty on sugar of milk, probably most Democratic editors thought it was unnecessary protection. Yet the United States is taking the sugar-of-milk industry away from Switzerland. Three factories have been established in Chautauqua county.

The most effective pervasive and persuasive stump orator I ever knew, was Chauncey M. Depew, the General "Prosper-ity." General Prosperity is not on hand this fall, if present indications fail not, to deliver strong speeches in favor of the American industry in every city and hamlet in the land.

Democratic editors are already debating the possibility of an over supply of American tin plate within twelve months.

Others complain that no tin will ever be made in this country. The Democratic press keeps up every variety of campaign lie.

A free-trade press of Great Britain and America combined cannot rub Lord Salisbury's remark, declaration that he is bound to believe that the free traders of England were too far.

Lake Michigan Steamers.

The C. & W. M. on the 19th of June.

We see by the new C. & W. M. guide book that the Queen of the Lakes will run on the inland lakes this season.

There is some talk in East Jordan of contemplated damage suits against the East Jordan Lumber Company, growing out of the recent boiler explosion.

Captain Webb, who is building the new boat for the Traverse City-Petoskey route, states she will run eighteen miles an hour. If so she will beat any craft in these waters.

Joe Gershaw, station agent at Walton, recently caught six trout in the "big spring," at the head of the cranberry marsh, that weighed twelve pounds. And another Walton man sold $170 worth of arbutus.

The Cummer mills at Cadillac will commence at once sawing on a big contract made with D. A. Blodgett. The tract of pine to be cleared up will yield about 300,000,000 feet, and will keep the Cummer mills busy for about eight years.

Robert H. Wetmore proprietor of the occidental hotel at Petoskey and land agent in this state for the Phelps estate, committed suicide at the Occidental last week Tuesday, by taking laudanum. He was a hard drinker, and had been on a protracted spree.

Ben Davis isn't in it this year in the fish yarn line. Tinklepaugh, of Kalkaska, is hereby tendered the metal. Listen to this: One Sunday last Oscar Bemis caught a brook trout which weight 1 pound, 13½ ounces, had 13 rattles on his tail and held in his mouth a trout showing up the iniquity of Sunday fishing."

Boyne Falls News: F. P. Myers is losing flesh at the rate of a pound a half per day. He has already fallen off 40 pounds in the last month. The change made him feel so nimble that while leading his horse the other day he attempted to jump across the little stream running through his yard, the result was that he dammed it in a double sense.

Leelanau hotel, on Omena heights, Northport will be under the management of Capt. E. H. Ludwick an old time hotel man, of Cincinnati. The hotel is one of the largest on Grand Traverse Bay, and situated on New Mission Point, at an elevation of 150 feet. The hotel was originally the Indian mission seminary, and 300 acres of tilled land, with an orchard of 5,000 trees added to its attraction.

Northern Michigan farmers who have no potatoes to sell will be interested in the report that owing to the destruction of a large potato crop by wet weather and floods the potato market has advanced several cents a bushel during the past week and advancing market from this time on. Some dealers are confident the market will go to 50c before the end of June but there is no certainty on this point. That the market will be strong, however, is very generally admitted by all engaged in the business.

It has been said that in looking for a route from Petoskey to Cheboygan the C. & W. M. company took very favorably upon a line running nearly due east from Petoskey to Sturgeon River, thence in a northeasterly direction along the east shore of Mullet Lake to Cheboygan. By taking his route they strike through a section without railroad facilities. If they should conclude to take this route some arrangements might be made with the company for the building of the road already surveyed to Hazy Lake which would serve as a feeder to the C. & W. M.—Cheboygan news.

Our readers will remember the sensational encounter at Whitefish Point between the Booth Packing Co. and Andreas Bros. over a dock at the fishing ground. The matter will no doubt be amicably settled, as the Soo Democrat says: For some time past the Booth company, of Chicago has been trying to get a figure from Andreas Bros. on their Whitefish fisheries and finally have succeeded. Andreas Bros. we learn from good authority, have given the Booth company a price on their fishery equipments tugs etc. As the firm is making a barrel of money a year, it is without doubt a large sum and and they can afford to accept and retire."

On the 1st, at Pelkaire Peter Jiee, Frank Robinson and Thomas McGrath the Elsworth saloonists, were brought before Judge Saunders for sentence, they having plead guilty to the charge of violating the liquor law. The Judge, after commenting upon their cases, passed sentences as follow, Peter Jiee, $75 fine or six months in county jail; Robinson and McGrath, $100 fine or nine months in county jail. As yet Robinson has not been able to pay his fine, but Jiee and McGrath succeeded in doing so, whereupon McGrath was immediately released on a similar charge, as it is alleged that as soon as he had given bail after his first arrest he continued the sale of intoxicants.

CHICAGO A SEAPORT.

ARRIVAL OF THE FIRST STEAMER FROM EUROPE.

The Government Exhibit at Chicago to Be Closed on Sunday—Black President at Lincoln, Neb.—Burned—Life Within and Life Had No Charms.

Congressional.

The 49th session of congress, for two years longer the act of March 2, 1868, for the compensation of military officers was passed by the Senate. By a vote of yeas 28, nays 25, the Senate decided to take up the Nicaragua ship canal bill and the measure is now in the hands of the house committee on foreign affairs. The House also passed the Senate's forty-four appropriation bill were under consideration 10 day. Most of the amendments were directed to the sundry civil appropriation, and the measure was finally settled by the adoption of an amendment providing for the closing of the Government exhibits on Sunday, which leaves the larger question to be decided by the Exposition management.

Will Flying Colors.

With the music of bands, floating of flags, tooting of whistles, singing of Norwegian and American patriotic songs, and raising of cannon that are legal tender for enthusiasm in all nations, under the Wergeland, of Bergen, Norway, the first steamship to make the trip direct to Chicago, entered port Thursday noon.

Her Last Days Disgraced.

Miss Anna Dickinson had her suit against members of the Republican National Committee of 1884, Judge Brady decided that the contract upon which the suit was based, was illegal.

BREVITIES.

In Monroe County, Illinois, fifty thousand acres of land is overflowed.

Street car traffic at New Orleans is practically suspended owing to the drivers' strike.

Parasols in the Northwest are selling what more freely, and Western farmers are selling them.

Secretary Elkins declares Illinois has assured the President that he would not accept a nomination.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the admission of Nebraska into the Union was celebrated at Lincoln.

Friction of the movement to disestablish the Church of Scotland were partly defeated in Parliament.

Anarchists made a demonstration in Paris Wednesday in favor of the liberation of journalists of their persuasion now in prison.

The speech of the new Italian Premier, Signor Giolitti, outlining his policy is so unsatisfactory that it is believed his Ministry will not hold together.

At Fulnage, Wis., Samuel Bachman, made a murderous attack upon his wife, and then went to the railway track and blew himself in front of a rapidly moving engine, which killed him.

Oswald Ottendorfer, President of the German National Bank at Lincoln, Neb., was shot and killed in his house. Noted by Mrs. Ottendorfer and a former partner.

Ralph B. Hewitt a clerk in the Morrison Hotel at Washington, committed suicide at Newport, R. I., by grief at the death of Miss Cleveland. He and Miss Cleveland were lovers.

United States Minister Lincoln and wife will soon sail from Liverpool. Mr. Lincoln says he will not stay for Queen's jubilee, but will return to London to await the expiration of his term of office.

When Bryan R. Crandall, of Buffalo, N. Y., died, several insurance companies refused to pay his family $20,000. Now it is learned that Crandall died while in debt, he has been arrested at Los Angeles, Cal.

The advocates of Sunday closing of the World's Fair met with defeat in the House. The claims in the sundry civil bill governing the matter, which was adopted, provides simply that the Government exhibit shall be closed Sunday.

The Postmaster General directed the arrangements to be made for new money order offices on the Wabash Railway, members of the Illinois delegation Wednesday, limited the amount of money to pay the extra clerks and carriers that will be needed in the Exposition Pandemic.

Mrs. Lomas, a merchant of Montreal, displayed an American flag in front of her place of business on the Queen's birthday. A company of Irish Fenians assembled and began to take it down. Mr. Lorge has complained to the Canadian authorities, and the affair will be investigated.

Two of the gangs who held up a railway train at Monroe Station, Pa., and killed Express Messenger Saunders May 1, were killed in a fight with a posse at Buffalo Bluff, one of them was Jim Williams, the leader of the other is unknown. One of the posse, Dr. B. D. Morgan, was wounded by a shot from the pistol of one of the desperadoes.

Five barrels were brought to the United States Court at Topeka to cast the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad Company from the military reservation at Leavenworth. In 1854 Congress granted a right of way 200 feet wide from the Missouri River bridge through the reservation. The Rock Island erected a freight depot, roundhouse and other terminal buildings on the land, which the Government petitions says is in violation of the act of Congress.

Tomorrow marks a centennial that has had no intention of killing his least relief, but that the deed was done in anger during a quarrel.

Despite the floods, Kansas expects to raise 30,000,000 bushels of wheat, and in the central and western sections the rain has proved a fourth rather than a detriment.

The announcement by telegraph that the Northern Pacific Railroad had at last succeeded in establishing a line of steamers between Tacoma and China and Japan is confirmed.

EASTERN.

The buildings on Cassatt's Harbor Island, near Sandy Hook, which were designed for his navy training station, are ready to be turned over to the Government. At present there are 300 boys there, and the stage launches of Portsmouth and Monongahela 400 more.

A terrible explosion, a shock that was felt throughout the business section, a great cloud of smoke rolling skyward, and the breaking of the large fire alarm bell in isolated blaze, were the initial features of the worst disaster Hartford (Conn.) has experienced since the memorable Park Central Hotel boiler explosion three years ago. The Atlas Pyrotechnic Works exploded, twelve people were crushed or burned into almost unrecognizable instance and bones, and three were injured.

At Oswego, N. Y., a great fire started in the big Washington elevator. The lower district was doomed. Thousands of people and destroyed the Corn Exchange and the Continental elevators on the south. The Merchants' elevator on the north burned and Oswego's elevator interests were practically wiped out. Not an elevator is left on the east side. The loss is fully $300,000. Spontaneous combustion is the theory.

The Illinois State Convention of the People's party, held at Danville, nominated the following ticket, Governor, N. M. Barnett; Lieutenant Governor, C. H. Dixon; Secretary of State, Fred Hilscel; State Treasurer, J. N. Millroy; Attorney General, Jesse Cox; Auditor, S. C. Hilliard. Presidential electors, Jesse Harper and Lesher Bullard.

WASHINGTON

The House Committee favorably reported the bill to regard to army officers in connection with the World's Fair.

Representative Hammond has recalled from the Senate the nomination of Frederick A. Emerson, late Librarian of the State Department, to the Brunswick Consulate.

Mr. Mitchell, from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, has reported to the Senate a joint resolution proposing a constitutional amendment providing for the election of United States Senator by popular vote.

FOREIGN.

Considerable excitement has been caused by the discovery of a dynamite cartridge at the residence of M. Lozes, the Public Prosecutor of Paris, who had charge of the case against the anarchist Ravachol.

The celebration of the anniversary of the battle of Pavia, which took place in London. The weather was splendid. There was a great display of the horse guards and a trooping of the colors by the footguards, the ceremony was witnessed by a vast throng of people. The Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief of the forces, accompanied by Prince Christian was in command.

A Paris cable says: At the Theater d'Ete, last Sunday, the curtain had just risen on a tableau, when the audience was startled by the sudden appearance of a man who fired three shots at the Minister of Marine, M. Brigham Isnardy. The negro then leaped into the orchestra and attempted to assault Col. Phillips, and told him that he had killed his wife and intended to shoot and hanged for it. Col. Phillips put a rope around the negro's neck, pulled him down over the ledge of a trap, and the negro was soon struggling in a death of agony.

The water-worked Atlanta, Ga., was the scene of a tragedy of the most terrible class, two of which have resulted fatally, and the other, of the most horrible character. The victims were Mr. Jacob Phillips, a prominent citizen of Atlanta, and Miss Ella Phillips, his daughter, the young lady is a cripple for life, and the young father is a dead and gone coward.

The original bonnet-idol to the town of Paris, on Oct. 2, 1889, a white bonnet, has been defeated in its contest, and has no use limit to the delight among the citizens. The Interior Department has given its ruling that said bonnet instructions by settle the controversy. The board has just completed the alabaster and blood that flowed from the slashed throat of a rapidly moving engine, which killed him.

Oswald Ottendorfer, President of the German National Bank at Lincoln, Neb., was shot and killed in his house. Noted by Mrs. Ottendorfer and a former partner.

Ralph B. Hewitt a clerk in the Morrison Hotel at Washington, committed suicide at Newport, R. I., by grief at the death of Miss Cleveland. He and Miss Cleveland were lovers.

Uncle Sam's Prophets.

UNCLE SAM employs three professional prophets, according to a Washington correspondent. Their business is somewhat like that of the Algerine conjurers. They furnish weekly prediction wet and dry spells, hot and cold waves, and long as their predictions are not nobody pays any attention to them. They make mistakes, but they are kept in hot water and indignation arise. People have no use for prophets who exhibit the fallibility of ordinary mortals.

Prophesying about the weather is always an anxious business. It is very difficult from twenty to forty days in the Dolphin pattern, dispensing antiquity, and the prophet who ventures on a rainmaker of the Congressional Record is sure to find himself in a dilemma. He is dragged out of his legislative office at Washington

MASON & BERDAN.

—D. C. Nettleton has laid out ten lots on his premises on the north terrace, on Dixon Avenue, on the road to the depot. These lots are among the finest in the village, and the number being limited, first comers will fare best. They are for sale at a bargain.

—Mr. H. L. Page, formerly of East Jordan, where he was in business for several years, has decided to make Charlevoix his future home, and has secured office room with H. S. Harsha, where he will do a general real estate and loan business. Mr. Page is a wide awake and enterprising man, and will be welcome here.

—At the council meeting last Friday evening, a resolution was adopted tendering the C. & W. M. officials a complimentary banquet on the occasion of the first train into Charlevoix, and a committee was appointed to perfect arrangements. A resolution was also adopted inviting the Presidents and Trustees of neighboring villages to be the guests of the village on July 4th.

—The season of entertainment practically opens at Lewis Grand Opera House on Monday evening, June 13th, with Maude Atkinson and her superb company in "French Spy." Miss Atkinson has an established reputation as a star, and her repertoire is of the best. The "French Spy" is a drama of great power and scenic effects, and the house should be filled.

—At two o'clock yesterday, the tug Higgie, lying at the Wilbur dock, caught fire in her forward hold, and had a narrow escape from destruction. Her whistle gave the alarm, and in five minutes the tug Gilken was alongside with her hose, quickly followed by the hand-engine. The steamer arrived in good time with steam up, and the big steamer Purtan edged up to the scene with hose out and pumps working. The honors were divided between the Gilken and the hand engine. Damage not very serious.

—Dr. Walter Lamb, of Philadelphia, a dentist of twelve years experience, has opened an office over the Bank of Charlevoix. He is thoroughly equipped with the modern appliances, and is prepared to perform all dental operations in the best possible manner, and to administer Nitrous Oxide Gas and ether for the painless extraction of teeth. Dr. Lamb is a graduate from the Boston Dental College, and also of the the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, but practices dentistry exclusively. Office hours from 8 to 4. Branch office at East Jordan, open on Wednesdays.

—If our brother of the Democrat will call at the store of L. D. Bartholomew & Co., Mr. Blanchard will give him an object lesson in this matter of American tin-plate, which has so wrought up the Democratic press since the McKinley tariff bill promulgated the doctrine that American industries encouraged means American happiness promoted. He will show our brother several boxes of tin plate manufactured at Cleveland, Ohio, and a sample of British tin, and demonstrate the superiority of the former over that of the latter. And they are making it right along, dear brother, every sheet as argument for protection, every box a "Pandora's box of evils" for Democracy and free trade. Tin-plate is eloquent, dear brother, these days, and will war more eloquent as the summer days pass and the November days come apace.

Woman's Share in the Columbian Exposition.

A feature of the World's Columbian Exposition next summer will be the erection of a Children's building and the ladies of America have undertaken this very commendable task. This building will adjoin the woman's building, and will be used as a place where mothers can leave their children in the care of trained nurses, who will minister to their wants and provide suitable refreshments. Older children will be under the direction of kindergartners, who hope by showing their influence over children untrained in kindergarten methods to prove the value of their system. No pains or expense will be spared to make this a delightful feature of the fair, and the Board of Lady Managers hope to interest the young ladies of every locality, and secure their help in raising the necessary funds, by means of Colonial Teas, socials, and other of the numerous ways they have for securing the dimes.

Mrs. Caroline Nicholls, of this place chairman of the county committee, has appointed the following ladies to take charge of the work in their various localities, and to act in the future as demands are made upon them. Mrs. A. E. Martin, Boyne City, Mrs. Wm. Mears, Boyne Falls, Mrs. Frank W. Stone, East Jordan, Miss Cherrie, Ironton. Mrs. G. V. Nash, Norwood, and Mrs. Nicholls will look after this work in Charlevoix. The sum to be raised is $15 and we have no doubt the ladies will readily secure the amount. In a circular letter the ladies comprising the state board says that on efficient country work depends the success of the woman's exhibit from Michigan, and they urge women contemplating exhibits to begin work at once.

It is eminently a commendable project, and as a part of the work assigned to the women, it should receive the attention of the men. Charlevoix county will unquestionably do her part. East Jordan and Boyne City papers please copy.

The National Republican Convention.

On Friday last political circles were thrown into a state of excitement by the announcement that Secretary Blaine had resigned his portfolio. That friction between Blaine and Harrison is the cause it is certain, but its effect on the convention can only be guessed at.

The Convention at Minneapolis assembled yesterday at noon, and elected J. Sloan Fassett, of New York, temporary chairman, following which the convention adjourned until noon to-day.

—The Marion people have organized to attend the Charlevoix celebration in a body. They will rendezvous near the cemetery in the morning and be assigned a place in the procession. J. G. Reed and Geo. Anderson are the committee of arrangements. Banks people are invited to join them.

THE RAILROAD WORK.

Satisfactory Progress Being Made All Along the Line.

The rails were laid across the bridge Friday, and communication is open between the two sides of the river. Monday engine No. 144 crossed to the north end of the bridge, but owing to a weakness in the embankment did not go clear over. The mend has been made, and crossing can be made now when necessary.

No 105 is hauling gravel from the north into the yard, and the lifting gang are at work there. The road is entirely finished from the south to Ellsworth, 17 miles from here. The gravel is nearly all distributed from Ellsworth north, and 160 ballasters are working this way rapidly.

The editor of this paper and engineer Harris came down from Petoskey Friday morning. Eight miles of the run was made in nine minutes. There is not a finer "tangent" in the state than the air-line of six miles north of the state road crossing. It is perfect.

Work on the depot is progressing rapidly under the deft hands of ten carpenters.

Captain H. G. Edwards has been appointed captain of the bridge, and entered upon the discharge of his duties yesterday. After train service begins he will have three men under him.

The signal towers are being placed on the bridge.

THEY HAVE ACCEPTED.

The C. & W. M. Officials Will Celebrate the Fourth of July in Charlevoix.

Chairman Meech, of the celebration committee, is in receipt of a letter from General Manager Heald accepting, for himself and his associates, the invitation of the committee to be present at the Charlevoix Fourth of July celebration.

They will probably come by a special train, and be accompanied by a goodly number of Grand Rapids people.

Charlevoix appreciates the compliments, and will extend to them a sincere and boundless welcome.

Gentlemen, the town is yours.

—Charlevoix is becoming metropolitan in more ways than one. Our season of entertainment was opened this week by a metropolitan attraction. Miss Maude Atkinson and her company appeared at Lewis Grand Opera House Monday and last evening in "Forget-Me-Not," and "Clemenceau Case," respectively, and without question was the greatest dramatic attraction that ever appeared on that stage. Miss Atkinson is an actress of power and grace, and is well supported. To-night they appear in "The Mail Carrier," a Comedy. They deserve a house-full.

—Wm. Simmons, a respected citizen of East Jordan, died very suddenly last Friday, of heart disease. He was buried Sunday with Masonic honors. Three lodges—East Jordan, Boyne City, and Charlevoix—participating. By request of the East Jordan lodge, the Master of the Charlevoix Lodge conducted the services. Three Odd Fellows lodges—East Jordan, Boyne City, and representatives from Charlevoix, attended in a body, and followed the Masons with a portion of their beautiful service. The beast was extremely oppressive, and several were compelled to fall out of the ranks.

Some of the Democrats are or pretend to be pleased at Harrison's nomination as the "easiest man to beat. Those who say so would have said so whoever might be the nominee. They know nothing whatever about the matter and are talking through their hats. Other Democrats think that the difference of opinion at Minneapolis in regard to the candidates will leave lasting feuds and dissensions. It is well for the Republicans if they believe this and it is worth while to encourage them in that belief. There's nothing so sure to defeat a political party as the confidence that the enemy will give them the victory.

Strayed.

Came to my enclosure in Charlevoix township, on the 13th, one span of horses. Owner will pay charges and take away.

ALVIN C. NEWMAN.

COMMENCEMENT.

The Annual Graduating Exercises of the Charlevoix High School.

The graduating exercises of the Charlevoix High School will be held at the Lewis Grand Opera House next Tuesday evening. The following program will be presented:

1. Quartet, "Annie Laurie"..... Buck.
   Minnie Bartholomew, Artie Kinney, Alice Bowman, Lillie Cornwell.
2. Prayer.....
3. "Through the Harbor to the Ocean"..... Gray.
   Hazel Rose.
4. Address, "Complete Education,"
   Rev. W. H. Macpherson.
5. King Robert of Sicily..... Monroe Boonton.
   Ella Carr.
6. Vocal Duet, "Sweet Spirit, Hear My Prayer"..... Meyerbeer.
   Lillian Carpenter, Kate Smith.
7. Science and Humanity..... Huxley.
   Roy B. Dexter.
8. Vocal Duet, "Sweet Spirit, Hear My Prayer"..... Gounod.
   Clara Adams, Artie Kinney.
9. Presentation of Diplomas.
10. Beautiful Springtime..... Verdi.
    Chorus.
11. Benediction.

Every patron of our schools and every friend of education should make sure to attend these exercises. Each commencement, heretofore, has been a marked event in the history of Charlevoix; and we are sure this will prove no exception.

Six hundred tickets will be issued, and after these are taken the distribution will be stopped. These tickets will be on free distribution at Schneerman's on Monday next at one p. m., and until all are taken. Those who wish to reserve seats can do so by paying five cents. No other charge. It is hoped that this reserve will pay the expenses of the hall. Pupils of the 9th, 6th and 5th departments will receive tickets and be permitted to reserve seats. Parents of children in other departments are requested to secure tickets in person for their children, and have them in their company at the hall. This regulation is to prevent the undue crowding of desirable seats by children alone.

Other exercises of commencement week are Baccalaureate Sermon by Rev G. S. Harris at the M. E. church, Sunday evening, June 19th, and a reception to the Alumni to the Class of '92, on the evening of Wednesday, June 22.

Musings from Hayes.

'Rah for Harrison!

Winter wheat is coming into head.

E. S. Sly has opened up a stock of general merchandise at Bayside.

The new mill at Bayside is ready for the machinery.

Mrs. Leroy Hamlin left yesterday for Milwaukee.

The Maple Grove Sunday school was organized last Sunday.

Mrs. Frank Burnett has been sick for some time, but is now convalescent.

Mrs. Ella Baker, of East Jordan, is visiting at W. S. Baker's.

U. S. Newson is building a veranda to his residence.

Our farmers will commence cultivating corn this week.

Peter McNally furnishes shingles to the Charlevoix and Petoskey markets.

Rifenburg Milling Co. are selling their flour at remarkably low prices. Read their ad. and profit thereby.

Norwood Notes.

The following schooners loaded at Nash's dock last week: Conquest, Florence M. Smith, Larinda.

Mrs. Lewis, a sister of H. S. Babcock, is here on a summer visit from Atlanta, Mich.

The Charlevoix kid base ball nine challenged our kids for a game on our grounds last Saturday. Late in the afternoon they sent word they were sick and couldn't come. The boys here say they would have been sicker if they had come.

M. W. Pearl and Fred Jackson, on Friday night, while trying to speed their horses, collided and demolished the sulky of the former, and came very near having a runaway.

Nick Shores and Larnie Ferguson brought back from the Jordan two hundred nice trout. They were caught late Saturday night.

Jim Chase left Sunday for Chicago.

Mrs. Geo. H. VanVleit returned Monday on the Charlevoix from her St. Louis visit. Miss Juniata Stafford, of Chicago, came with her.

Pd. Stafford this week is at Robert Trimble's doing the stone work for a large new barn. Mr. Trimble bought his stone, (five hundred pounds) at Norwood.

The boys have arranged for a game of ball with the Eastport kids Saturday this week.

Beet Sugar and the McKinley Law—The Deadly Parallel Again—An English Writer on the Effects of the American Tariff—Other Topics.

Profits in Sugar Beets.

A short time ago Charles B. Buckland wrote an article for the American Agriculturist on beet sugar and the new tariff. It is brief, fresh from and valuable. It suggests that liberal attractive prices for beets will soon drive strange enemies of the growth and success of the beet sugar industry can be afforded than that of Germany, where the production of raw sugar increased from 1,000,000 tons for the season of 1871-72 to more than 1,200,000 tons for the season of 1880-81. Within two decades the growth was phenomenal. It was a growth of full-grown profits to production, but solely and exclusively to the bounty system established by the German government to promote an agricultural and manufacturing industry for a community of life which could be raised on German soil, and which could be consumed throughout the empire. Mr. Buckland, writing in the autumn, noted because from the following table giving the figures for two periods:

	Germany.
	Beet.	Raw Sugar.	Candy.	Other Sugar.
1871-72	9,000,000	1,200,000	8,000	1,000
1877-78	14,750,000	1,600,000	18,000	16,000
1880-81	16,000,000	1,700,000	18,000	18,000
1890-91	19,000,000	1,800,000	18,000	18,000

Domestic consumption in Germany pays a tax on the weight of the beets worked and also a tax on the refined sugar, but sugar thus exported is free from both these taxes, and receives the government bounty. It will not be surprising, therefore, to see that the exports of German sugar increased materially, as follows, to wit:

	Exports.
	Raw.	Candy.	Other	Total
1871-72	1,000,000	1,000	1,000	1,000,000
1877-78	1,000,000	1,000	1,000	1,000,000

The bounty paid by the German government on the exportation of sugar from them is being paid on sugar grown and manufactured in the United States. Having, therefore, this additional information of a sugar industry established with a similarity, and in many places a great superiority, of soil and climate, and of the best and other conditions being equal, it is self-evident that our American farmers are better situated to succeed than the German sugar-beet farmers of twenty years ago. We are not obliged to export our sugar to pay heavy transportation charges in doing it, but can sell it at home, and at a large price, but should weigh from 1 to 15 pounds more to the sugar beets, and contracting to buy the superintendent of a sugar factory, and, in growing beets the larger beet is, the the guarantee of the price he will be paid for them, but, in case of his not within a week of delivery, and his returns are not made without deducting freight, commissions or other disbursements. The farmers in the great beet sugar states, are waking up to the advantages of sugar beet culture, and a highly remunerative crop is shown by the efforts to establish the industry in Nebraska County in the state of New York.

Another Sore Point for the Bounty Parties.

There is doubtless that upset such paper with the predictions of the free trade or the theoretical tariff reformers that the parallels from history. Many of them have been given in these columns, and here is another of some importance.

Prior to 1846 so—in a general survey of the sugar industry—the British sugar and tea trade was a free trade, free importation, free, and, forbidding, the necessary duties and taxes, and, consequently, longer that government people felt and felt, and, in the end, the British sugar industry was ruined, by unremitting transportation, and, in the end, the British sugar industry was ruined, by unremitting transportation, and, in the end, the British sugar industry was ruined, by unremitting transportation

NAMES FOR SHIPS.

Fanciful and Picturesque Appellatives Applied by Sailors.

The sailors use somewhat fanciful appellatives to describe vessels according to peculiarities of movement, condition or management, according to American Notes and Queries. A typical domestic animal is referred to in lamentation, a vessel on which the captain's wife has a hand in the regulations, and an animal of no less decided characteristics gives the name of donkey-engines to English steam-cranes, commanded by officers who find some little or no service in lower quarters—who loll cross on board—through the cabin windows and out over the bows, as it is sanctimonly described. Any one who has seen from a distance a number of small vessels lying close together will recognize the appropriateness of mosquito fleet, the blue-water sailors term for them. Perhaps only those who have experienced the uneasy possible on shipboard can appreciate the name of hell afloat given a vessel notorious for such government. Another ominous term is floating coffin for a vessel that may be unmanageably unworthy, but which in fair weather is an occasion to vindicate its name. In contrast to this, English sailors and whalers are known as lime jugers because they are required by the British admiralty to carry lime juice as an anti-scorbutic. Again, referring to the health of the soul, what could be better than floating hymn for an old ship in port used for religious services.

As opposed to cutter and clipper, legitimate class names of vessels from their cutting and clipping the water, the title of lemonwater is applied to a Block-houred vessel, one that broches to amidst the water, a ship which compares the French brisee, to dash or break waves or brisants, breaker. The action upon the water results the opposite condition of lemonwater, sloop and slip, skidmand scud or shoot, and yachtsmen talk of sailing. Wet vessels that take much water on deck are known as diving-bells from their plunging into the waves instead of riding over them. A vessel that pitches heavily is called a pile-driver—another term that can be appreciated only by those who have felt such pounding, well described in German as stampfmaschine, which when sailing at sunset, A lighter degree of somewhat the same kind of movement seems to be the source of the legitimate terms skipjack and dancing applied to light speedy vessels.

Two ships, formerly sighted to the ships of the East India company from their usual cargo, is a colloquial example of the large class of ship names referring to cargo and trade. The wagon line appears again in wheelbarrow, applied to steamboats having a large stern paddle-wheel, which gives it a general appearance fully justifying the name. In allusion to their characteristic shape the canal-boatmen call a bob boat a chunker and the section of a boat a bow. Under the same head lightering was formerly applied in England to a heavy trading vessel. Bo-ship is a box is regularly classified by German Boss, Dutch bosse, Spanish sueba and English boss, a kind of fishing-boat.

The transfer of the title of the commander of the fleet to his own vessel is an old custom still in vogue. Milton speaks of

The Admiral Jove
Hence on Neptune's palace, to be the host
Of some great Admiral.

A DISGUSTED TRAMP.

He Has a Horrible Experience on a Steamship Trip.

Kite-shaped tracks are off the race nowadays, and not to be behind the times, the Santa Fe road has built an immense one on this model, taking in the principal towns in San Bernardino, Los Angeles and Orange counties. Starting at San Bernardino, for example, one may take a train and ride for several hours, never passing through the same town twice, and yet at the end of the trip he will be just where he started from.

A tramp who was not familiar with this unique bit of railroading, and who had been passing some time among the orange groves of the lovely San Bernardino valley, decided it was time to seek fresh fields, so with a bag of his friends he went to the Santa Fe depot in the city just mentioned, and, finding a train there on the point of starting out, he made his acquaintance the brakeman, agreed to pay Sam anywhere in New Mexico in this a couple of months, and as the train moved, swung himself in on a brake beam and was soon flying through the country. The train made no stops that zone long enough to allow the impecunious traveler an opportunity to get out and stretch himself. Finally, however, a piece of large size was unpacked, but when the train stopped it was evident a long halt was to be made. The tramp concluded it must be a division headquarters, so he crawled out from under the car, straightened up and then looked around him to see what sort of a place he had struck anyhow. There was a familiar air to his surroundings, and, looking at the signboard on the station he was paralyzed to see the words "San Bernardino." He had put in the best part of a day riding on a pot train over a kite-shape track.

The Mace.

Like the British house of commons, the lower house of the United States Congress at Washington possesses a symbol of its authority in the form of a mace. It looks like the fasces which were borne by the lictors before the Roman tribunes and consists, and represents of a bundle of thirteen ebony rods entwined and bound together with silver bands. The thirteen ebony sticks represent the thirteen original states of the union. They are surmounted by a globe of silver, upon which the hemispheres are traced, while a silver eagle with outstretched wings is perched upon the summit of the globe. It was made in 1841, weighs twenty pounds, and is intrusted to the custody of the sergeant-at-arms.

Fairies Necessarily They Know Law.

There are now twenty-one law firms in the United States composed of husbands and wives, and there are about 200 Japanese women who practice law in the courts to manage legal publications.—Journal of Education.

HOW TO WRITE DATES.

Various Forms Used in Writing Letters Nowadays.

"The Listener" writes in the Boston Transcript, "January 2, 1891." Is a date which looks picturesque, distinguished and finde-siecle on paper. It reminds one that the world is getting particularly old. It will be very interesting to write "1900" at the top of one's letters, when the year comes around; it would be still more interesting to write "2000" there. Few of us will ever do it, though if science does its duty and finds a way to prolong a distilled person's life to the term of a California mission Indian's some of us may hope to do it. The writing of that date above reminds the Listener that there is a great diversity of usage nowadays in the writing of a date. Looking over a number of private letters, the Listener has found them dated in all of the following ways:

1. December 8, 1890.
2. December 24th, 1890.
3. 24th December, 1890.
4. 24 Dec., 1890.
5. Dec. 24, 1890.
6. 24th Dec., 1890.
7. 1890, 24th December.
8. 12 | 24 | 90.
9. XII., 24, 1890.

It would be hard to say which is the most approved of these methods. It is very much according to the taste and fancy of the writer, lace spelling of the honored patronymic Weller, perhaps the commonest method is No. 5, while the most vulgar is No. 8. It smacks of the retail store and laundry, too. Personally the Listener does not like an abbreviation in a date, and consequently does not like No. 3. We ought at least to have the appearance with our friends and the general public of having enough time at our disposal to write out the full name of a month at the top of a letter. None but a slave should be under the necessity of abbreviating it. No. 4 is old-fashioned and rather English. No. 1 and No. 2 are sensible and approved methods. The letter dated "XII. 24, 1890," was written by a schoolmaster and is to be classed as an evidence of eccentricity rather than of haste or laziness. It has a sort of antique, Romanesque appearance, too, though to be consistently classical it should no doubt have been written XII. XXIV. MDCCCXC.

GOING TOO FAR.

He Had a Somewhat Fastidious and Refined Appetite.

"Have you any cold victuals?" inquired the rusty-looking pilgrim, "to spare for a hungry—"

"No!" snapped the woman at the kitchen door.

"Perhaps I was wrong in asking for cold victuals," he resumed, apologetically. "If I had suggested tenderloin steak with baked potatoes, cream, and a cup of cocoa—"

"You wouldn't have got that either."

"Ah! My own preference. I acknowledge, would have been roast turkey with cranberry sauce, chicken salad, a morsel of Roquefort cheese and French coffee, with perhaps a glass of—"

"I wouldn't have done you any good to ask for that, either; you impudent, insulting vagabond! You ought to go to work."

"Madam," interposed the rusty tourist, with dignity, "I can overlook your total inability to satisfy the gastronomic requirements of a man with a somewhat fastidious appetite, but when you apply offensive epithets and offer unsolicited advice, you are presumptuous altogether too far. Madam, good morning."

And as he got around the angle of the kitchen he could plainly hear the dispersal of hot water strike the wall of the house opposite with a horrible swash.—Chicago Tribune.

A Brave Soldier, But Not a Worrier.

"The soldier is always more or less brave," remarked the veteran, "and even when he is not at all inclined to boreism he will when the fog of war comes rise superior to himself and do great deeds of valor. It is funny to hear a man you know, who will go right up to a cannon's mouth when it is loaded to the muzzle and a man standing at the rear ready to pull the firing express his feelings when the spirit isn't moving him. Once when we were down there before Petersburg, when the shot was tearing up the ground in all places at once, I was lying in a safe corner with a man who had only a few hours before come through a perfect rain of fire, carrying the flag to a point where he could share it in the enemy's face. We got to talking about war in general and this sort of fighting, and I said to him: 'If you had your choice, would you have war this way or out in the open, face to face?'

"There's only one way I'd have war," he said sharply.

"How's that?" I asked.

"Have it over, and then quick," he replied, and 10 minutes afterward he was doing a deed that was late his shoulder-straps.—Detroit Free Press.

SEVERAL FATALITIES AT DIFFERENT POINTS

Disfigurement Death of Patty McDonald, the Prominent Socialistic Rebels in the Indian Territory—Outbreak in Southwestern Hinai—Michael Davitt Hurt.

The Lawmakers.

In the Senate on the 21st little was passed as follows: For holding terms of court in the counties of Roscoe, providing for two additional Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, one for the district of Oklahoma, providing for the creation of land districts in Montana. The Senate then adjourned until the 25th. Mr. Hatch reported the agricultural appropriation bill to the Senate in consideration of the whole. The possibility of a deficiency in the appropriation for the department was discussed in connection with a joint resolution appropriating $100,000 for the relief of the Mississippi Land Sufferers, but Mr. Lamar, of Texas, objected to the resolution being considered.

Dick McDonald is Fatally Harmed.

Patty McDonald, the notorious leader of the Lookout & Williams Mc and lawless company, was fatally injured at the Hotel Frisco, Chickasha, I. T. She had been engaged in a drunken spree and had imbibed quite a quantity of whisky, and in the afternoon was down in the floor beneath her dress and was in a state of stupor. In an hour she was found to be a mass of flame, and the conclusion was that in attempting to light her night clothes, setting a blanket from the bed on fire, enveloped herself in the flames. Miss McDonald died five hours later, Patty McDonald is widely known in the theatrical profession. When 3 years old she made her first appearance on the stage, at that time being known as "Baby McDonald." She had been long lifted with "Hallen and Hart," "Tony Pastor," "Lillian Russell" and other of several variety combinations on the stage.

Wounded by a Cyclone.

A special from Lott, Texas, says the account of the cyclone which visited a terrible epidemic, which carried destruction in its path, and in which one person were more or less injured. The child of a man named Palmer was killed so badly that it died. Mr. and Mrs. Weatherby and his children were blown their other three children being dangerously injured. Mr. Brown had his leg and collar bone broken. Mrs. Reeves was injured and is still unconscious. Mrs. Reeves's little baby escaped without a scratch. The houses were carried 100 yards in the storm. A ceiling blown off by panel, was found in a house in which Dr. Hodges lived. A picture was found over five miles from the place. It was left without a scratch. Chickens were picked up and scattered along the country. The damage done by the cyclone was about a quarter of a million dollars.

Robbin Who a Bluff.

ALENCIA Venezuela dispatch. An important battle has been fought in the republic near this town, and resulted in the defeat of Palacio, Alvarez. The was terrific fighting all along the line, but finally the victory of the government was complete. They are now in retreat toward Venezuela. The loss of Monagas in the state of Bermudez, is in possession of the forces. The loss of the government was less than was taken by the insurgents. The Venezuelan Legation has gone to Curacao. He has come out openly in favor of the rebels.

Beaten and Robbed.

TWO LAYING and a number Lawrence Street of a gang of thugs, last night, beat and robbed a Chicago man. The victim of the outrage was one of the brightest men in his class. This case of typhoid fever following so close upon the death of young Vanderbilt raises considerable apprehension regarding the sanitary condition of the lake boulevard.

On petition of nancy Elizabeth, N. J., women, the Chipman court recently passed an ordinance which prohibits girls under 16 from attending public dances without their parents or guardians. The penalties of dance and orphanages are imposed on offending girls and medicine holding parents responsible whatever. At the opening pinole of the season the police raided several public gardens, ejecting girls. Many willingly went out, but others made all sorts of sudden flights. Their names were taken for investigation. Mrs. Anna Dillon appointed a committee to assist the police.

THE Rev. Henry Blackburn, a Methodist publicist, 28 years old, whose home is at New York City, is a prisoner at Atlanta, Ga., at police headquarters. He was a passenger in the Northern Indiana Virginia sleeping car, last falling health the conductor him to disembark at Atlanta and go South. He was engaged to represent an Indianapolis Company (Howard Insulator of Mr. Lorenz Blackburn, of Muncie, which he went away. Mrs. Allen says he owes her $34. He was charged with cheating and swindling. The man was arrested in Hoagsville, Tennessee, on a misdemeanor and he had no better him. He was arrested, though, that he cannot should not be made known to the North. How, and affairs, he says, he owes no creditors he did not intend to run away.

WESTERN.

A BIGGS Newfoundland dog, foaming at the mouth and showing every symptom of rabies, created a panic in the northwestern quarter of Chicago Wednesday afternoon. The dog, which is a large mongrel, appeared after dashed through a number of yards, and in the children ran in all directions. The street car conductors in his way. Fifty persons were bitten.

Some time ago Mrs. Samuel Hamilton, of Milwaukee, received the news of her little Lawrence upon the charge of pickpocketing in Chicago. She had been spoken were subsequently found by a detective, who had arrested the boy, from the Chamberlin home by mistake. Mrs Lawrence could not bear the shame, damages, and compromised by accepting $5,000.

W. A. JOHNSON, President of the Commercial Bank and Trust Company, was well-known politician, and death Thursday morning at his residence, 1,000 Pine, which swept over St. Joseph, Mo. Mr. Johnson was a Democrat and a Mason. Only started to show in a small fever last the 10th of the month, and was strong known in two, and he occupants sank down in the morning of his life.

THE food at Indianapolis is the worst in the country, according to the inmates for years. Reports from the surroundings have had the effect that farm property has been in the market. Inquiry shows that the poor house farm cuts along the railroad and that the farm is in the hands of the overseer. Crops have been overgrown, and have grown very rank. Southern

WILLIAM Watson of Rosedale Ind., was arrested and jailed under $2,000 bond charged with the murder of his wife. It is said he stored poison to the value of $15,000, of which he sold to the value of $1,000 weekly but nobody's men, whose confidence Wright had gained in the business. Wright is charged with the robbery. He entered the office of Mr. Cary, and, at the point of a pistol, ordered the Wheeling Creek Telegraph, which superintending the handling of a large amount of money. He was nabbed and organized a posse, and, after a long chase, he was caught which is unknown. The commander discovered the robbery and gave the alarm. Other payments.

AT Brazil, Ind., a shooting affray occurred at Haverly's saloon. Thomas Cayton, publisher of the printing mill, he was shot and dangerously wounded. Several others were the saloon, and opened fire on Cayton. Cayton, in self-defense, shot only immediately mortal disease. The affair grew out of a quarrel between the parties. The proprietor of the saloon opened fire on Cayton, and he and others followed the shooting. Miss McDonald died five hours later, Patty McDonald is widely known in the theatrical profession. When 3 years old she made her first appearance on the stage, at that time being known as "Baby McDonald." She had been long lifted with "Hallen and Hart," "Tony Pastor," "Lillian Russell" and other of several variety combinations on the stage.

Northern Michigan News.

The Commercial Hotel at East Jordan has again changed proprietors, and is now in the charge of Mrs. S. H. Pierson late of the Bridge Street House at Charlevoix.

A. J. Beardsley, of Boyne City, has purchased a steam saw mill with a daily capacity of about 20,000 feet and will set it up this fall on Thumb Lake about five miles east of this place.

Petoskey Journal: A petition signed by nearly all our business men and principal tax-payers will be presented to the council asking them to turn over to the new railroad the $5,000 in bonds voted by the village for "improvements."

Capt. Webb, managing proprietor of the Grand Traverse bay steamboat line, informs The Tradesman that he has decided to christen his new boat now receiving the finishing touches at Grand Haven the Columbia, instead of the Tidal Wave, as originally intended.

The largest raft ever seen in fresh water is being constructed at the mouth of the harbor at Cheboygan for Bushelle & Smith, of Bay City. It will contain 3,000,000 feet. The raft when completed will be towed by two or three powerful tugs to Tawas, where it will be manufactured into lumber.

The Record says that Petoskey does more postal business than Allegan, Cheboygan, Dowagiac, Greenville, Hancock, Hastings, Holland, Houghton, Hudson, Lapeer, Mt. Clemens, Niles, Red Jacket, St. Joseph or Tecumseh; in nearly 40,000 above the 40,000 limit, and ought therefore to be given free delivery with the cities named.

A company, incorporated under the laws of this State, to be known as the Bellaire Stave Co., with a capital of $20,000, the principal stockholders of which reside at Grand Rapids and St. Johns, has obtained a site in Bellaire and expects to begin work on its plant in a short time. The concern will give employment to about fifty men.

Railroad rumors relative to the proposed extension of the T. & A. railroad from Marion to Mackinaw are again in circulation. A Toledo paper recently stated that a corps of engineers would go over the ground at once and that a permanent route would be located within three weeks. The cost of construction of the extension is estimated at $2,500,000.

The business heretofore conducted by Cameron Bros. of Torch Lake will hereafter be conducted by a corporation known as the Cameron Lumber Co. Thos. Pfaffinger of Milwaukee, Wis. holds one-fifth of the stock in the new corporation, and by the way, is one of Milwaukee's moneyed men. The balance of the stock is held by the Cameron boys, individually. The corporation proposes to extend their operation and are making arrangements to put in a large mill at Central Lake. The goods manufactured will be hardwood lumber, broom handles, lath and shingles and they will deal in the posts and bark.

The National Republican Ticket.

The renomination of President Harrison was only a just recognition of merit. The convention made no mistake. It is but the logic of events.

Mr. Harrison has, during his incumbency of the Presidential office placed himself in the list of great chief executives. He is a brainy, honest, consistent and patriotic man, and the people like him.

Whitelaw Reid, the nominee for Vice President, is editor of the New York Tribune, and late Minister to France. He is a man of large ability and great popularity in his state.

From Marion.

The crops never looked better.

Barnard Grange will have a grand picnic in the near future.

Children's day will be observed at Barnard next Sunday afternoon.

Marion will show herself at Charlevoix on the 4th.

CHARLEVOIX AGAINST THE WORLD!

HARRISON & REID.

The Republican Standard Bearers Named by the Minneapolis Convention.

President Harrison was renominated on the first ballot, at Minneapolis last Friday afternoon. He received 534 votes, Blaine 178, and McKinley 186.

The nomination was made unanimous, and after the nomination of Hon. Whitelaw Reid for Vice President, by acclamation, the convention adjourned, every man a Harrison man.

It is a winning ticket.

Harrison and Reid and Victory!

The Republicans of Maine have already begun a movement to put ex-Secretary Blaine in the Senate.

The Democrats are not talking much about "grand father's hat," these days. Benjamin Harrison wears his own hat, and it covers a handful of brains.

There is no question about Republican victory. Benjamin Harrison has already defeated the prophet and priest of Democracy, and, with the prestige of a successful administration, he will do it again.

Whitelaw Reid, the Republican candidate, Minister to France under the present administration, is the editor of the New York Tribune. Mr. Reid is a well equipped, brainy man, and will strengthen the ticket.

There is some talk of Chauncey Depew for the state department vice Blaine resigned. But with a 40,000-a-year permanent "job" on the N. Y. Central Chauncey will probably take no chances.

Everybody seems to have settled down, satisfied that the republican nominations were the best that could have been made. The anxiety of the week has been succeeded by the calm assurance that the present administration will be continued for another term.

Free trade will be able to extract very little consolation from the republican platform. It is outspoken in its declaration of principles favorable to the home and workshops of Americans, and in this respect will be radically different from the platitudes which will be adopted at Chicago.

The Republicans of Michigan have been notified by their state central committee, which met during the past week in the city of Minneapolis, Minnesota, to get ready for a state convention to be held on July 20. The date is early, but perhaps not too early. The campaign of this year is to be waged with exceptional vigor on both sides and results of the greatest consequence are in the balance.

The president has no superior in the country as an extemporaneous speaker. His language and ideas are always apropos to the occasion, and he has a rare faculty of fitting the word to the thought, the thought to the word. Even the silvery-tongued Mr. Depew, the flowery Ingersoll, the fiery Ingalls; and the dispassionate McKinley must yield the palm for convincing oratory to the president.

Masonic.

Members of Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M. are requested to assemble at their lodge room at 9.30 o'clock standard time, next Sunday morning, to attend divine service, in commemoration of the Festival of St. John the Baptist.

W. A. SMITH, W. M.
H. A. SHERWOOD, Sec.

The Democratic Convention.

The Democratic National Convention was called to order in Chicago yesterday noon, and after effecting a temporary organization adjourned until to day at 11 a. m.

THE FOURTH.

Everybody Coming to Charlevoix to Celebrate.

The executive committee are in receipt of information from all points on the C. & W. M. railway from Petoskey to Traverse City, and every point except Central Lake will come to Charlevoix on the Fourth.

Petoskey will come in large force. Traverse City will make the Charlevoix excursion their great event. Elk Rapids, Williamsburg, Bellaire and other points south will come, and from points in our county. Charlevoix is the word.

J. M. Harris was down from Boyne City Saturday arranging for an excursion from that point. The Crysler will tow two large scows loaded with people, and Mr. Harris thinks the number will be fully four hundred.

The whole township of Marion, old and young will come in a body, and be accorded a place in the procession. Norwood will be depopulated, and every other village and township will be with us on the great day.

Traverse Bay steamers will run excursions from bay points.

Everybody will be here.

CURRENT MARINE NOTES.

The tug Anspach is here receiving repairs to her boiler.

The tug Avery brought in three schooners in one tow Monday.

The steamer Friant was hauled out here Monday afternoon to fasten her wheel.

The steam tug Clara Belle left Sunday for Grand Marias for the rest of the fishing season.

During a severe thunder storm in Milwaukee on the 16th, lightning shattered the maintopmast of the schooner Peoria, which was discharging a cargo of wood. No one was hurt.

The little steamer Julius, which was in here this spring, was driven out into Lake Michigan from Evanston in a recent gale, with a large number of students aboard, and had a very narrow escape from foundering.

The five new steamer Columbia of the Grand Traverse Bay Line, arrived here Thursday on her first trip. The Columbia is just the length of the steamer Faxton. She is a fine specimen of marine architecture, and in point of speed, and sea-going qualities is fully up to expectations. Her cabin is finished in hardwood, and upholstered in red plush. She is in every way a fine boat, and will make the Traverse Bay line more popular than ever.

Commencement Events.

The week ending to-night will have been eventful in the history of two of our young ladies—Misses Ella A. Carr and Maud A. Scott—constituting the graduating class of the Charlevoix High School.

Sunday evening was made the occasion of union service at the M. E. church, where Rev. G. S. Barnes preached the baccalaureate sermon. The church was crowded to the doors.

Last evening the commencement exercises occurred at Lewis Grand Opera House, before an audience of 600 people. The program, as published last week, was given with credit to every participant. The "sweet girl graduates" acquitted themselves grandly, and were the recipients of numerous and beautiful floral gifts. Time and space forbids a more extended review of the very interesting exercises.

To-night the alumni give a reception to the class at the residence of H. V. Hitchcock, and to-morrow the young ladies of the class of '92 will have passed "through the harbor to the ocean."

Common Council.

At the council meeting Friday evening, it was voted to raise one per cent on the assessed valuation for general and two mills for bridge and way purposes.

An ordinance was passed regulating the speed of steam vessels in the rivers, and an ordinance to preserve the purity of water in Round Lake. An ordinance was introduced prohibiting the construction of sidewalks.

The bids submitted for the erection of the water works building were all rejected, and the committee instructed to re-advertise.

PULMAN CAR IN CHARLEVOIX.

An Inspection Train Arrives Here From Grand Rapids Sunday. —Other Railroad Notes.

At 12.40 p.m. Sunday, engine No. 110 pulled across the bridge with General Manager Heald's private car, with that official on board, accompanied by Wm. Alden Smith, Mrs. Heald and Mrs. Smith, General Contractor McLane and depot contractor Pelton. The party remained here an hour and went on to Petoskey, returning south Monday.

On Friday a freight train arrived bringing the material for the telegraph line from Charlevoix to Petoskey, and a force of eight men is now at work putting up the wire. Another force is this side of Bellaire working north. Communication will be opened this week.

The ballasting on the main line will all be done this week, and regular train service begins next Sunday.

Train service at Charlevoix will be begun with an unfinished depot. Ten more carpenters arrive from Grand Rapids to-day, and the ticket office will be got as near ready as possible for use. It will require two weeks yet to complete the structure.

THE DRIVING PARK.

An Organization Effected—Work on the Track Progressing.

The Charlevoix Driving Park Association is a reality. A meeting was held at the Village hall Monday evening, and the following officers elected:

President—G. W. Crouter.
First Vice Pres.—B. W. Miller.
Second Vice—Chester Denton.
Secretary—F. W. Mayne.
Treasurer—O. S. Washburn.
Directors—G. W. Crouter, B. W. Miller, Wm. Stevens, Geo. Bates, Jas. Gaffney, Geo. Burns, A. J. McLeod, F. W. Mayne, O. S. Washburn, Chester Denton, A. Richards.

Another meeting will be held tonight, and further details of organization effected. It is proposed to make the primary object of the association the acquirement of the best half-mile racing course in Northern Michigan.

That this object will be reached is daily becoming more certain as work on the track progresses. Already the course has assumed the shape and to some extent the condition of a driving park, and a force of men and teams are hard at work with wheel-scrapers, and other labor saving implements in putting the proper finish on the curves.

Those in charge say that while the track will not have reached that state of perfection to which they will in the near future put it, July 4th will find it in condition for racing.

The Dixon Farm.

A party of surveyors was here from Grand Rapids yesterday making the boundary plat of the Dixon farm, recently purchased by C. & W. M. officials. They will plat it for resort purposes at once.

The Dixon residence has been leased to the Chicago Summer Resort Association as its annex. Mr. Dixon vacates the premises between this and July 4th.

The plan contemplated includes a boulevard along the lakeward edge of the terrace, connecting on the south with the Chicago Resort street, and on the north with the State road. Several wide streets will sub-divide the plat. Work on the hotel may be commenced this fall.

Religious Items.

Methodist.

Sunday morning, sermon to the Masonic fraternity in honor of the Festival of St. John the Baptist.

Evening theme, "How God Talks with Man.

Congregational.

Morning, "Worship, Belief and Conduct." Evening topic, "David's Theology."

Union.

The Undine people chartered the Walter Crysler last Sunday, going to Boyne City and East Jordan and stopping at the Island for dinner.

Miss Williams will have a picnic on the last day of school July 1st.

Mrs. Geo. McRoberts, another Tuligosotian, came back last week.

Crum, Whitford & Sons are putting in many improvements on their mill.

Elmer Knapp has moved back to Horton's Bay.

Ralph Prescott continued no further information on which to base rapid, progressive action.

His own pleasure as if the happiness of a lifetime had come to one darling creature.

His love-dazzled satisfaction, supreme confidence, vertigo.

He strolled straight back to Hidgeon the very hour, only on the way he halted at Fleet's office.

It was the same office and referred to as the place where he had traced his runaway daughter and her thieving lover.

Ralph Prescott visited the clergyman of the village. He was closeted with him for an hour or more.

When he resumed his journey, his evil eye was more venomous than ever.

Flint, and counterpoint kept his thoughts by well-nurtured Hidgeon.

He did not proceed at once to the former home of his friend, Geoffrey Forsyth.

A night's rest and reflection were necessary to act clearly and make no mistakes.

At dark the next evening he knocked softly at the door of the house that our sheltered the disguised Ruth Elliott.

He opened it readily. Her glances also hair and widow's cap well concealed all traces of the youthful face behind them.

"I wished to see you on a matter of business, Mrs. Easton," said Prescott slowly.

"Business did not ask him in, slightly puzzled, she led the way.

"Be seated," she said, motioning to a chair.

"It is in reference to Mr. Forsyth's will."

"You had better see his lawyer, then."

"No, I want see you. Please admit me. It is a matter of intense personal importance to years if alone."

Bewildered, the disguised Ruth admitted her unconscious visitor.

She was more disturbed at the probability of a man she detested than at any thought of his business errand.

The lamp in the room was started as she led her into the shadow. She had successfully adopted a tone that bids fair to succeed.

"Be seated," she said, calmly.

"Thank you," he said, "Mrs. Charon," pressed Prescott, forcibly. "I have come to see you about Ruth Elliott."

CHAPTER XII.

Ralph Prescott failed his keen penetrating gaze upon the woman as he emphasized the name he had spoken.

Something of the startled expression caused Ruth to start slightly. With generally composed as she did an engaged, however, she said simply:

"Proceed, I listen."

"You know this girl. You have been sending to find her."

"How dare you interfere in my affairs?"

"Because—I love you."

"Man, you are mad."

"Then we shall be mad together. We were simple, but that expression is an exaggeration of the significance.

"You know me!" faltered the disguised Ruth.

"Yes, Ruth Elliott, I know you."

The mask was down. He had expected a scene—a passionate hysterical. He was mistaken, only a flutter of the false lashes, a slight contraction of the muscles about the eyes, and Ruth looked up steadily.

"Yes, Ralph Prescott, you have penetrated my disguise. I am Ruth Elliott, no longer the timid girl who sinned at my Uncle's command.

"Indeed," answered the settled Prescott.

"But the wife of a man for whose sake I sinned, and who, hysterical, he was serious, and pained. You know me. What if I tell you I am happy, happier than I ever dared hope dreamed—rather than I ever dared hope.

"I know as your story, all your plot against Ruth Elliott.

"I think I do."

"I know you were in wave you, to and you, Ruth, and the schemer's seventh given under the name of Charon, and you used lip spaniel."

"Stop!"

"Not for if you ever needed a friend, a secret ally, it is now. You believe she would continue, Ruth Elliott. It is not so. For your sake I come here—for your sake. You have been, you are being, unmistakably, a fully deceived. Your husband—"

"Stop!"

The imperious mandate rang forth clear as a clarion note.

As Ralph rose indignantly to the feet, her voice finishing her voice vibrating with firmness, the emotion conveyed.

"I very speak," he muttered, doggedly. "I say you are being deceived."

"By my husband?"

"By the man you believe to be your husband."

"No you have insult me by doubting."

"He is merely his fidelity? Yes, Ruth Elliott, I do. I come with the words. I bring proofs."

"Proofs?" faltered the girl, scornfully.

"Yes."

"Of what?"

"Of the fact that you are not, and never were, Paul Dalton's wife. He is successful, a thief, a blackleg. Proof! He wrote about it himself. He has had suddenly cut off his allowance for the sequence—"proof" and the further words, certificate of marriage of Paul Dalton and Isabel Dealey."

"He was married before, his first wife is alive. He was married then, he is married now. The clergyman who gave us that document will swear to him—Ruth—Ruth—it has been too much for her!"

No need to urge further conviction. The last blow had told.

With a moan, Ruth Elliott removed and fell in a dead swoon.

Ralph Prescott looked anxious, but triumphant. He lifted her to a couch. He applied a flask of spirits to her nostrils.

He gave a sigh of the lay coldness of her lower at the total whiteness of her hands.

"If it has killed her" he panted. "No, no it is but a shock, but—I must get back—some neighbor, some woman. The woman is over, she knows, she believes. Henceforth, it is game—sulking."

He hurried from the house, intent on summoning help.

He rang at the doorbell of the next house. Briefly informing the woman he met there that Mrs. Elliott, the nurse, had been taken suddenly ill, and requested by her, requested to do the service.

For an hour the woman stolen on the inanimate form, chafed at recognizing her, obtained her consciousness. "I can't understand it, Mr. Prescott," she said. "I had left her sleeping a moment.

"Oh, don't say that" trembled Prescott, anxiously.

"You had better get a doctor."

A physician was soon in charge of the house and the woman was so he left the house.

All the hope he said to Prescott.

"That woman had better remain near her all night, and I will pay her handsomely. I have left regretfully. She seems to have taken a fancy to me, and I, in my nervous, tired evening, Mr. Prescott. Well said the woman, "that you not better send for her tomorrow?"

"Yes, I will, I think, if she was disposed."

"Home an extraordinary case also—rather," mused Prescott.

Prescott stood in the open doorway, lost in musing reverie.

If Ruth died, what could he hope to gain? Ruth was dead to him, he believed the figure of a man leaving in the shadow of the trees.

"What do you want, fellow?" he called out, advancing a step in a menacing manner.

The lurker came into the radius of the light and the owner of the house, that fact done, at that moment.

"Mrs. Elliott, how is she?"

The lurker came into the radius of the light and the owner of the house, that fact done, at that moment.

"Mrs. Elliott, how is she?"

"Paul Dalton or its ghost!" Ralph Prescott had expected again a rebuff.

The intruder was now fully revealed, and as the man stood he was stared wonderingly.

The first shock of the strangeness—of the appearance passed away quickly, however. He had seen in his younger Paul Dalton had injured, because he was born, that Prescott was unknown, it was the suggestion of the unusual, of the strange, that had startled Prescott, and left him a gaping, colless manner.

For there was something unusual, something strange in the appearance of the intruder.

The lurker's actions were rather curious, too, they shifting, and he retained expressed in his manner, as he was with an expression of the most extraordinary foreign, fearfully, paralyzing lest that the lower lips, superadded, certainly.

Again, the lurker underwent a great change in Paul Walter's features.

He had shown his face perfectly clear, his hair had been cropped close, he had trimmed a beard and let it grow.

He seems seemed to have grown smaller, he had lost his stature. Not a change Ralph Prescott would scarcely have believed possible, could he been sold of it, but personal inspection was his, and he was compelled to believe.

Into his mind crept a solution of the mystery of the change.

Paul Dalton had probably been away from home, he had been imprisoned, he had been, and his mother and his sister were from the same suspicion to this point, the prison house and the office of society.

He had heard of his ex-pal fortune, mentioned, he could never have down the mask. From the smooth, courteous hypocrite, he was become the haughty, domineering tyrant.

Very few criminal seemed to have left his face. He looked like a man who had been thoroughly jostled.

In fact, only that the general complexion of the man was the same, one might have believed this Simon Carleton was a different person from Paul Dalton, but by no means the refined, frank-eyed gentleman of the past.

"You're Prescott," he remarked, and the man addressed stiffly, coldly, for the intonation counted as if the speaker disgusted the man, and he was a little punctilio.

However, Prescott accosted, drew back, and, jerking his head over his shoulders, said:

"She's in there."

"Has, what ails the girl?"

The intruder edged away a little.

"Ask to doubt, supplemented Prescott.

Paul Dalton look relieved.

"I didn't come to see her," he said. "I've come on business; just got word about the fortune. See here, Prescott, where John the lawyer who made the will live?"

"A worse rascal than I thought him!" muttered Prescott, confirmed in the most suitable face of the intruder. He thinks little enough of both now. Maybe the fortune was his scheme all along. I never trusted the man with anything in the firm at the end of the year. Well, I'm sorry for forwarding ability—the little 120-pound woman holding up of the firm was your husband and a whole firm besides"—Indianapolis Journal.

Trying Moments.

Bridegrooms, as a rule, love the entertainment of the wedding ceremony with anything but grace. The chances for making mistakes are few, but they contrive to improve them. At a recent fashionable wedding the green ushers announced: "I, Amelia, take thee, Harold, to be my husband and wife." The bridal party, of course, were the only ones that heard it, were confused, and even the bridegroom of the great statesman could not repress a twinkle in his eye. Another unfortunate young man, when asked if he took the young woman to be his wedded wife, stared nonplused at the minister for fully ten seconds, then stood blankly "Big pumpkin, you you speaking to me?" Still another, when handed the ring, instead of presing it along, began nervously trying to put it on his own finger, and was only aroused by a sharp little pinch. But most of the small comedy incident to a wedding can be successfully hidden from the knowledge of the guests, and it is not until the bridegroom is let loose at the wedding reception that the fellow really begins to get edgety for fear he "will do something dreadful," a fear which is very often realized.

A Wonderful Invention.

An inventor in Vienna has produced a new material that combines some of the properties of glass and celluloid. It is made by dissolving five to eight parts of collodion wool (gun cotton) in about five parts by weight of ether or alcohol, adding two parts of castor oil and 1 to 10 per cent of resin or camphor balsam. The mixture is then dried on a glass plate at a temperature of 120 degrees Fahr.

The compound soon solidifies into a transparent sheet, having solidarity the properties of glass. It resists the action of acids, alkalis and dilute acids, and is flexible, says the Scientific American.

The addition of magnesium chloride makes its inflammability and brittle glass it the appearance of ivory. By increasing the relative proportions of resin and resin the toughness and pliability of leather is imparted to the material, and it may even be made into driving belts.

May Be Heard From Some Day.

That immensity in the number of inventions was brought home to the writer during the recent construction of the cable road in the dwarf. One of the workmen had occasion to wash his hands, and, as there was no water about, stepped some in a bucket for drinking purposes, the man found himself in a quandary. After a run, he thought he filled the dipper and, putting the end of the handle in his mouth, nodded his head up and down until the water fell in a little stream upon his hands, which he continued rubbing together until they were clean. Of course it was only a trifling circumstance, but still how many men would have thought of such a way out of the difficulty unless they had previously seen it done.

Kind of Tasty Dress.

"When in Russia," says a noted traveler, "I noticed with pleasure that the horses by the droskies were driven with a rein not much, if any, less than a whipcord, and without check-rein or blinders. The whip is little short, one, and I do not remember to have seen it used. The horses are nearly beautiful stallions and go like the wind, controlled chiefly by the voice. Whatever we say about these Russians, they are evidently kind to their horses."

Before vs. Yankee.

"Has the Jew, with his reputation as the champion of commercial rascality, not found in the Yankee more than his match? Has he not in reality been outplayed and shorn not his future in those parts seem but a theory one?" The foregoing inquiry appears in the American Hebrew, and the inquiry is Max J. Ullman, of New Bedford, Mass.

The wire rope used in the tunnel at Glasgow, Scotland, is the longest, the longest wire cable in the world, it was made at Cardiff, Wales, in 1886, and is 2,400 fathoms in length, or about two miles and 400 yards. It weighs twenty-one and one-half tons, and has nearly 100,000 fathoms of wire in its make-up.

"You robbed me of Ruth Elliott—you got will timidity Forsyth's fortune. I am a wronged, plundered man."

"On my, Sandon Dalton, with preaching conscious.

"I warn you, now and later, that you have no right to Forsyth's money. I warn you, now and later, that you will have to fight for its possession," continued Prescott, hotly.

"Very good, I'll right for it then."

"You are a scoundrel. You know that you came to me for the broken-hearted girl dying in yonder house then for the dirt under your feet. I warn you to have nerve to remove the torture rightfully here and mine, or—"

"Well, young man, or what?" blandly dismissed Paul Dalton—this now Paul Dalton, all sweetness, all heartlessness.

"I shall make my first move."

"And that move will be?"

"Your arrest for bigamy!" cried Ralph Prescott, with flaming eyes, finding before his composure the copied marriage certificate, that proved Paul Dalton to be the husband of two women.

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR.

CHARLEVOIX, JUNE 22, 1892.

For President—
BENJAMIN HARRISON,
Of Indiana.

For Vice President—
WHITELAW REID,
Of New York.

There Is No Nothing.

From all quarters comes the intelligence that all our great Republican leaders, who, in the National convention differed in opinion as to who the nominee should be, are united in the determination to do all in their power to elect the ticket.

The nominees are admitted to be good men and true Republicans who are capable of the highest trusts; and therefore they will be cordially and vigorously supported by every section of the party. Ex-Secretary Blaine promptly announced his determination to work for the ticket and against the common foe. Gov. McKinley has also done the same thing, but this was not necessary as he was the only man in the Ohio delegation who voted for the nomination of President Harrison. Warner Miller, Tom Platt, Senator Quay, and Chairman Clarkson are ready to do their utmost endeavors to elect Harrison and Reid. The platform is so full and so excellent, and the general tone of those who worked for President Harrison was unexceptionable, and the final majority was so much larger than anticipated, that it has quelled all opposition.

Our political opponents already recognize the strength of Harrison and Reid, and they admit that the convention could not have done better for the Republican party and therefore the Democrats must not fail to nominate two of their best men if they expect to stand any chance of success in the approaching presidential campaign.

Give the Democracy plenty of rope and it will hang itself before the next election day.

"Our political opponents have not done badly," says the Cincinnati Enquirer. "They have raised conditions against whom individually there is nothing to be said.

A Democratic exchange complains that the recent nation of Preside nt Harrison has not excited wild enthusiasm in the Republican party. No ver mind. It isn't noisy demonstrations that elect presidents. When the votes are counted it will be found that they are numerous enough to elect President Harrison by a handsome plurality.

Thomas Blaine, the second and eldest living son of Hon. Jas. G. Blaine, died suddenly at Chicago on Saturday. Mr. Blaine has been compelled to bear more than the usual allotment of sorrow but falls to the portion of one man. Two sons and a daughter have died within the past eighteen months. The American people will deeply sympathize with the illustrious Blaine.

The Supreme Court sustains the Miner electoral law, and the Democrats have scored another point. But the decision relieves the intense partisanship in which the law was conceived. A republican supreme court has demonstrated that it can rise entirely above partisanship, in dealing with a question lying almost wholly along partisan lines. Has a democratic supreme court ever manifested any such degree of judicial disinterestedness?

This, from the Detroit Tribune, is a fitting tribute to the greatest living American: There are no sources for personal regret for Mr. Blaine in the action of the Minneapolis convention. He did not seek its favor, since he is secure in the loyal affection of his fellow patriots in every state in the Union and since no honors that they might confer upon him could add to his stature as a statesman or enlarge the place which he will inevitably fill in the written history of his country. He has therefore received no wound at its hands. It gave to him, in fact, in the course of its proceedings the most tumultuous ovation ever tendered to a public man. It cheered him with a wild enthusiasm that evidenced the devotion of every Republican cast on the continent. It made the public position which he has had a material hand in shaping, the foundation of its hope for continuance in power. Nothing else that it could have added to his personal grandeur, or to the glory of his public career, is as just estimate of Mr. Blaine which determinates him the remost statesman of the newly. He is the people's favorite again, if he is that repeats today, he will a generation before Ameriton develops another like him.

AFTER YEARS IN EARTH.

Curious Instances of the Preservation of Human Bodies.

The tomb of Edward I., of England, who died in 1307, was opened on January 2, 1770, after 463 years had elapsed, and his body found to be almost perfect, the face even retaining its expression.

Canute, the Dane, who crossed over to England in 1017, was found in 1776 by the workmen who repaired the cathedral. His body had reposed in the grave for nearly 700 years, but was perfectly fresh and life-like.

In 1599 three Roman soldiers were dug out of a peat bog in Ireland, where they had, in all probability, lain at least 1,500 years, yet they were perfectly preserved, even to skin, hair, eyes and nails.

In the reign of James II., of England, the big church at Warwickshire fell. In clearing away the debris it became necessary to move the tomb of Thomas Gray, at one time marquis of Dorsetshire. When this had been done it was found that the body of the marquis was as fresh as a corpse newly buried, the flesh even being pliable. This discovery was made exactly seventy-eight years, three months and two days after the burial.

Robert Braybrook, who was bishop of London in 1381, and who died in 1404, was found to look perfectly natural when removed from the tomb after the great London fire of 1666; even the color of the eyes could be distinguished.

FACTS ABOUT TREES.

Uses of Their Woods and Leaves—Valuable for Many Things.

The butternut is a tree that likes best a rocky, uneven soil, and in whose shade neither shrub nor herb will thrive. The bark is used as a dye-stuff for woolens. Curled and block's eye maple is a wood of the same family that sometimes has curiously arranged fiber, one which curves, the other with eyes, hence the name. White ash is used in carriage works. It is poisonous to snakes. It is said a snake is never found in its shade. White oak timber is valued in ship building. Apple is excellent for fuel and fuel. Weavers' shuttles are made of the wood. Black birch timber is used in basket works, and that tree is claimed by the Indians as their forest inheritance. It emits a pleasant odor when burning.

Mountain laurel wood is used in making combs. The leaves are poisonous to some animals. Black wild cherry timber is much valued in cabinet works. The bark is highly medicinal. The leaves, when wilted are poisonous to cattle. Of dog-wood, weavers' spools and handles of carpenters' tools are made. Witch hazel is a large and extensive forest shrub. The small branches were formerly used for divining rods, and an extract from it is valued in medical practice. The wood of the American aspen, or white poplar, is used in the manufacture of paper.

A New Swindling Scheme.

A gang of sharpers are having success in a swindling game in the interior towns of West Virginia. A well-dressed man puts in an appearance at a country store, and informs the proprietor that he is searching for rare coins, giving a list of specimens and their alleged value. He asks the storekeeper to keep a sharp lookout, and in case he gets any of the coins mentioned in the alleged list, to keep them until he returns, which he says will be in a short time. Soon another stranger casually drops in and buys some little article, and, in making change, exhibits several coins which, he says, are pocket pieces. The proprietor consults his list and finds the value of the alleged pocket pieces just down at $40 or $50 each. Anxious to make a good thing the storekeeper usually pays a good big price for the pieces. He then waits for the man who made the tempting offers, but he never turns up.

The Average Woman.

The average woman can now be expressed in figures, so far at least as her physical qualities are concerned. She weighs one hundred and seventeen pounds and is five feet three inches high, if she is an American. If she is French she is only five feet one inch tall, and if she is English she is the tallest of the three. These statistics have been obtained by measurements of over a thousand women in their stockings by the French academy, of Francis Galton, in England, and of nearly two thousand women by Dr. Sargent of Cambridge, American women. It is said, weigh slightly more than either French or English women. This is a statement difficult of belief.

Horse-Power of a Whale.

The horse power of a whale has been made the subject of study by the anatomists, as William Turner, of the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, in conjunction with with the equally eminent Glasgow shipbuilder, John Henderson. The size and dimensions of a great finner stranded several years ago on the shore at Longridby furnished the necessary data for the computation of the power necessary to propel it at a speed of twelve miles an hour. The whale measured eighty feet in length, twenty feet across at the flanges of the tail, and weighed nearly four tons. To attain a speed of twelve miles an hour it was calculated that 245-horse power was necessary.

Overworked Her Teeth.

A contributor to a New York paper says: "I met a hotel chambermaid the other day whose lower teeth were nearly all missing, and from a singular cause. She had been for a great many years in the habit of holding the bolows in her teeth while she drew on the slips with both hands and is required in the loosening and gradual loss of those teeth upon which the strain was the greatest.

Tobacco Is Useless.

A minister, annoyed by tobacco chewing, thus spoke to his congregation: "Take your quid of tobacco out of your mouth on entering the house of God, and gently lay it on the outside of the sidewalk or on the fence. It will positively be there when you go out, for a rat won't take it, a cat won't take it, a dog won't take it, neither will a hog. You are certain of your quid when you go after it. Not the filthiest creature on earth would touch it."

Happy Hoosiers.

Wm. Timmons, Postmaster of Idaville, Ind., writes: "Electric Bitters has done more for me than all other medicines combined, for that bad feeling arising from Kidney and Liver trouble." John Leslie, stockman and farmer, of same place, says: "Find Electric Bitters to be the best Kidney and Liver medicine, made me feel like a new man." J. W. Gardner, hardware merchant, same town, says: "Electric Bitters is just the thing for a man who is all run down and don't care whether he lives or dies;" he found new strength, good appetite and felt just like he had a new lease on life. Only 50c. a bottle at F. G. Hines & Co.'s. 2

Why the "Red Sea."
Many persons have puzzled their brains wondering why the "Red" sea should be so called. The name was originally applied to it because portions of it are covered with patches from a few yards to some miles square, composed of microscopic vegetable animalcule which die the waters a blood red. When not affected by these organisms the "Red" sea is intensely blue, the shoal water showing some green.

HIS FATAL HABIT.
The Vice Which Dragged Him Down to An Untimely Grave.
His race is almost run, the feeble old man sitting by the fountain in the park and vacantly staring into the splashing water. Pale and emaciated, a distressing cough shook his emaciated frame and sent an unhealthy purple blush into his hollow cheeks. Even the very busy people hurrying to and fro, with thoughts fixed upon wealth and ambition, were fain to notice the aged invalid and to wonder at seeing such a wreck abroad. At length a youth of noble mien paused before the pitiful figure and regarded him with sad interest. "You are very ill," the young man ventured sympathetically. "Can I not help you?" The care-worn, pallid face lighted with sudden joy. "You are very kind, indeed," gasped the sufferer. A fit of coughing interrupted his words, and it seemed as though the frail thread of life must snap with the convulsion. "I am—past—help." The paroxysm was gone and the poor man was trembling for sheer weakness. "My friend," the old man faltered when he was finally able to speak, "I am a warning. I have killed myself by my perversity." "Drink?" suggested the youth. The invalid shook his head. "Cigarettes?" "No." "Opium?" "No form of dissipation. I have been without vice." The exertion of conversation was telling terribly upon his enfeebled organism. "I—was—addicted—to the—habit—" He was forced to wait for strength to proceed. "Habit—of—changing—my—friends—according—to—the—directions—of—the—government—weather—bureau." And on unbelieving concern listened to the humble home, where he died the same afternoon.

FREE CONSULTATION
of Detroit, for the purpose of accommodating his patrons and patients that cannot visit or consult him at Detroit, has opened an office at the point noted below, and will be there on that day. The Doctor has been thirty-one years in practice—thirteen years in general practice, eighteen years in the study and treatment of Chronic Diseases, for two years was Medical Superintendent of Alms and Penitentiary Institutions, was two years Professor of Anatomy and Physiology in Medical College in Detroit—has given hundreds of lectures upon Physiology in different parts of the State. If you have Catarrh, Throat, Lung, Eye, Ear, Liver, Stomach, Kidney or Nervous Diseases, improve this opportunity for a careful examination. If your case is not in his line he will tell you so; if you can be cured he will do so, if not, he will tell you so. Many diseases are of long standing, but still take a life-time, which is open all the time and is experienced by all in the same.
GLASSES fitted to all cases requiring them. Special attention given to Rectal, Uterine and Private Diseases.

PRESIDENT POLK OF THE FARMERS ALLIANCE ILL.

Continued Report of the Death of Emile Pache—Largest Fresh Water Sloopen Launched—Lightning Shattered His Skull—Texas Democratic Platform.

Congressional.

In the House, on the 8th, the day was given to the Committee on Judiciary, who occupied some two hours in discussing measures on the calendar. Among the bills passed were: Providing that a person who may sue in a United States court may also sue in a State court for redress, providing the court to sue sign cognizance in such cases; punishing by death a killing committed in any place in the United States jurisdiction, including carries of the vessels; for the imprisonment of not less than five years for counterfeiting, and not more than ten years, of not less than one year nor more than twenty years; repealing the statute requiring every factory and place producing and selling beer, wines or liquors to furnish a statement of the number of barrels and gallons made by the internal revenue collector; to provide for the relief of Alabama; to relieve the Sioux Indians; bill for the free coinage of gold and silver. After Mr. Morgan finished his remarks in opposition, the Senate bill was passed, Mr. Jones, of Arkansas, then spoke on the Sherman free coinage bill after which the Senate adjourned until Monday.

Senatorial Successor of President Polk.

Cyrus B. Poole, of North Carolina, President of the National Farmers' Alliance, is spoken of as the successor of President Polk in Washington. D. C. Mr. Polk has been ill about ten days, suffering from hemorrhage of the bowels, and is considered probably by tomorrow. He has caused blood poisoning and it is now thought that there is no hope of his recovery. Dr. Bennett, of Denmark, is with him. His son-in-law, Mr. Lewis, telegraphed for his wife.

A. L. POLK.

Largest Fresh Water Sloop Launched.

With all the majestic solemnity that attends the launching of a great ship, and the deafening shrieks of steam whistles and the reverberating roar of thousands of voices, the mighty Manitania, the sidewheel of the inland seas, the largest vessel that was ever built for plying on fresh waters, was formally given to the billowy Cuyahoga Wednesday afternoon. The launching took place in the Cuyahoga River at Ship Channel, at the Yards of the Chicago Shipbuilding Company. The vessel was launched as perfect as skill and attention could make them, and as the second sidewheel, the magnificent vessel, the tribute of which has rarely been paid at any time in the history of American steamboat, slid from the ways she moved down the ways and settled into her water of the silver River, as though it had been a toy rather than the living, breathing thing it really is.

Terrible Death of Emile Pache.

A terrible death and half shorn visited Fitzwilla Township, near Norwalk, Ohio, Wednesday afternoon. The same damage was done to wheat crops by the hailstones, which were as large as walnuts. At L. Gilbert's farm several acres were shaved down, leaving nothing but stems and leaves blown down. While plowing in Hodges' last fall, he was killed by lightning. The field struck Hodges' left ear, passed to the tongue, which was swelling, followed around his body from the spinal cord, and in the ground, tearing off the sole of his boots.

BREVITIES.

Twenty-one persons passed Quarantine and Castalia, who recently established a hotel of trade at Joliet, Ill., are not to be found, and upper slave lost between $7,000 and $8,000.

The Berlin Tageblatt, confirms the recent rumors of the death in the interior of Africa of Emin Pasha. It is true that Emin is dead the natural supposition is that he has fallen a victim to assassins, but the official reports in Berlin stated he was suffering.

The Texas Democratic Convention adopted a platform denouncing the lower bill, demanding the tariff for revenue only, opposing the subtreasury, denouncing the silver, opposing national banks as banks of issue, and favoring legislation to prevent combinations to restrict trade.

Tony, McGinnan & Co., wholesale grocers of Memphis, Tenn., assigned to W. G. Mentowell and L. B. Mathews as trustees. The liabilities are $97,000 and assets are about $[illegible] nearly double that amount. Heavy losses, overpowering, slow collections and the low price of cotton are given as the cause.

In the Massachusetts House Representative Bennett of Everett states that two members of the Legislature had informed him that they had been offered $100 each to vote against the Ballot Law bill, and also each to refer the subject matter of the bill to the next Legislature. He offered an order for an investigating committee. The order was unanimously adopted.

At Indianapolis, the Indiana Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias, elected officers as follows: Grand Chancellor, Dr. R. L. Sivey, Fort Wayne; Grand Vice-Chancellor, Samuel Walsh, Waterloo; Grand Prelate, J. M. Redfield, Huntington; Grand Master of Exchequer, Henry D. Gray, Union City; Grand Master-at-Arms, E. F. Neff, Lebanon; Grand Trustee, George W. Cavell, Indianapolis.

A terrific rain and hail storm visited Oberlin, Ohio, doing great damage to crops, especially fruit trees, and starting landslides strong to portends, carried away a portion of the Lake Shore track, finishing a large part of Oberlin, and doing damage to property.

At New Orleans, while out walking, Charles Hudson, aged 20, was suddenly stricken blind. So awful was the visitation that he could not at first realize his affliction, but when convinced that it was no dream and that his eyesight had left him his cries were piteous.

EASTERN.

Barnondes, who was convicted of fraud in having taken money under pretense to influence striking New York stockmakers to return to work, has been pardoned by Governor Flower. The petition for the pardon was signed by 50,000 persons.

The long-talked-of combination of wall paper manufacturers became an accomplished fact when a certificate was filed with the New York Secretary of State incorporating the National Wall Paper Company, with a capital of $15,000,000, divided into 1[illegible] shares. The company is to manufacture and deal in wall paper and other interior house decorations, or may hold stock in other corporations having anything to do with the line of business, and exchange the stock for the stock of such corporations.

Unknown to all demonstrations have begun a crusade in Brooklyn for the impeachment of the under lads. A defamation of more than 300, having a petition signed by nearly 300 Protestant ministers, Catholic priests, and Jewish rabbis, called upon Mayor Brady and urged that the laws against the sale of liquor Sunday and in saloons be enforced. Mayor Brady, who promised to do all he conscientiously could in the matter, was furnished by the visitors with the names of just a dozen men in violation of the law.

Gov. Pattison, of Pennsylvania, was silent to take the oath with his wife for Governor, and, in the present, at his graduating exercises of the seminary, delivered by his daughter, when he handed of the awful disaster in the oil regions. He sit and consoled all concerned and said word to the executive department. Gov. Pattison acted in consultation with Col. Connolly of his staff. He receipt of the information of the disaster at once issued his proclamation, calling on the people of the State for aid. He received dispatches from Titusville and Oil City, informing him of the great loss of life and destruction of property in the oil region. The loss of life is placed at $1,200,000 in each city. He received a fifth dispatch which said that misery is greater than we can find words to express. Dynamite, before it was passed, Mr. Jones, of Arkansas, then spoke on the Sherman free coinage bill after which the Senate adjourned until Monday.

MASON & BERDAN.

—The Grangers of Barnard hold a basket picnic at the farm of George Anderson on Friday of this week. Hon. J. G. Ramsdell is to deliver an address, and a literary program is provided. All are invited.

—The New York Stars will appear at Lewis Grand Opera House Saturday evening of this week, and will be largely taken. With the combination are S. Homer Eaton, the great Boston impersonator; Miss Elle Cave, soprano; Dewey Heywood, flutist; Miss Annie Miller, violinist; Scott Heywood, cornet; and Miss Inez Schultz, pianist. The company has been received everywhere with large audiences.

—The editor of the Colomer Hoosier knows the value of the sleeves of war and comes at his patrons as follows: "Subscribers would do us a favor by paying up their subscription as soon as possible, we want and got to have the money. Some subscribers are nearly one year and a quarter in the rear. We wish the subscribers would and pay up next week. We cannot run the Hoosier on wind altogether."

—Miss Alice Cochran, who, as a business lady, and a teacher in our public schools, has resided in Charlevoix about ten years, left Tuesday morning for Philadelphia, where she will reside with her brother. Miss Cochran has during these years been almost continuously the organist of the M. E. church, and one evening last week a number of members called upon her in a social way, and before their departure left with her a gold watch and chain, as a token of their regard. Miss Cochran carries with her the good wishes of many friends.

—Joe Carson, railroader, is of the opinion that Charlevoix is not a good place for his class of reorters. He became unreasonably drunk Saturday and the Marshal locked him up over Sunday. Monday morning he appeared before Justice Nettleton in the possession of $4.75. The justice yielded to his entreaties and left a dollar of the amount with him, and a warning to leave town at once. He was loaded up with another jag before noon and again pulled in. In relieving the prisoner of his personal effects the Marshal found a $5 bill very cunningly secreted between the layers of a plug of tobacco. Yesterday morning, after Justice McLeod got through with him all he had left was the plug of tobacco.

Northern Michigan News.

A large number of U. S. troops are at Mackinac Island. The entire 19th regiment is there and will participate in the rifle pratice soon to take place.

David Ward has visited East Jordan and assures the people that if they get a good lively bump on themselves they can have his railroad.

An Ele Rapids barber has been graduated from that position to submarine diving and can now talk all he wants to without disturbing anybody.

Boyne Falls News: Does Charlevoix want to steal the county fair from East Jordan? We see their driving park association is fitting up a half a mile track.

Boyne Citizen: The Karlekin triplets from Advance were brought over on Wednesday and were photographed by Miss Mattie Boswell. They are fine and healthy.

"I never saw fruit looking better," says Judge J. G. Ramsdell of Traverse City. There is every indication that the crop this year will be the heaviest known. Up our way it will be necessary to tighten the trees.

It has been said that in looking for a route from Petoskey to Chebogan the C. & W. M. company look very favorably upon a line running nearly due east from Petoskey to Sturgeon River thence in a northeasterly direction along the east shore of Mullet lake to Chebygan.

A. K. Dougherty of Elk Rapids attended the Minneapolis convention.

Boyne Falls News: We have been assured within the past 24 hours that there is in store for Boyne Falls a streak of exceptional good fortune, that is no less than the establishment of a permanent industry, the nature of which we are not at this writing permitted to say that will employ constantly from 50 to 100 men.

Grand Traverse Herald: Arrangements are being perfected by the business men for an excursion over the C. & W. M. R. R. in the near future. A special train will be furnished, stopping at all points of interest along the road and reaching Petoskey in time for dinner. On the return trip a stop will be made at Charlevoix for supper, and time given to take in the town. This will be a pleasant way to get better acquainted with our sister towns, and will be a success as everything always is that our business men undertake.

Confession is Good for the Soul.

From the Boyne Citizen:

What with the excursion to East Jordan on the Joe and to Ironton on the Crystal Sunday the town was almost deserted.

Hastings from Hayes.

Plenty of wild strawberries.
Winter wheat is in blossom.
Field peas out in bloom.
Early potatoes coming into blow.
Spring rye is cut in head.
Potato bugs as thick as hops.
Hay crop will be immense.
Fruit crop will be immense.
Lots of rain, mud and slush.
School picnic at Bayside Friday.
Bayside has applied for a postoffice
School will close at Fairgrove Friday.
Delinquent taxpayers are settling up.
Burgess postoffice will have a post at the railroad. Why could we not have a platform also?
Lincoln Ford was prostrated with heat at the gravel pit a few days ago.

Nervous Noses.

O. D. Hilderley brought back from Kalkaska last week a six months old bear that ... caught last winter. The cub amuses the small boys and gets away with them on a wrestle.

Willard Spaulding went down to Elk Rapids last week, and brings back word that the railroad will be built on the shore line this fall.

The social last week put about sixteen dollars into the ministers pocket.

Mrs. Vanskinken and children, of Burlington, Vt., arrived last week and will visit with G. V. Nash about a month.

Everything seems to be headed toward Charlevoix the coming 4th.

Chas. Richardson made a short visit home over Sunday, and we learn he has secured the position as stenographer in General Manager Heald's office.

Wm. Cowen left Sunday for Guelph, Ont., called there by the serious illness of his mother.

Our resorters will soon be here. C. S. Ferguson came up Thursday and will stay over the 4th. S. H. Chase's family are expected on Saturday, and the rest are packing their grips.

Mrs. G. V. Nash and family leave Friday for Petoskey where they will resort three or four weeks, and give painters and plasterers an opportunity to work at their house.

Hide Wanted.

Sealed bids will be received by the Clerk of the Village of Boyne City, Mich., up to 8 o'clock p. m., for building Fence Hides for waterworks (hide) at Charlevoix, Michigan.

Bids for hides alone must be for the good and merchantable hides of all ages, and for hides with the heads and legs on, and all specifications to be done by the Village Clerk, to be done according to plans and specifications on file at Clerks office.

Bids for hides with heads and legs on must be accompanied by a bond or all parties, as per specifications. Bids will be considered separately on hide work, alone, hide and carpenter work. The Board reserves the right to accept any and all bids.

—The alumni reception to the graduating class at Hiram V. Hitenburg's last Wednesday evening, was a most enjoyable social occasion, as well as one of unusual interest as an educational event. The beautiful lawn of the "dozal palace" was illuminated by Chinese lanterns, and music and mirth reigned till nearly midnight.

—Geo. H. Winans, of Kalamazoo, was up Saturday, on business connected with the grand regatta to be held here on August 13th. Mr. Winans says it will be one of the greatest events of its kind ever known on those northern waters, and he wants Charlevoix people to take hold, with them in making it a grand success.

—Petoskey special to the Grand Rapids Morning Press: "The news of Cleveland's nomination was received with a mild enthusiasm by the faithful. During the evening State Game Warden Hamptons pay cannon growled at intervals. Considerable speculation as to the personality of the vice presidential candidate was in order. Admirers of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde insisted it was Louis Stevenson, but finally Willard Smith of Charlevoix, who had his head cut off under Cleveland's administration, remembered that it wasn't Jekyll and Hyde but Third Assistant Postmaster Stevenson. And the band played —'Wait and Hope.'"

WE ARE IN THE SWIM.

Charlevoix is in the Full Enjoyment of Railroad Communication.

June 26th was Sunday, but, nevertheless, it was a great day for Charlevoix. There were no noisy demonstrations, but a good portion of the town turned out to witness the christening.

The unfinished depot was filled, the platform crowded, the right of way back to the terrace chock all occupied, the space between the track and the beach was thick with carriages and omnibuses, and three steamboats lay at the railroad dock.

The train from the south was scheduled for 2.40 p.m., but at 2.10 a train appeared, and was supposed to be the regular, but proved to be a special. It consisted of a baggage car, the vestibuled Wagner "Lawrence," and General Manager Heald's private car. Engine No. 160 pulled the outfit. She side tracked, and twenty minutes later engine No. 161 pulled in the regular train of three coaches and a baggage car. There was no demonstration, but had it not been the Sabbath, the crowd would have made itself heard at Boyne City.

A crowd of Charlevoix people boarded the train for the run to Petoskey, which was made in 21 minutes, taking the 10.30 train back in the evening. There was music in the brakeman's voice as he shouted "Charlevoix" to the passengers returning to their homes happy in the thought that the days of compulsory staging and steamboating were things of the past.

To-day Charlevoix is in the full enjoyment of three through trains per day; going north at 7 a.m., 2.27 and 8.20 p.m.; south at 6.47 a.m., 2.57 and 10.57 p.m. The "suburban," running between Petoskey and Charlevoix arrives from the north at 9.00 and 11.40 a.m., and 4.30 and 7.45 p.m. Going north at 9.30 a.m., 12.25, 5.10 and 8.20 p.m. This gives Charlevoix seven trains per day each way on the Charlevoix, Hay View section.

The local train is made up of a combination baggage and smoking car, and an elegant free chair car, and is pulled by D. L. & N. engine No. 40—an equipment on a par with everything else connected with the C. & W. M. service—first-class. Well done.

On Sunday afternoon the C. & W. M. officials, with several guests, arrived from Traverse City by the steamer Columbia. They dined at the Belvedere. The following was the menu:

G. E. DUNCAN, G. W. DUNBAR, Alderman Dunbar.
Geo. Ed. Warner, Chairman Dining Room Committee.
Mrs. Kate Wolf, Cashier.

The party went north in the evening, returning back to Grand Rapids in the morning.

The engines are all new ones on this service—built last winter for the northern passenger traffic.

Mr. J. Kehoe, the agent, arrived Sunday on a special, and has opened his office temporarily in the freight depot. He will have two assistants next week.

The passenger station will be completed and ready for occupancy in about ten days.

The telegraph wires will be up and in operation next week.

Geo. H. Van'ott came down from Petoskey Monday evening. He says that section of the road is as good as any Michigan Central lit ever traveled over.

The company have authorized agents to sell summer excursion tickets between and including Bay View and Bellaire, for one fare for the round trip.

CHAPTER XIV.

SHOWING HOW

Ralph Prescott awaited the effect of his words with eager triumph. He counted on frightening his adversary by threatening to expose the affair—by threatening to employ that knowledge which he had acquired so recently.

He had unknowingly played into his rival's hands. Ralph Prescott, unquestionably, had been a cause in the country courts; I can tell you Hunter's lawyer was a shrewd man, and brilliant, and average judge—if the case had come before him.

He had warned Ralph Prescott against the publication of the affair—he had told him how he could be sued for libel.

"And that would be your time! never! Yes, it would!

"Bigamy! I believe you said?"

"Yes, and as ugly word as in the country courts; I can tell you Hunter's lawyer was a shrewd man, and brilliant,

NOTICE.

A meeting of the Republican County Committee will be held at the office of Hall Brothers, in Boyne City, on Friday, July 15th, at one o'clock, p. m., for the purpose of apportioning Delegates to the state and congressional Conventions, and to transact such other business as may lawfully come before the committee.

Dated June 21, 1892.

WM. A. SMITH, Secy. ROBERT E. CROSBY, Chairman.

There is at least one Hill that does not seem nearly so big on close view as when looked at from a distance.

The canvass of Daniel McCoy for the state treasurership is progressing favorably, and Mr. McCoy thinks that his chances for securing the nomination are excellent.

If we go to New York for nominee, said Henry Watterson in the Louisville Democratic convention, "we shall walk through a slaughter house into an open grave."

Few public men in this country at any time have been the object of so much respectful sympathy as James G. Blaine. He never had an enemy except in the line of politics, and now all are his friends.

The personal admirers of Mr. Blaine will support the Republican ticket this year just as enthusiastically as they have done in every campaign for twenty years past. They are true-blue Republicans, whose Republicanism goes deeper than a mere personal preference.

"We stand," said Major McKinley, "for a protective tariff, because it represents the American home, the American fireside, the American family, the American girl, the American boy and the highest possibilities of American citizenship." These words have the ring of true patriotism.

The name and the magnificent statesmanship of James G. Blaine are securely enshrined in the hearts of the people. Neither political machations nor the vile tongue of aspersion can change history or rob him of his laurels. It would have been a splendid and a fitting close of his brilliant career, could he have been placed at the head of the greatest and best government on earth; but he himself decreed otherwise. He refused the crown, and he chosen, rather, the quiet and peace of private citizenship, to which his long public service has so fully entitled him. His place in history is secure.

The Washington Herald relates this miserable story and even has the gall to vouch for its truthfulness: A good looking, well-to-do and popular young bachelor of Silverton was being teased by the young ladies of a club for not getting married. He said: "I'll marry the girl of your club whom on a secret vote, you elect to be my wife." There was nine members of the club. Each girl went in to a corner and used great caution in preparing a ballot, and disguised the handwriting. The result of the vote was that there were nine votes cast, each girl receiving one. The young man remains a bachelor, the club is broken up and the girls are all mortal enemies, united in the one determination that they will never speak to that nasty man again.

In the Democratic National convention last week a resolution of sympathy for Jas. G. Blaine was introduced and passed unanimously. Before the purport of the resolution was known and immediately upon the mention of the name of Blaine the secretary was interrupted by that tremendous ovation which is one of the typical scenes of national conventions and which rivaled the tribute accorded at the name of Blaine at the national Republican convention but a few days ago. That human sympathy rises above partisanship was aptly illustrated by the reception which Congressman Cable's resolution received and the christmas unanimity by which it was adopted by the Democratic convention. Equally pleasant was the sentiment which followed: The Hon. E. C. Swert, of Maine, from the home of the distinguished Republican leader, arose, and thanked the convention on behalf of his state for the resolution just adopted.

"Kind fortune," said he, "that the Democracy should hesitate to tender its sympathy in the presence of that at that grim tyrant who wipes out all political lines, levels all ranks and lays the shepherd's crook beside the sceptre," and the thundering applause which greeted this speech was evidence that the sentiment found a echo in every heart throughout that great convention hall.

Roads. A National Movement.

To the Editor of the Sentinel:—

A few days ago there came to me from Boston an "open letter," together with a semi-personal one, asking me to write an article for some paper or magazine, bearing upon the subject treated therein—The need of the construction and maintenance of good roads, and its furtherance by the establishment of a Road Department at the World's Columbian Exposition.

This is a subject which is receiving wide attention from some of the best thinkers of our land, and a good deal has been written about it, but not yet has sufficient force been brought to bear upon the directors of the exposition to persuade them to set aside space or apportion such a part of the national appropriation as would suffice for an illustration of the best methods of meeting this national need. Great attention is paid to roads in foreign countries, which far surpasser our own in this respect, and our neglect makes true these words: "One of the saddest signs of the times, in the older states, is the tendency of population toward the cities, and the abandonment of farms. The modern development of slums, the wretched outcome of life in tenement houses, can be laid largely to the bad roads existing in the farming districts, which in certain seasons of the year prevent social intercourse, making country life cheerless, isolated and narrow. Churches and schools are neglected when roads are such as to make them difficult of access."

Therefore, the opportunities presented by the World's Columbian Exposition of teaching the twenty millions of visitors what good roads are and how to make and maintain them should not be lost sight of. A comprehensive display of these things would advance the movement a hundred years and would hasten the coming in of a nobler civilization and a wider Christianity. It is to be hoped that every public spirited citizen will feel the importance of this grand movement and will be inspired to give impulse to it."

The writer of the circular, Albert A. Pope, urges that road construction and maintenance be classified as a department instead of a class of one of the numerous classes of liberal Arts. There should be building constructed for this department in which road making and road machinery could be daily shown by skilled workmen, so as to be an object lesson to every visitor. He thinks that every state should send cross sections of roads, showing the construction best adapted to the particular locality, taking into consideration the most available material of which to build roads.

A comprehensive road exhibit would be the most powerful factor to bring about national and state legislation for the construction and maintenance of good roads.

Of course the people must show enough interest to make the demand for such a department at the exposition imperative, and this must be done by the press of the country giving efficient agitation to the subject as to enlighten the people to a clear and full understanding of it, and by contributions of money. Mr. Pope subscribes $1,000 to this end, as well as the great labor involved in requesting the writer and press of the country to do their share.

It would be well for those reading this article, and in sympathy with the establishment of a "Road Construction and Maintenance Department" at the World's Exposition, to send subscriptions or a brief note expressing sympathy, or both to the editor of this paper to be forwarded to Albert A. Pope, Boston, Mass., and to do it quickly, in order that space may be allotted, and a suitable building erected before Oct. 12, 1892, the date when the main building is to be dedicated.

As this touches the interest of people in the rural districts far more closely than those of cities, I feel particularly glad to have the privilege of addressing the people of Charlevoix and its surrounding country, while I am enjoying the pleasures and privileges of their beautiful section of our beloved land, in which all should feel a national interest.

Norwood, June 27, 1892. JUNIATA STAFFORD.

By some error the new depot now in process of erection by the C. & W. M. railroad at Petoskey was located 150 feet to far east, and the officials ordered it removed to its intended site. The mistake will be a somewhat costly one.

Boyne Falls News: Grandma Morgan is dead. This venerable old colored lady, aged about 90 years, was found dead in her bed at the home of her son, Nicholas Morgan, last Friday morning. She had peddled vegetables the previous day as she occasionally did, in apparently good health, but not appearing as early as was her custom on the morning her rooms were entered and she was found dead in her bed. She was the mother of Nicholas and Zachariah Morgan who are well-known old settlers in Pine Lake region.

WHY DOES THIS BOY RUN?
He is Late for School.
The old clock stopped and he didn't save a watch. He has been late before and will probably be suspended, and may grow up in ignorance the rest of his life. This might have been avoided if his parents had purchased one of Bellinger's clocks. He will give you your choice for $5.00.
He is also selling a first-class watch a perfect time-keeper, in nickle-silver cases for $8.00. Just receiving an elegant line stock of JEWELRY and SILVERWARE.

Ordinance No. 87.
An ordinance of the village of Charlevoix provides for the construction of a system of sewers, for the water craft now owning the most and most of their assessing, passing through, and leaving Pine and Round Lake within the corporate limits of the village of Charlevoix, and to prescribe the duties of the Village Marshal.
The Village of Charlevoix ordains:
Sec. 1. No vessel, boat, steamboat or water craft shall be allowed to pass through, or leave, Pine Lake shall be in the open or over channel of Pine river in such manner as to in any way obstruct or molest or impede or shall be up or anchor before or shall be present the owner from using the same, under the penalty of $10 for each and every offense, to be paid to the Marshal of said Village.
Sec. 2. No vessel, boat, steamboat or water craft shall be allowed to pass through, or leave, Round Lake in such manner as to obstruct or molest or impede the use of said channel, under the penalty of $10 for each and every offense, to be paid to the Marshal of said Village.
Sec. 3. In case of the further nuisance to keep open said channel, the Village Marshal shall have power as well as duty to remove the same, and the expense so incurred shall be paid by the Village Treasurer, upon the order of the Village Marshal.
Sec. 4. It is the duty of the harbor master to keep said channel free from obstructions, and in case of the neglect of said harbor master to do so, the Village Marshal shall have power as well as duty to remove the same, and the expense so incurred shall be paid by the Village Treasurer, upon the order of the Village Marshal.
Sec. 5. It is the duty of the harbor master to keep the channel free from obstructions, and in case of the neglect of said harbor master to do so, the Village Marshal shall have power as well as duty to remove the same, and the expense so incurred shall be paid by the Village Treasurer, upon the order of the Village Marshal.
Sec. 6. It shall be the duty of the Village Marshal to see that the provisions of this ordinance are duly observed, and to enforce the same, and to prosecute all persons who shall violate the same.
Sec. 7. Any violation of the provisions of this ordinance shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars and costs of prosecution, or by default thereof by imprisonment in the village or county jail not exceeding ninety days.
This ordinance shall take effect twenty days from and after its passage.
Passed June 7th day of June, 1892.
JOHN BURNS,
President.
H. E. BARNES,
Clerk.

A FATAL QUARREL.

TRIVIAL CAUSE FOR TAKING LIFE.

Fearful Work of Lightning and Wind in Chicago and Northern Illinois—Details Reported by Pacific Coast Flocks—Railroad Men Killed.

The Lawmakers.

In the Senate on the 8th, Mr. Sherman spoke in opposition to free coinage. The House committee on ways and means, by Chairman Cousins, in the House the bagging bill passed to debate upon the Net a sugar appropriation bill is yet urged, and the majority of those bills are yet in the hands of the committee.

Scores Killed in a Storm.

With a roar equal to the din of twenty railway trains running over a score of iron bridges, a great cyclone swept over the Southern Minnesota counties of Jackson, Martin, Faribault, Freeborn, Mower and Fillmore Wednesday afternoon. The storm began about seven miles west of the village of Jackson, moved eastward over the villages of Sherburne and Welcome, in Martin county, passed lightly over Faribault County, crossed great lakes in Freeborn and spent itself in the two counties farthest east. The loss of life has been very heavy, how much so will not be known for days, perhaps. The list thus far comes from Sherburne, Welcome, Wadena, Delavan, Blue Lake, Dragon Point, are flooded and wholly impassable the mid telegraph wires are in such a tangle that it will be impossible to get them to rights for several days. Besides this the loss in buildings, crops and railway property in the half-dozen counties will reach many thousands. Zanesville and other towns in Southern Minnesota are completely wiped out.

Killed in a Row.

LORETTO'S displayed its terrible, unexplainable power in a whirlwind manner Thursday night at Chicago. A thunder-storm shortly after 8 o'clock at first struck the Illinois Steel Company's tenement in Lincoln Park. At the time the lodgers had retired and were crowded in the open corridor just to the rear of the building in which the lodgers were asleep. There was a blinding flash, and the building was in ruins. Some of the sleepers were hurled off their beds. Three people, two men and a woman were instantly killed. All were terribly shaken, but only four were so badly injured that they required immediate attention.

Pacific Coast Sheep-Herders Adventurous.

GOVERNOR PENNOYER, of Montana, has issued a proclamation forbidding the shipment of sheep over Bogg's Pass, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, Idaho, Utah, Wyoming and Utah. The proclamation was issued by the governor on a statement made by Sheriff Vetterfield, of Walla Walla, Washington, the States named were infested with scabs.

REID IN SECOND PLACE.

NAMED BY ACCLAMATION FOR VICE PRESIDENT.

Delegates Lived Up to Their Instructions—McKinley Pulls a Large Vote—Reid Complimented—The News Received by the President and Mr. Blaine.

Friday's Work.

Minneapolis Dispatch

A sharp tap of the gavel at 11:05 on Friday morning checked the hum of ten thousand voices in the great convention hall. A moment later Chairman McKinley ordered the aisles cleared and some sort of order established.

"The regular order," resumed the Chairman, "is the presentation of candidates for President of the United States." Cheers followed this announcement.

It was decided that the roll of States should be called and when Colorado was reached Senator Wolcott, of the Silver State, arose, instantly the Blaine aisle burst into wild and enthusiastic cheers, and all eyes turned to the presentation of the name of James G. Blaine by Senator Wolcott.

Wolcott made a rattling speech and was applauded from start to finish. Wolcott said he was proud to cast his vote for a man who always sought everything for his country and nothing for himself. Blaine's record was that of a statesman, and with fierce intensity seldom experienced, Chicago swuldered with the intensity 32 degrees in the shade. Some points in Michigan report 92. The temperature for the same day last year was 72 degrees. The signal service announces that there is no likelihood of a return of wet weather.

ANTONIO DE BARROS, the ex-Minister of Mattu Grosso, Brazil, announces terrible fighting in and around the capital, Cuyaba, and the utter defeat of the Government forces sent from Rio Janeiro some time ago by land was to quell the uprising. The conflict is said to have lasted twelve days, when the Government troops fell to the utmost disorder. They are reported to have left 1,500 killed upon the battlefield, and even a larger number wounded.

THE annual government crop report, just issued, states that present acreage of winter wheat is 2,000,000 less than last year, and that the condition is 10 points below the average. Rye is in fair condition, and barley is in good condition. The prospects of spring wheat are up to the average, but success is depended upon warm weather. The acreage of barley is fully half larger than last year, and the prospect of a very much increased yield, which unless the weather becomes and continues more favorable, the yield will be little better than last year.

WEDNESDAY afternoon a terrible tornado passed through the Pecatonica Valley, causing frightful destruction to property and loss of life. The places that suffered most were St. Rion, a village near the Canadian Pacific Railway twenty miles from Montreal; Lachute, St. John's and the Peaka Valley. At St. Rion the school-house was blown down. The school children was fatally injured, and from six to ten others were killed and thirty-three injured, a number of them fatally.

THEIR LEADER DEAD.

PRESIDENT L. L. POLK EXPIRES AT WASHINGTON.

Sketch of His Connection with the Farmers' Alliance Movement—A Man of Great Energy, Magnetism, a Good Parliamentarian and Earnest Speaker.

The End Was Comes.

Leviathan Polk, President of the National Farmers' Alliance, is dead. He died suddenly at his residence, Washington, where he had been removed for treatment. Blood poisoning caused by blood-letting was the cause of his demise. The patient's illness lasting seriously ill at his private residence for ten days. The result of a consultation of physicians was his removal to the Ruffin Hospital. There an operation was deemed the only means of saving his life. He became unconscious, from which condition he never rallied, and it was decided not to perform the operation.

When the end came Mrs. Polk, who had just arrived in the city, was at his bedside. Telegrams from all parts of the country received the inquiring after Mr. Polk's condition, and he had been daily visited by prominent men of the Farmers' Alliance.

Leviathan L. Polk was a native of Anson County, North Carolina, and was born on April 24, 1837. He was a descendant of the Mecklenburg family which signed the Declaration of Independence. Colonel Thomas and William Polk, twice aide-de-camp of Washington, and James K. Polk, President of the United States, was his uncle. He was left fatherless while he was a youth. He was married when 18 to Miss Sarah Polk, and soon after nominated and elected to the lower house of the State Legislature, serving at the regular and two extra sessions, and being in his 21st year when the Confederate army, as a private, enlisting in the ranks of a company of cavalry, in which he served in the Twenty-fifth and Forty-third North Carolina Regiments, and finally rill the autumn of 1864, at which time he was elected to the State Senate, the Legislature, and was elected with great enthusiasm.

In 1865, against his expressed desire, he was nominated and elected to the Constitutional Convention. In 1867 he was elected Commissioner of Agriculture for his State. He had meanwhile contained his farm and built it with great reluctance to attend to his official duties. In every instance the office sought him with sought the man, yet the man was ever the man for the place, and he was appointed superintendent of a department of agriculture. In 1880 he became President of the Farmers' Alliance, and at the same time began the organization of the Farmers' Alliance, which now has 200 chartered and in active working order, the aim and object of the establishment of an agricultural and mechanical college and his plan was finally adopted by the State.

He brought the Alliance before the people and at its organization in North Carolina it became the strongest party and through his influence the farmers' Alliance organized the Alliance, and became a part of the new organization. He was the first President of the Alliance in 1887, and in 1889 was chosen delegate to the Alliance convention held in the order held in St. Louis, in December, 1889, and he was again put in the deliberations. When the Interstate Farmers' Association was formed, representatives from all cotton States, was organized in Atlanta, Ga., he was elected President by acclamation. He was a member of our honorable body without control. At the convention in St. Louis he was chosen President of the National Farmers' Alliance, and he has continuously up to the date of his death. Under his administration the order had a marvelous growth, especially in the South and West, and in the South was shown by the election of members of Congress from Alabama, Georgia, Kansas and Minnesota, and has made great progress in Nebraska, Dakota, Illinois and Indiana, where in a number of districts it holds the balance of power.

Colonel Polk possessed great personal magnetism, and was an excellent organizer, a good parliamentarian, and a pleasing public speaker. He was in the prime of manhood, of a fine form, of good address and poise, for he was a graduate of the Hillsboro Military Academy, and was a fine specimen of a man and gentleman. He was earnest, energetic, and a hard worker, and had all his energies for the good of the following of the Alliance, and it was said he had lived his would undoubtedly have been the Alliance candidate for President of the United States at the election in 1892.

The funeral was held at Raleigh, N. C., Sunday afternoon. The remains lying the body did not arrive until 3 o'clock, and the funeral did not start at the depot by hundreds of people. The procession was formed and moved to the cemetery, passed to the First Baptist church, of which Colonel Polk was a communicant. By 4 o'clock the church was packed, the aisles crowded, and many were left behind. Among those present were Governor Fowle and State officers, members of the Supreme Court, officers of the State Farmers' Alliance, and Grand Sire Gardner, of the Knights of Honor. Lodge odd Fellows. The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Carter, T. E. Skinner and J. J. Hall. The text was "Let me die the death of the righteous and let my last be like his." Colonel Polk's widow and children were present at the grave and viewed the body. The casket was taken into and out of the church by the pallbearers, who came from Washington, and who, with ladies, attended the funeral, were given seat in front of the pulpit. The pall-bearers were: Senator Vance, representative of the State, Colonel Polk's Alliance, Colonel Polk's Alliance, Colonel Polk's Alliance

Petoskey Democrat: Work on the Bennett to Bear Lake is nearing completion, and from the first of July there will be three round trips from Petoskey every day. Trains leave Petoskey 8 a. m., 1:40 p. m and 4:40 p. m., returning they arrive at Petoskey 9:10 a. m., 5:45 p. m. and 5:50 p. m. It takes 25 minutes to make the run between Petoskey and the lake.

Petoskey Democrat: General manager Heald, of the C. & W. M., was in town Sunday and Monday with his private car. He was accompanied by Wm. Alden Smith, the company's attorney. The special train made the trip from Alpena Charlevoix to Petoskey in seventeen minutes, and returned Monday backing up, in twenty minutes. Mr. Heald says that the road between here and Charlevoix is the best piece of track he has ever had control of.

Petoskey Democrat: A terrible accident occurred to a trainman on the local freight Monday afternoon. He was taking a heavy glass carboy of acid, such as is used for soda fountains, out of a car at Kalkaska. In some way, the cork had got out of the jar, which was of course boxed in. In lifting the carboy upon his shoulders the acid poured out upon his head and neck, burning off the scalp and the flesh upon his neck and shoulders and inflicting the most horrible injuries. His coat and vest were actually burned off in the time before the bystanders could strip them off the unfortunate man.

Peter Kane and wife, and Mrs. I. S. Webster were visiting at Alanson the past week.

The railroad company is building a baggage house at Bayside for the use of the section men.

The sign on the depot says Bayside, the people all say Bayside, and it will always be called Bayside oftener than anything else. But the folders designate our station as Bay Shore.

Parties were up from Lansing last week and bought lots in Bayside Park Resort.

The saw mill at Bayside is running and the planer will soon be in place ready for business.

Quite a number of citizens were out Sunday to see the first train pass.

MASON & BERDAN.

The New York Stars.

This fine company, on Saturday evening, at Lewis Grand Opera House scored a success. Briefly stated, their application of "stars" is merited. Mr. S. Homer Eaton, is an impersonator of the Sol Smith Russel school, and an artist and gentleman of culture. Miss Effie Cave is a most charming soprano, with a voice of remarkable purity and range. Mr. Dewey Heywood, the flute virtuoso, has been heard here before, but the image of his instrument was never so marked as on this occasion. We doubt if Mr. Heywood has a superior as a performer upon this fine instrument. Miss Miller, since her last appearance here, has graduated from the Chicago Conservatory of Music. The "King of the Instruments" is in the hands of a queen—her exquisite tone, brilliant execution and charming stage presence, cannot fail to touch the soul of a musical enthusiast. But our soul never thrilled under the inspiration of music more than when Mr. Scott Heywood, with his gold cornet, triple tonged that masterful composition, the "Silver Stream Polka." We have heard it many times, but never with finer tone or greater precision of execution. Scott Heywood is young yet; he will bear watching. Every number on the program was choice, and every combination was harmony itself. The SENTINEL is gratified in being able to commend so truly meritorious a company as the New York Stars.

A HOODOO.

A Northern Pacific Locomotive Declared to be So Afflicted.

Northern Pacific locomotive No. 571 is looked upon by all conductors, engineers and brakemen on the road as the rankest kind of a hoodoo. She was brought on to this division about three years ago, and has spent the greater part of that time in the repair shops. Her first work was at Prescott, the crew escaping with slight injuries. The next was a head-end wreck one mile from Buckley. The third was a frightful collision at Eagle Gorge, at which time engineer Young and fireman Cooper were killed. Then, in trying to butt a train from the tracks at Palmer, she was hurled into the Green river, and so, throughout her life, she seems to be possessed of the spirit of the evil one. Strange stories are told of a goblin perching itself on the pilot of 571, of the hose spurting blood when an attempt is made to draw water from the tank to wet down the coal, and of various mysterious pranks and capriccs that the old engine is given to. "You may call it superstition," said an old Northern Pacific employe, "but there isn't a railroad man on this division but what fears 571, and they will all rest easier w a she finds her way to the junk shop."

Lost Mines.

Everywhere throughout the Western lost mines. Every state and territory that has gold or silver has several of them. Around each there clings a halo of romance. The lost Peg'eg mine on the Colorado desert is the latest to have an issing and be noticed by the press. There is a Lost Cabin mine near Crater lake in Oregon. Montana, Wyoming, Idaho and New Mexico have lost mines of some sort or other, all rich, and locked in the depths of the Navajo reservation in Arizona is another lost mine. Men with guns and picks and barrows steal in from time to time in quest of the latter. Sometimes in referring to the various lost mines they are singularly mixed, until the problem is made harder to solve as to just where they are. "There are at least a half dozen or a dozen Lost Cabin mines in the West," said an old mining man recently. "Anything that is strange and hard to get at will have many hunts ing for it. The lost mines are hard to find, but there are all the time expeditions in quest of them."

A Big South African Diamond.

A diamond buyer of Kimberley, South Africa, has recently purchased from a river digger a magnificent diamond weighing 295 carats, said to be the second largest stone ever found in that field. The stone is a perfect octahedron and of fine color. The buyer paid $15,000 for the gem and was subsequently offered $40,000 for it, but refused to sell.

AN INDIAN FAKIR'S TRICKS.

After Inhaling Poisonous Fumes, He Runs a Knife Through His Tongue.

An account of the performance of the Indian fakir, Solomon ben Alissa, is given by a Vienna correspondent. The exhibition has very properly been forbidden in public places in Vienna, but a series of private entertainments has been arranged. An aristocratic audience was present at the first of these. The fakir commenced his performance by inhaling the fumes of burnt powder prepared from extracts of snake and scorpion poisons, and by certain quick movements of the head he produced a foaming at the mouth. After these preliminaries needles and other sharp instruments were thrust through various parts of his body, including a stiletto a foot long and half an inch broad, which was thrust through his tongue.

Another feat which is said to have caused great sensation consisted in pulling forward the eyeball, and presenting it outside the orbit to the view of the audience between two fingers.

He was "invulnerable" also to the heat produced by a flaming torch held for a minute and a half against the under surface of his forearm. Chewing glass and playing with poisonous snakes were among his other tricks. The fakeer recalls the experiments of the celebrated "Fire King," who many years ago created a sensation in London by advertising his power to drink prussic acid without injury to himself. The history of his exposure, sudden downfall and subsequent malignant challenge to Mr. Wakely to fight a duel form one of the most interesting chapters in the volumes of the Lancet. The longest deprecates medical men lending their countenance in any degree to such dismal spectacles.

—There were so many people here Monday from every where that general individual mention of prominent people would be impossible. Among them, however, were Henry, E. S. and Tom Noble, of Elk Rapids, and Milton Newkirk, of Bellaire.

A GREAT DAY.

We celebrated!
We celebrated big!
We covered ourselves all over with glory.

To say that the Charlevoix celebration was a success is putting it too mildly; it was a stupendous, colossal, gigantic blow-out.

There was not a weak, or discreditable feature of the demonstration. From the first boom of Capt. Willsur's cannon on the north bluff, till the last rocket was fired, a "grand occasion was grandly met," just as the bills read.

The sun shone, yet the day was cool and pleasant.

But the folks!

Great Scott!

They were all here!

Ten Thousand of them

Not one less!

They began coming by hourly trains from Petoskey early in the day, and 1,000 came from Petoskey alone. The excursion train from the south brought 800. The Macabees excursion from Boyne City brought nearly 500. The steamer Columbia, Crescent and Cummings came from Grand Traverse Bay loaded. Marion, Norwood, Banks, Hayes, East Jordan and South Arm were all there.

They filled the town and hung on to the edges. A circus and a museum, which ordinarily, would have been noticeable, were merely two incidents in the flood of attractions. Every available spot and vacant building was occupied by refreshment stands, and everybody got enough to eat.

The morning parade was too big for the territory covered. The line of march was Main, State, Antrim and Bridge street to the north side grounds, and as the head of the line came into Bridge street from Antrim, the rear had not yet left Bridge street.

THE GROVE EXERCISES.

The oration of Wm. Alden Smith was billed as a leading attraction, and it went beyond the mark set. It was eloquent, scholarly and inspiring. On every hand were heard words of commendation and satisfaction. The introductory remarks of President Moore were most happily worded, and were received with an enthusiasm only second to that which marked the close of Mr. Smith's masterly address. Rev. Mr. Macpherson's prayer was an eloquent and soulful appeal to the God of Nations.

THE CONTESTS.

The Elk Rapids team went home with $100 in their satchel as the winners of the firemen's contest. The boys from Ben Davis' town made the slowest run in the lot, but made it up in celerity in coupling. Bellaire took second money. Charlevoix made the best running time, but lost on coupling by a foul in the apparatus.

The East Jordan Cornet Band got the $100 prize in the band tournaway, and won it honestly—scoring a point ahead of Eastport in harmony and expression. Eastport took second money and Norwood third. Only these bands competed. The judges, however, speak in highest terms of all three bands. They can't be excelled in Michigan in towns of the size from which they hail. The contest was one of the pleasantest features of the day, and was nothing short of a park concert.

THE RACES.

Everybody, even our own people, were surprised at the fine condition of the Driving Park race course. Under most adverse conditions, amounts, in about a months time, the association have made a half-mile track which is now, unquestionably the best in Northern Michigan, partially fenced it, and erected a large grand stand (yet uncovered).

In the trotting race W. H. Dunner, with his black mare, won all three heats, making the first mile first in 2:55. B. W. Miller, with "Dan O'Hern," won second money pressing Dunner closely for first. L. C. Madison of East Jordan, with his standard-bred colt, took third. There were eight entries.

In the running races, Will Barry's horse, rode by Charlie Wisner, took first money, Hugh Donnelly's, rode by Jas. Pappin Jr., 2d, and Will Lewis carried away third.

In the pony race Will Lewis got 1st, and Dick Shapton's animal, rode by young Joe Hyland, captured 2d.

In the bicycle contest, Gillis, of Traverse City, took first prize, in 1:34; W. E. Hampton, Charlevoix, 2d, in 1:35. Canfield of Traverse City, 3d, in 1:36. Harrison Bedford and Gard Brown made the half-mile in 1:37 and 1:38 respectively.

In the boat races, Jos. Beauvais, Jr., took first prize in single scull, and Joe and Sam Hamilton took first in the double scull.

BASE BALL.

At Dixon Park, our boys were slammed around the bases by the Petoskey rusters, and crushed under a defeat of 15 to 8.

THE 4TH REGIMENT BAND.

The Executive Committee played a trump card when they engaged the 4th Regiment Band of Petoskey, to furnish the business music of the day. They number 15 men, are finely uniformed and can play. In fact they play so well that they were barred from the contest. They constituted one of the chief attractions of the day. In street movement, under the baton of Drum Major A. F. Ruch, they were the honeys of all eyes. They handle a reportoire of brilliant music with a skill that rivals many metropolitan or professional organizations. It is not too much to say that they were a big attraction, and earned their money. Mr. Will Blakeley is the efficient 1st Eb cornet leader.

CASUALTIES.

The only accidents that occurred were the following: A man somewhat under the influence of stimulant, tripped over a circus tent rope and fell upon a broken glass bottle, cutting an artery in his wrist. Dr. Kanagy was found just in time to save his life. Another slightly inebriated party fell off the dock and was fished out by Capt. Port Partridge with a pike-pole. A lady was thrown from a buggy and fractured her arm.

NOTES.

Every omnibus and carriage in Charlevoix was kept loaded from morning until night, and seven fine horses with drivers from F. J. Smith's barn in Petoskey, were secured for the service of committees and guests.

A number of supervisors and officers of neighboring towns occupied seatson the grand stand.

Gregory & Belford's circus did a large business all day and in the evening on the vacant ground near the corner of Bridge and Clinton streets, and a museum occupied a space between the SENTINEL building and Willson's store.

There were six bands, including the circus band, doing business during the day.

The Marion turnout did the township credit.

General Passenger Agent DeHaven was the only railroad official, beside Attorney Smith, who were present. Mr. DeHaven was accompanied by his wife, as was also Mr. Smith. Mr. DeHaven was enthusiastic in his praise of the celebration, and, as his advertising matter indicates, is an ardent admirer of Charlevoix, for which he prophesies a bright future.

Charlevoix made no mistake when Fred J. Meech was appointed chairman of the executive committee. In every respect Mr. Meech did himself credit in that capacity. He not only successfully piloted the committee through the breakers of the preliminary work, but skillfully directed affairs throughout the celebration. Very much of the great success of the undertaking is due to his efforts. He and the committee were ably seconded by Secretary F. W. Mayne. Both are entitled to the thanks of the public.

Flour is coming down at the Rifenburg Milling Co.'s mill. White Rose, $4.50. Iron Duke, $5.50.

CHICAGO CONVENTION.

THOUSANDS OF DEMOCRATS PRESENT.

WILSON IN THE CHAIR.

HARMONY AND ENTHUSIASM PREVAIL.

The Convention Wigwam Packed to Its Fullest Capacity—Keynoted by Eloquence—Cleveland Sent Unto Death by Unfavorable Omen—Full the Officers.

First Day's Proceedings.

Chicago special:

The National Democratic Convention was called to order at 12:15 Tuesday afternoon in the wigwam on the Lake Front by Chairman Hines of the National committee.

Just after noon, before noise of the delegates had arrived in the hall, a tremendous thunderclap shook over the city. The interior of the wigwam grew as dark as night, the canvas being let down over the upper windows. Thousands of people were already in the spectators' seats, and as the lightning flashed in up the green of the hall and the dazzling shock is a heavy wind shook the wigwam and it looked for lights. Then came a mighty fall of rain. The band began to play a cheerful air. The sun shone again upon city and the assemblage speedily slipped into its seats.

After bowing to the applause with which he was greeted, Mr Hines, in a good voice, addressed the assemblage.

Mr Hines had a respectful and an intensely hearing, and when he came to the "legion of the brave and patriot brigade" the convention cheered again and again.

In the conclusion of the speech the Chairman asked what the pleasure of the convention was. Mr Wilson, of California, got the floor, and offered a resolution providing that the list of called to name the different committees, and that the platform be referred without reading to the committee on resolutions. Mr. Hoke, of Georgia, in the body of the hall, addressed the convention, during by stating that he held in his hand a telegram giving the glad news that the Republicans of Portland, Oregon, had been defeated by a thousand majority. Great cheering greeted this announcement. Mr. Hall, of Missouri, moved that the rules be admitted to the vacant seats in the hall, but this resolution was also referred to the Resolutions Committee.

Mr. Cable, of Illinois, offered a resolution of sympathy with James G. Blaine, that the convention tender its sympathy to the Republican candidate in his enforced leave in Maine, and expressed affections that have befallen him. The reading of the name of Mr. Blaine was the signal for an outburst of greater enthusiasm than the convention had known before. The resolution was adopted without dissent. Mr. Swett of Maine got the floor and briefly thanked the convention on behalf of the Maine delegation.

An invitation from the World's Fair for the delegates to visit the grounds was read.

Gen. Bragg, of Wisconsin, moved that the convention adjourn until 10 o'clock Wednesday. Before the motion could be put the delegates were in the aisles, and Lord knows when they would come back to order, if they ever came back at all, if the Chairman had not rapped the convention to order, and called upon the Rev. Alfred H. Henry to offer prayer. He asked that the convention be guided to choose a report sensible of modern progressive democracy, and prayed that the party might proceed to victory, and for the spoils of office.

Just as the prayer concluded the long phalanx entered the hall, the big blue banner with the picture of Horace Boies in front of them. There were cheers from all parts of the hall and the Iowa men responded with a song, "Marching through Georgia." When the music ceased the temporary chairman called upon the panel down and announced that the first business of the convention was the report of the committee on credentials. He asked if that committee was ready to report. The committee was not then ready and during the interval Senator Palmer was called upon and made a short speech.

When the chairman announced that the committee on credentials was ready to report, Mr. Lamb, of Indiana, took the platform and in a clear, loud voice read the report. There was no objection to it and it was adopted.

The report of the committee on permanent organization was presented by Mr. Vance, of Arkansas, and read by one of the clerks of the convention. It named W. L. Wilson, of West Virginia, for permanent chairman and continued the other officers of the temporary organization. The announcement of Mr. Wilson's name was met with loud applause. The report was adopted without dissent. Mr. Dickinson, of Michigan, moved that a committee of five be appointed to notify Mr. Wilson of his appointment as Permanent Chairman. The Chairman appointed as the committee Hon. M. Dickinson, of Michigan, J. E. Robinson, of New York, R. Pelicoe, New York, Joseph S. Richardson, Indiana, and M. L. Clark, Missouri. Temporary Chairman Owens shook hands with Mr Wilson when he was escorted to the platform, and then said: "Good news of the convention it gives me great pleasure to introduce to you one of the bravest Democrats in America, William L. Wilson, of West Virginia." As Mr. Wilson came forward he was greeted with a storm of applause. He was the blue delegate's lodge on the lapel of a cutaway coat, under which was pinafored a white vest. Mr. Wilson looked calmly over the vast throng, during a minute's silence, and then addressed the convention.

When Mr. Wilson concluded his speech the delegates, rising to their feet, waved their hats as they cheered again and again.

The rules of the last National Democratic Convention were adopted for the government of the convention. No minority report was presented, and no motion for the previous question in English was adopted without objection.

before him sat the representatives of a great party, the men who made the battles, rejoiced in victories and mourn his defeats. There they stood in front of him, certainly a sea of faces which for the moment was bewildering to its vastness. Presently he began to be at ease, and used as he is to facing great meetings, Mr. Briee felt no fear of his ability to be heard by all the assembled multitude.

First Day's Proceedings.

Chicago special:

The National Democratic Convention was called to order at 12:15 Tuesday afternoon in the wigwam on the Lake Front by Chairman Hines of the National committee.

Just after noon, before noise of the delegates had arrived in the hall, a tremendous thunderclap shook over the city. The interior of the wigwam grew as dark as night, the canvas being let down over the upper windows. Thousands of people were already in the spectators' seats, and as the lightning flashes lit up the green of the hall and the dazzling shock is a heavy wind shook the wigwam and it looked for lights. Then came a mighty fall of rain. The band began to play a cheerful air. The sun shone again upon city and the assemblage speedily slipped into its seats.

After bowing to the applause with which he was greeted, Mr Hines, in a good voice, addressed the assemblage.

Mr Hines had a respectful and an intensely hearing, and when he came to the "legion of the brave and patriot brigade" the convention cheered again and again.

In the conclusion of the speech the Chairman asked what the pleasure of the convention was. Mr Wilson, of California, got the floor, and offered a resolution providing that the list of called to name the different committees, and that the platform be referred without reading to the committee on resolutions. Mr. Hoke, of Georgia, in the body of the hall, addressed the convention, during by stating that he held in his hand a telegram giving the glad news that the Republicans of Portland, Oregon, had been defeated by a thousand majority. Great cheering greeted this announcement. Mr. Hall, of Missouri, moved that the rules be admitted to the vacant seats in the hall, but this resolution was also referred to the Resolutions Committee.

Mr. Cable, of Illinois, offered a resolution of sympathy with James G. Blaine, that the convention tender its sympathy to the Republican candidate in his enforced leave in Maine, and expressed affections that have befallen him. The reading of the name of Mr. Blaine was the signal for an outburst of greater enthusiasm than the convention had known before. The resolution was adopted without dissent. Mr. Swett of Maine got the floor and briefly thanked the convention on behalf of the Maine delegation.

An invitation from the World's Fair for the delegates to visit the grounds was read.

Gen. Bragg, of Wisconsin, moved that the convention adjourn until 10 o'clock Wednesday. Before the motion could be put the delegates were in the aisles, and Lord knows when they would come back to order, if ever they came back at all, if the Chairman had not rapped the convention to order, and called upon the Rev. Alfred H. Henry to offer prayer. He asked that the convention be guided to choose a report sensible of modern progressive democracy, and prayed that the party might proceed to victory, and for the spoils of office.

Just as the prayer concluded the long phalanx entered the hall, the big blue banner with the picture of Horace Boies in front of them. There were cheers from all parts of the hall and the Iowa men responded with a song, "Marching through Georgia." When the music ceased the temporary chairman called upon the panel down and announced that the first business of the convention was the report of the committee on credentials. He asked if that committee was ready to report. The committee was not then ready and during the interval Senator Palmer was called upon and made a short speech.

When the chairman announced that the committee on credentials was ready to report, Mr. Lamb, of Indiana, took the platform and in a clear, loud voice read the report. There was no objection to it and it was adopted.

The report of the committee on permanent organization was presented by Mr. Vance, of Arkansas, and read by one of the clerks of the convention. It named W. L. Wilson, of West Virginia, for permanent chairman and continued the other officers of the temporary organization. The announcement of Mr. Wilson's name was met with loud applause. The report was adopted without dissent. Mr. Dickinson, of Michigan, moved that a committee of five be Pelicoe, New York, Joseph S. Richardson, Indiana, and M. L. Clark, Missouri. Temporary Chairman Owens shook hands with Mr Wilson when he was escorted to the platform, and then said: "Good news of the convention it gives me great pleasure to introduce to you one of the bravest Democrats in America, William L. Wilson, of West Virginia." As Mr. Wilson came forward he was greeted with a storm of applause. He wore the blue delegate's lodge on the lapel of a cutaway coat, under which was pinafored a white vest. Mr. Wilson looked calmly over the vast throng, during a minute's silence, and then addressed the convention.

When Mr. Wilson concluded his speech the delegates, rising to their feet, waved their hats as they cheered again and again.

The rules of the last National Democratic Convention were adopted for the government of the convention. No minority report was presented, and no motion for the previous question in English was adopted without objection.

When the first taps of the gavel were heard in the Wigwam Wednesday evening the great building was packed from top to bottom with a mass of humanity, the thousands of feet and thousands of hands jostling each other in the hasted manner. Under this spur of the moment the hall was intense. No breeze moved the muggy and stagnant atmosphere.

At the announcement that the Committee on Resolutions was ready to report a wild shout went from Daniel Jones sulfed up to the front of the platform and stampeded a Niagara of enthusiasm. Hats, canes, handkerchiefs, coats, umbrellas, fans, shawls, shoes, stockings, dresses were in from the floor of the house. Then the delegates in the galleries, the galleries, the galleries,

THE GIANT APE'S

Progress in the Jungle Through the Tree-Tops.

It is a most interesting sight to watch an orang-outang make his way through the jungle. It walks slowly among the larger branches in a semi-upright fashion, this being apparently aided by the length of its arms and the strength of its legs. It invariably selects those branches which interlace with those of a neighboring tree, or overhanging which it stretches out its long arms and grasping the opposite power fixed to shake it to see if its test their strength, and deliberately swings itself across the next branch, which it walks on before. It does not jump or leap as monkeys usually do, and appears to hurry itself unless some danger presents. Yet, in spite of its apparently slow movements, it gets along far quicker than a man traveling through the forest beneath.

Various stories are told about its dimensions and great height, but never seen over four feet from the ground to heel, and from seven to eight feet, measuring from finger to finger across its outstretched arms, which of the time varying in number from four eight to twelve inches, though the accounts of larger animals have been met with may be correct. The tradition of the Dyaks is that there is no animal in the jungle that can equal the orang-utang except python and the crocodile. At Pulau where there is no fruit obtainable in the jungle, it sometimes down to prowl to search for palm shoots and their leaves. Then it is the crocodile how the silly crocodile lies in the water, and waits for the ape to come down to drink or cross the water and the silly ape looks below, but the orang-utang, according to their accounts, soon gets the best of the struggle.

AN OBLIGING WAITER.

A Favorite Ghost Failed to Appreciate the Last Sacrifice.

The people at a New York family hotel have been annoyed recently by a disappearance of a litigation between the owners of the building and the manager. The hotel is run about a social, but the litigation precludes the purchase of any additional furniture and fixtures. When the plates, and dogs, and saucers are chipped or broken there is no provision for their replacement while the lawsuits are pending. One of the guests, an ardent lover of Mocha, strenuously objected to drinking his coffee from a broken cup. The waiter who attended his table changed to one of the chipping ones, and he brought him his private coffee a new coffee cup edged with a broad band of gold and with the words "Come the Grace" intertwined, with flowers. He explained that the cup had been presented to him years ago, and had never used it. The favored guest, not desiring to hurt the waiter's feelings, made use of the gaudy cup for few days thereafter, however, the waiter dropped it and broke it. The next morning coffee was served to the favored guest in a plain white mug bearing in blue letters on the front "A Clean Shaver." "What is this?" asked the guest, explosively. "That's my shaving mug," responded the waiter coolly, "I haven't another whole cup."

SOMETHING NEW IN GLASS.

Slightly Wire is Used in Making For a Time Are Very Strong.

Under the name of wire-glass a new invention has been brought on the market by a Dresden firm which marks an important development in the glass manufacture industry. The process of manufacture consists of furnishing glass in a thick plastic condition with a flexible metallic layer, iron wire netting, for instance, which is completely enclosed in the chemical substance and effectively protected against exterior influences as dust, &c. The new glass which has been patented in the leading countries, possesses much greater resisting power than the ordinary metal, and it is claimed, indifferent to the most abrupt changes of temperature, does not fall even when cracked open fire. A further proof of its toughness and durability is stated to be the fact that when, in a highly-heated state, be sprinkled with cold water without being materially damaged. The powerful resisting qualities of the material lend it for the usual wire protectors to be replaced with. As wire-glass can not be cut by the diamond, except with the application of great force, and cannot be broken without creating considerable noise, the substance is claimed to be, in a measure, burglar proof.

Killing the Waves.

As bugaboo frequents with the object of lessening the force of waves, and to supersede the old fashion of throwing oil, has been recently exhibited at the Paris headquarters of the Geographical society for the saving of life in shipwrecks. It is proposed to cover the surface of the sea around an endangered vessel with a thin cotton or linen net, rendered unmerchantable and rot floating by being dipped in a chemical chemical preparation. The idea is based on the fact that, when crossing the track of the gulf stream, the line was noticed that the vast surrounding fields of seaweed within the confines of the stream, though upheaved by storms, remain quiet and smooth. The net sets in the same manner as the seaweed, long experiments have already been carried out at Havre.

Spirited the Tiger.

It is said that Canada is the only country in the world in which the tiger family force is armed with the old fashioned Pacific Military men of the Dominion are urging the adoption of a more modern arm.

Negro Philosophy.

Gen. Sherman was fond of telling this bit of negro philosophy: "When I was in the army in Georgia a slave owner one Christmas missed a fat turkey. He suspected a fine-looking colored man, and had him brought before him. 'You have stolen my turkey and eaten it,' said the irate master. 'Do not prejudge to say I didn't steal it,' he says I did, massa.' 'I ought to do something to you.' 'What have you to say why I should not punish you?' 'Well, massa, you hadn't ter prophesy dat.' 'Do see, Jim, I'm a little long turkey and a good deal more bigger.'"

A MONTANA CAVE.

It Has Been an Unexpected Death-Trap for Wild Animals for Ages.

The cave discovered by George W. Van Hanse continues to be the center of attraction to all interested in the wonderful and phenomenal freaks of nature, says the White Sulphur Springs Husbandman. The cave is located in the tiny village twenty-five miles northeast of town, in the vicinity of the Lon Louie and John Moore ranches.

The mouth of the cave is from two to three feet wide and six feet long, located on the southeast side near the top of a pocket in the mountain. The cave is almost the shape of a flask, thirty-four feet deep and the bottom sixty-two feet long and thirty feet wide. We speak of the bottom of the cave, but we mean the top of the debris and vast amount of bones of animals which fills the space of what may be called the bottom.

"Be it known that the cave, instead of being adorned with crystals and stalactite and stalagmite, in a regular charnel house, and evidently has been a death trap for ages to the unsuspecting beasts of plain and forest. The opening of the cave is peculiarly constructed for the purpose of relentlessly swallowing any living thing that ventured near its brink. The mouth of this destroyer of the living is composed of limestone rock, somewhat on an incline, the depression being at its widest part.

Along the upper side is an old animal trail. It is easy to see how the buffalo or elk passing this way when the trail was slippery with ice or snow would easily lose their foothold and be precipitated into the cave. In a plausible theory to believe that at times during the winter the mouth of the cave is entirely covered with snow so that the unsuspecting animal, passing over the familiar trail would at this point, if diverging a few inches to the south, slide through the snow and be swallowed alive.

Many animals, doubtless were killed by being suspended by the head or one part of the body, as the buffalo, or by the antlers as the elk, while many were evidently literally mangled and killed by the fall. But there are also evidences that some landed at the bottom of the pit with sufficient powers remaining to drag their bodies to remote corners of the cave and there perish from wounds and starvation. Some of the largest skulls and skeletons of buffalo were thus found.

A HATTER'S TRICK.

How He Seized the Opportunity He Had Long Been Waiting For.

Books of a certain order legislate by precept and instance the need of seizing opportunity when it offers. And it is perfectly true that success is life often hinge upon this quality of prompt power.

An amusing example of facile wit helping a tradesman to achieve a fine stroke of business at the one moment when it was possible occurs in authentic annals of commerce. The clever trader was named John Nicholas Genin. He was appointed in early years to a hatter of New York. But when out of his time he was not long content to be a journeyman. He started in business on his own account in a humble but plodding 'ashes. He was patient and he watched for the coming of occasion. There gradually accumulated in his stock a quantity of low, black, soft-crowned hats. Sales of this "ding" were not as brisk as he had anticipated. Was the venture therefore to result in a serious loss? Not at all.

In 1851, Kossuth, the great Hungarian patriot and orator, visited the United States to tell the story of an oppressed people and arouse American sympathy. Genin had a brilliant idea. When the vessel with the distinguished stranger and his fellow refugees arrived on Sandy Hook the hatter was on board a boat. He met the party, made a low bow and with a politeness that was no doubt real all the same for the keen eye he had in his own advantage, he presented each patriot with a hat of new and striking pattern. The whole stock had undergone transformation. Each left brim was sewed up securely to the crown and a black feather waved jauntily at the side. The gift was accepted, and decorated with the astute Genin's hats the procession in dot time came up Broadway. Every one noticed the head-dress. Genin's plot was a secret in his own breast.

The novelty in headgear was a great success. Nobody seemed to order hats in New York of any other shape or sort than the Hungarian refugee type. A roaring trade was done by Genin and his fellow hatters. Indeed, so well was the entire hat trade of the city served by this private reuse of one of its members that a subscription in acknowledgment was set on foot and Genin received a handsome presentation. — Saturday Evening Post.

A GIGANTIC "FLUME".

It Crosses Hundreds of Rivers and Canyons in California.

The flume which conveys the water from the mountains to the reservoir at San Diego, Cal., is said, by those who know whereof they speak, to be the largest and longest thing of the kind in the world. It is thirty-five miles long and is composed almost wholly of redwood. In its course this monster flume crosses 315 streams and canyons on trestles, the longest of which is 2,700 feet and 85 feet high. In constructing this trestle 250,000 feet of boards and timbers were used. It is known as the Los Gochos trestle. The Sweetwater trestle, the second longest, is 1,200 feet long and 80 feet high. The timbers used in them were put together on the ground and raised to their present position by horse power.

Besides its many trestles this flume passes through eight tunnels, the longest of which is 2,100 feet in length. The tunnels are each six feet in size, with covered roofs.

Each mile of the flume required on an average 250,000 feet of lumber and timbers of all kinds, that used in constructing the waterway itself being of redwood, 2 inches thick.

Building a waterright has thirty-five miles long over fathomless chasms and through the hearts of mountains is a gigantic undertaking, which many believed could never be accomplished. The result has proved different.

FROM A SINGLE STONE.

Seven Wonderful Temples Carved From the Solid Rock.

Mayaliparam, India, is graced with seven of the most remarkable temples in the world, each of these unique places of worship having been fashioned from solid granite boulders. Some idea of their size may be gleaned from the fact that the smallest of the seven is 24 feet high, 17 feet long and 12 feet wide, and is divided into upper and lower stories. Travelers who have carefully examined these relics say that it must have taken centuries of labor with crude tools of ancient times to carve these graceful edifices from the native rock. The architectural features alone are perfect and the work well executed, the carved minarets so suggestive of their being equal to the finest work done by the skilled stone cutter of to-day. The "Seven Gods-City," the largest of the seven, is three stories high, its outlines resembling those of an Atlantic steamship. The inside of the boulder has been chiseled away until the walls do not exceed eight inches in thickness. The floors above the first of the foundation are each about a foot in thickness, and seven in all as the floor of Agra. The upper stories are reached by a spacious flight, carved from the same piece of granite that the temple itself is fashioned from, which is an architectural triumph that would puzzle the finest workman on the world's fair buildings to duplicate. The second largest of these single-stone temples has a portico 11 feet wide and 17 feet long, ornamented with four crouching lions and two elephants, all carved from the same boulder, which goes to make up the main building.

COL. CLARKE AT REST.

HE WAS A FRIEND OF THE UNFORTUNATE.

Public Slope Commodifying Gang Caught Him, Harrison Ready to Assassinate—Great Treatment of an Indiana Manufacturer—Memory Perpetuated in Bronze.

HIS WORK IS AT an End.

COL. CHARLES W. CLARKE, the founder and director of the Pacific Garden Mission at Chicago, died Tuesday night at his home in Morgan Park. In early life Col. Clarke was extensively engaged in real estate and mining interests, and made and lost quite money. But for the last twenty years Col. Clarke had practically given his entire attention to self-sacrificing work among the neglected and criminal classes, for whom sacrifice and reform his whole amounted to almost a passion. His success and unstinting efforts have given him and his Pacific Garden Mission a national reputation, and his name is known throughout Europe and even remote countries. As if to indicate that time was in the ascendant, Mr. Harrison, ex-Col. Clarke's investments in mining in recent days, which he had long since forgotten all about, to his great surprise and pleasure, realized, and he considered himself once more rich. This increase his order in his work, and he drew on it liberally on his store until nearly all the five was gone. The expense of the mission averaged $5,000 or $6,000 a month, and the money that Col. Clarke was made to expend by $1,000 expended. One of the most noted philanthropists of Harrison died last night eight years ago. He probably will be remembered by the newspaper in the direction of the miscellaneous.

CLEVELAND HEARS THE NEWS.

BETHANY, W. Va., March 31. The announcement of the result of Chicago reached Cleveland at daybreak this morning. The hall hour after four o'clock had struck. "It is good," said ex-Senator Russell. "Excellent," exclaimed the ex-Treasurer. "Good news," said the congratulations ceased, and slowly the Cleveland men turned to their general refrain for a morning nap. Mr. Cleveland's friends will certainly be charged with dense insensibility if I were not permitted to be troubled by the new proof of the usefulness and trust of the great party of which I have the whole immediate claim my loyal obedience. I am confident that our fellow countrymen are ready to receive with approval the decision of the Democracy and cement itself myself of the belief that to secure that success it is only necessary to persistently and honestly adhere to the principles of origin, tolerance of opinion and judgment in Democratic conventions, so by to make elections were institutions, but it is hardly conceivable. In the case of the Democrats of our age, as in the country and the party that there should be anywhere among Democrats lack of harmonious and selfless effort in the campaign which opens before us. I have, therefore, no fear of the wife, and have, that nothing is my constant endeavor to deserve the confidence of my Democratic."

MRS. HARRISON AIDS IN WALK AWAY.

MRS. HARRISON continues daily to improve in health, so that at last her convalescence is no longer a matter of her illness dates back to April 1, it will naturally appear to be a long and perilous circumstance, require considerable time to bring back her health and strength. Mrs. Harrison is able not only to walk about the room, but to spend a portion of each day in the corridor of the private part of the White House, where she walks about or rests on a comfortable sofa where she can see the children at play, and so feel that life is not over, and that she can take part in the daily happenings of the family. President and Mrs. Harrison will leave July 1 for the Adirondacks, where they have taken a cottage at Loon Lake.

Counterfeiters Caught.

GIOVANNI ASSETTI and Paolo Vacano were arrested at San Francisco, Cal., on a charge of counterfeiting, and warrants are out for the arrest of two Americans and three more Italians on the same charge. Secret Service Agent Harris states that the band has been at work for the last twelve months and have manufactured a great amount of counterfeit money, nearly all of which has been distributed among various cities in the Southern states, Illinois, Oregon, Washington, and British Columbia. The gang is said to be one of the best in San Francisco alone over $15,000 in $1 and $5 bills are known to have been issued.

BREVITIES.

THE unveiling of the statue of Red Jacket, the famous Seneca chief, took place, Wednesday, in Forest Lawn Cemetery, Buffalo, N. Y. Upon the round pedestal of the pedestal is engraved: "Sa-ko-ye-wat-ha, the Keeper of the Place Where Sleepers Are Awake." In the left hand of the statue is held the tomahawk, medal presented to Red Jacket by Washington.

WITHIN a month a negro went to the house of George Wilson, at Colombia, Ind., and drove the women from the house, and was helping himself to anything Wilson arrived home. Wilson supposed he could shoot and took the negro to jail, and Wednesday night he broke up. Deputy Sheriff Smith refused to accept the offender and deployed a posse, man to arrest Wilson for carrying concealed weapons. Wilson fired upon the posse, in which Wilson was knocked down and brutally cut about the head. The citizens are indignant over the treatment Wilson received, and unable to find the fellow. The negro escaped.

AT Austin, Texas, the Ninth Congressional Judicial Convention has renominated James Reagan, by known for protection as Congressman.

AT Cobleskill, N. Y., Melvin Lewis, banker, shot and killed his daughter, Miss Ella Swart, and then shot himself to death.

NEAR Carlisle, S. D., a cyclone struck the town of Plankinton, demolishing twenty houses and injuring as many. Two or three were lost our serious injuries occurred.

EASTERN.

FIVE children, ranging from 12 to 18 years of age, were drowned in the Ohio River at Neville Island, twelve miles below Pittsburg. The children were in a buggy into the river to wash, in some manner the vehicle was overturned, and the children were thrown into the river. Two boys made heroic efforts to save their companions, but they were obliged to let them go, and before assistance could reach them they had all sunk beneath the waves.

EDWARD S. DAVIS, Secretary and Treasurer of the National Savings Bank of Buffalo since its inception, twenty-five years ago, and treated with its entire fiscal management, was put under arrest, charged with defalcation. The bank ex-officers Mr. Davis said he alone got at one place in Maine, and to the Board of Trustees he has confessed a defalcation of $50,000, which he says he can make good.

WORD has been received at Pottsville, Pa., that the Pottsville Water Company's big reservoir, located on the mountain southwest of Pranklville, has started to break. Hundreds of residents of Port Carbon, Mt. Carbon, Port Carbon, and Palo Alto have abandoned their homes and properties and taken to the hills. Telegraph operators along the line near this date are prepared to sound the warning instantly and give notice of the approaching danger.

A FORTNIGHT ago, the son, F. M. Harter and B. M. Young, but who have numerous aliases, took up their quarters at Pittsburg, Pa. They advertised extensively and flooded the country with circular letters for men to take orders for books. All agents who responded were to pay $6 as a guarantee of good faith, and then they were entitled to work on a salary of $18 per month, as well as 10 per cent on sales. The advertising office brought many letters of inquiry. The office of the firm fell into the hands of a young man who laid the matter before the Superintendent of Police O'Mara, which resulted in the arrest of the parties.

WESTERN.

W. H. BAIN, a Lawrenceth, Kansas, farmer, in his stock and agricultural implements, has fallen, and he considered all his property and made an assignment to his brother, B. M. Bain, Saturday, and has disappeared. His liabilities are not large and seem small, the exact figures being undetermable.

THE 7-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Jamnowski, of Winona, Minn., was burned to death Wednesday morning, was found Friday at the home of Peter McLaughlin, three miles away. When found she was very weak and unconscious, and in the meantime she had spent Wednesday night, during the terrible rain and hail storm, in the grass of the field along the road.

A CYCLONE struck Ashland, Broadway and Newberry electric street car line Monday night, and blew a car off the road running. Five hundred men are out cleaning the road. A company has charge of several men, and the strike is practically off. The company gives the directors and made known the demands of the men, which were refused to consider.

A DISCUSSION has arisen in the Minnehaha, Ind., Christian Church, which continued in the pastorate of six months, two, two of whom were deacons. The trouble grew out of the election of a certain member of the church to the office of deacon. The church was a prosperous one, and the members are all of the most worthy and influential citizens in the county. A large number have called for letters.

CARDONIA, Ind., was shaken up by the explosion of a dynamite cartridge. Mrs. Jesse Jones, of the village, lost her husband, secured the cartridge and placed it under the house. She supposed her husband to be in, but he was not, and he was in the saloon. A Hancock's residence, Mr. Harwick, and his wife, and two children were shaken up but not seriously injured. The building is a total wreck. Mrs. Jones was injured by the explosion of the cartridge.

LYMON BLAINE, second son of James G. Blaine, died suddenly at Chicago, Saturday noon, of bloodpoisoning, following a carbuncle on the neck. He had been officially ill but a few hours, and his death was unexpected. It is believed that the original trouble resulted from a carbuncle on the back of his neck. Blaine, after repeated efforts to reach Washington, arrived at Chicago Tuesday night, and was met by his brother, James G. Blaine, Jr., and Mr. Hamlin, of Maine, and the Rev. C. of Trustees he has contributed a fund of $50,000, which he says he can make good.
